Dewey Bars Grain Deals By Officials

Inflation Program Calls for Economy, Debt-Cut, Fostering 'Free' Production

Has No 'Trick' Remedy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

San Francisco, Calif., Sept. 25.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tonight promised to end speculation in grain by all "high or low" on the Federal payroll as part of a six-point program to lick inflation.

Dewey hit at speculation in the commodity markets in the home territory of Edwin W. Pauley, friend of President Truman and former Democratic and Administration bigwig.

The Republican nominee did not mention any official by name, but commodity operations of Pauley, Dr. Wallace Graham, White House physician, and others figured in a congressional investigation early this year.

Here Dewey again took the side of the Eightieth Congress against the President, contending there are no "trick" remedies for inflation without turning to "totalitarian" controls.

Instead, he recommended the orthodox spending checks, largely championed by the Republican Congress, and added grain speculation curbs to the list.

"I promise you that in your next National Administration there will be no place, high or low, for anyone who will speculate on grain—or any other commodity—at the price of human misery," he told a rally in San Francisco's Municipal Stadium.

Once again, Dewey used the indirect method of needling Truman. He said the Administration wasn't "wholly" to blame for high prices, then aimed a hard left at those who "play politics with human misery."

He said there are "signs" that inflation is losing momentum but promised to further check it without "police state" methods. He said he would:

1. Install in Washington "an administration of honest and able men."

No "Unnecessary" Spending

2. Eliminate every dollar of "unnecessary" Government spending.

3. Systematically pay off the national debt.

4. Pick men for office "whose first interest is not self-interest; whose first aim is not to help themselves.

5. Stimulate ever more production by vigorous support of "our American system of free opportunity."

Criss-crossing over President Truman's still warm trail, Governor Dewey continued his bush-beating personal appearance campaign through California.

He stopped first at Bakersfield, where Gov. Earl Warren once

Sox, Indians Win, Remain Tied; Irish on Top, 28-27

On the baseball front yesterday, the triple tie for first place in the American League was dissolved, temporarily anyway, as Boston trounced New York to remain in first place with Cleveland, 9-3 victors over Detroit.

The Boston Braves, on the threshold of the National League championship, couldn't quite sew it up, dropping a 3-2 contest to the Giants.

Notre Dame's unbeaten football record was in constant jeopardy, but the Irish finally pulled through, trimming Purdue, 28-27, in a top thriller. California, as expected, trounced Navy, 21-7, at Baltimore.

George Washington turned in a surprise by bopping Virginia Tech, 13-0, while Georgetown lost its opener, 17 to 7, to Holy Cross.

Mighty Texas, rated one of the Nation's powerhouses, was dealt a 34-7 trouncing by North Carolina. Other scores:

The Gallup Poll

Truman Leading in Minnesota

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 25.—Poll reports completed for three new States show President Truman ahead in one and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey leading in the other two.

The Truman State is Minnesota, which went Democratic in the last four presidential elections. Today it gives the Truman ticket a lead of 5 percentage points over the Dewey ticket.

The other two States are Massachusetts and Indiana, where Governor Dewey's lead is substantial at the present time. The figures are:

Democrats See Uphill Fight In Maryland

State Still Rated 'Doubtful' but GOP Leads in Confidence

(First of two articles on the Maryland political situation.)

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Maryland still rates as a "doubtful" State in November's presidential elections.

Most of the doubts are held by Democrats. They see President Truman having an uphill fight to win.

Republicans are sure their candidate, Thomas E. Dewey, Governor of New York, will carry the State.

Dewey trailed the late President Roosevelt in 1944 by only 22,541 votes with a total vote cast for the two major party presidential tickets of 608,439.

Republicans say Dewey could have beaten Roosevelt in Maryland in a postwar election. They say he will defeat Truman.

Some Democrats—high in their party in the State but not the top men—say Dewey will win in Maryland. They won't be quoted on it.

Top Democratic leaders say Truman will win.

A factor whose importance is still undetermined is the States rights campaign. Maryland States righters feel the Free State is primarily a Southern State. How big a show they will make depends on whether their candidates, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi get on the ballot.

They are not on the ballot now. They have been kept off the ballot to date by application of a Maryland law which fixes a deadline 15 days before the May primary for a political party to qualify by petition for a place on the ballot. Maryland Dixiecrats expect to take the issue to court shortly.

If the Dixiecrats do get on the ballot in Maryland, their leaders expect a sizable vote for Thurmond and Wright both in Baltimore and in the counties of Southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore. That expectation is shared

President In Texas for 3-Day Tour

Alleges GOP Aims To Revamp Power Laws to Aid Utilities; Sees Garner Today

Truman Speeches Please

WHISTLE STOP crowds like Mr. Truman's off-the-cuff speeches, Edward T. Folliard explains on Page 3, Section II.

Says Rival Will Go Along

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Van Horn, Tex., Aboard Presidential Special, Sept. 25. President Truman moved into Texas for a three-day barnstorming tour today, the first Democratic nominee who has ever found it necessary to court the Lone Star State.

In a speech this morning at El Paso, within sight of the mountains of Mexico, across the Rio Grande, Mr. Truman charged that the Republicans wanted to rewrite the Federal power laws so as to aid the "hijackers" of the power monopolies. He quoted a GOP leader on Capitol Hill—Representative George A. Dondero of Michigan—as saying that he had "every reason to believe" that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey would go along with such a policy.

Explains GOP Motives

"The Republicans don't like to see cheap public power," the Chief Executive said, "because it means that the big power monopolies cannot get their rake-off at the expense of the public."

Mr. Truman, who is to have breakfast Sunday with former Vice President John N. (Cactus Jack) Garner in Uvalde, probably will carry Texas in spite of the Dixiecrat insurrection. At least, that is what the El Paso Herald-Post said today.

The editorial said Texans were enjoying thoroughly "the pleasant courtship of Candidate Truman, so different from the methods of the past when the Democratic presidential candidates, caveman style, whacked Miss Texas over the head with a club and dragged her by the hair into the fold."

Alamo Battle Recalled

It expressed admiration for Mr. Truman's gallant fight in the Nation, and added: "But somehow, when we think of Harry Truman's battle, we remember the Alamo." (In the battle of the Alamo, 182 Texans withstood the attack of 5000 Mexican regulars in 1836. However, when the Alamo fell, not one of the defenders remained to tell of the siege.)

Here in Texas, the Chief Executive was in Dixiecrat territory for the first time. As a result of his civil rights program and fight on Jim Crowism, the State is torn by the worst dissension it has known since religious prejudice flared up against Alfred E. Smith in 1928 and its 23 electoral votes went to Herbert Hoover.

Mr. Garner, who has shunned politics since he broke with Franklin D. Roosevelt on the third-term issue, was a good friend of Mr. Truman in the Capitol Hill days. The simple fact that he will break bread with him Sunday at Uvalde is expected to be an enormous help to the Truman-Barkley ticket.

'Tales of the South Pacific'

Washington Post to Feature Prize Novel as Tabloid Serial

"Tales of the South Pacific," 1948 Pulitzer Prize winning novel, will be made available in serial form to The Washington Post readers, in a series of special tabloid sections starting Sunday, October 3.

MICHENER

The book tells the story of Americans in the war on Japan — how they lived and fought on faraway tropic isles. The author, James A. Michener, acquired background as aviation maintenance officer and as a naval historian in the Solomons, the New Hebrides and in other famous fighting locales.

Using as his setting coconut palms, coral reefs and jungles, he penned these realistic narratives of love, danger and sudden death, with service people and island inhabitants as central characters. A Marine lieutenant, a colorful Tonkinese woman and a Navy carrier pilot are among those in featured roles.

To expose Michener to the Pacific war was a sure way of producing a book. He had visited 45 States before he was 20, carrying an insatiable love for hearing other peoples' stories and then elaborating on them. After college he studied in eight European countries, then sailed the Mediterranean as a British merchant seaman. He returned to teach at Harvard. He "waived" his Quaker principles to enlist when the war began.

The book will appear in The Washington Post in consecutive Sunday installments.

Thoughts of Family Helped Custer Battle Wilderness

The Pas, Manitoba, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Capt. Benjamin Scott Custer, of Chevy Chase, Md., said the thought of his wife and four children helped him survive 13 days in the Canadian wilderness with four others after their plane was forced down by bad weather.

"Every step I took was one step nearer to my four children," Custer said in describing the ordeal. Custer and the others were returned to civilization here today aboard a Royal Canadian Air Force Canso flying boat after being sighted yesterday—in the largest aerial search in Canadian history. Their Beechcraft plane was forced down during a flight from Churchill to The Pas on September 12.

They were returning from Churchill after making a tour of Hudson Bay aboard two Canadian destroyers.

Armed with only 100 rounds of ammunition and the skill of Sergt. To Trim Off 'Fat'

Knives Sharpened for Slash Of 8.5 Million in Budget Pleas

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

District government budget officials were sharpening their knives yesterday preparing to slice $8,500,000 off the departmental budget requests for 1950—and they think it can be done.

If they succeed, and if a sales tax is passed there probably will be enough money left to provide a belated pay raise to the District's 18,000 employes.

Here's how they arrived at the $8,500,000 figure:

1. The departmental budget requests total $110,188,648 or almost $10,500,000 more than the current year's appropriations.

2. The cost of a pay raise is estimated at $5,500,000 a year. This means that the total budget, including a pay raise, is 16 million dollars out of balance.

3. A 2 per cent sales tax is expected to yield $7,500,000 the first year. Deducting this amount from the 16 million dollars leaves $8,500,000 which must be trimmed away.

"There's enough fat" in the budget requests to make such action possible, a budget department official told The Washington Post.

The question of whether a sales tax will pass on Capitol Hill is a horse of a different color. Last year it bounced through the House of Representatives by a vote of nearly 2 to 1, only to die in the

1 Worker Out of 3 Here Made $5000 or More Last Year

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

One of every three workers in the Washington Metropolitan District had an income $5000 or more last year.

The average man in government drew annual pay of $3200 against $2600 for the man in private enterprise.

"The Government Girl" averaged almost twice as much money as the girl in private enterprise—$2400 against $1300 a year.

District dwellers made less, on the average, than suburban families, and suburban families owned a larger percentage of their homes than District residents.

These and other characteristics of the Washington Metropolitan District resident were revealed yesterday by the Census Bureau, which last February and March sampled the population of the Metropolitan District to find its lowest income group.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission asked for the survey, results of which it plans to use in slum clearance planning.

The survey, based on 1947 figures, shows that the average Washington area resident worked for the Government, made $2300 per year if he lived alone, and $4200 if he lived in a family where one or more persons brought home the bacon.

Families with earnings from the armed forces had the highest average income—$5400—followed by those with income from both civilian government and private enterprise—$5200.

The Metropolitan District covered by the Census Bureau survey was defined in 1940 and falls short of the Greater Washington area. It includes only two voting districts in Fairfax County, four in Montgomery County, and 13 in Prince Georges County, as well as Washington, Alexandria and Arlington County, Va.

Fairfax County voting districts are Providence and Falls Church; in Montgomery the districts are Potomac 10, Rockville 4, Bethesda 7 and Wheaton 13; and in Prince Georges County, Districts 1, 2, 6, 10, 12, 13, 14 and 16 through 21

Rocket Plane Far Exceeds Sound's Speed

At Least 860 MPH Estimated on Basis Of Symington Data

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—The Air Force disclosed officially for the first time today that the X-1 rocket plane has flown "hundreds of miles faster than the speed of sound."

This indication of the speed attained by the experimental plane came from Air Secretary W. Stuart Symington.

On the basis of Symington's cryptic reference, the X-1 apparently has flown at least 860 miles an hour. Some unofficial estimates have placed the speed attained by the rocket ship above the 1000-mile mile-an-hour mark.

Symington also mentioned the "day the new jet bomber ran away from some jet fighters." Symington did not say what planes were involved nor when the test occurred. However, this showed the USAF now has a jet bomber flying faster than 580 miles an hour, a speed which all present operational jet fighters can attain.

The Air Force still has wrapped in close security the details of the X-1 flights

After announcement of the supersonic speeds obtained over Muroc Dry Lake in California, it was learned the Air Force had plans to send the X-1 hurtling toward 1700 miles an hour in tests up to 80,000 feet—about 15 miles up. This height would be the highest man ever attained.

Honors Stack, Hoover

John Stack, scientist who pioneered development of supersonic research planes, and Herbert H. Hoover, supersonic test pilot, last night received Air Force Association awards for their work in the field of faster-than-sound flight.

Stack is assistant chief of research for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics at Langley Field, Va. Hoover is chief test pilot at Langley.

Important Northern City

Chinese Are Stunned at News Of Tsinan's Fall to Reds

Nanking, Sept. 25 (AP).—A stunned and frightened China learned officially today that Tsinan, one of its most important northern cities, had been overwhelmed by a surging Communist force bent on wresting all of North China from the government.

Fall of the Shantung Province capital was announced in a delayed communique. The communique said 130,000 Red assault troops took the industrial city of 500,000 at dawn Friday after bloody fighting in the streets and from house to house.

It was predicted the Communist forces, variously estimated at 220,000 to 330,000, would strike next at Suchow, 170 miles south of Tsinan. It is a major government base and the last important city barring the route to the Yangtze.

Pressure also was expected to increase on Tsingtao, only large center in government hands in Shantung.

Most observers doubted the Communists would directly assault Tsingtao, however, because of the large United States naval base there.

A hint as to the seriousness of the situation in China came with the announcement that the high command held an emergency conference to study the Communists' next move.

The government was reluctant to admit the defeat in the north, knowing that the loss of Tsinan would shake the Chiang Kai-shek regime to its foundation. Government sources and newspapers cushioned the blow by playing up

Vishinsky Calls for Ban on Atom Bomb; Accuses Americans Of Planning Attack

Paris, Sept. 25 (AP).—Russia's fiery Andrei Y. Vishinsky today urged the five great powers to scrap a third of their land, sea and air forces and demanded a ban on the atomic bomb.

The Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister told the United Nations General Assembly in a rapid-fire, five-minute speech that a group of leaders in the western bloc are mapping an atomic war against Russia. He blasted the United States as leading a "wide armaments race" and seeking to dominate the world.

Western power delegates, particularly those of the United States, tagged his speech "old stuff." British Minister of State Hector McNeil called it "warmed-over hash."

Attacks Forrestal

For the second straight year the former Soviet prosecutor singled out Defense Secretary James V. Forrestal in his vehement attack against the West. He said Forrestal is a leader in the group of men laying "flashily colored plans" for using the atomic bomb to destroy such Soviet cities as Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, Kharkov and Odessa.

The general feeling of delegates was that Vishinsky's policy speech to the 58-nation Assembly was merely a warmed-over version of the arms limitation demand put forward in the 1946 Assembly by Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and Vishinsky's own attack of last year on what he called warmongers.

"We feel keen disappointment that Vishinsky failed to meet Secretary of State Marshall's calm conciliatory address of last Thursday," an American official said. "His address was essentially an attack on the U. N. program over the past two years. We didn't hear a single word favorable to the U. N.

Schuman Approved

[French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman was the only leading western official to show any enthusiasm for the Vishinsky resolution, which he described as "sensational," the United Press reported.

[Schuman said the General Assembly should get to work as soon as possible on technical discussions of the disarmament proposal.]

The United States delegation later issued a statement welcoming Vishinsky's emphasis on arms limitation and offering to proceed toward implementing such a program within the U. N. machinery.

"The United States Government will give willing and careful study," the statement said, "to any proposal for regulation of armaments which complies with the

Alaska Line to Fly Emergency Food From Seattle

Anchorage, Alaska, Sept. 25 (AP). Jim Wooten, president of Alaska Airlines, said today that emergency food flights from Seattle will take priority over the Berlin supply run for his line's planes.

He said the airline is calling all but one of its fleet of transports home from Europe to prepare for an aerial "corridor" to relieve Alaska shortages which have resulted from the West Coast maritime strike.

"We are ready to carry 100,000 pounds of freight daily," Wooten said. "If necessary, the load can be stepped up to 148,000."

Broadcast Reveals Moscow's Version Of Negotiations; Differences Stated

(From Press Dispatch)

Moscow, Sept. 26 (Sunday). A Soviet demand for full control of all Berlin transport—including air—was revealed early today as the reason why four-power negotiations over Berlin were stalemated.

The Soviet demand, announced in an "authorized" statement in Tass, the official Russian news agency, was accompanied by the Kremlin's version of the lengthy Moscow and Berlin talks.

Tass said that it was now up to the western powers whether a four-power agreement on Berlin can be attained or whether the talks are broken off.

(Apparently the Tass statement was related to yesterday's Russian reply to Wednesday's western power notes, which were reported in Paris to have made concrete proposals for settlement of differences over Berlin.

(The Russian demand for control of all Berlin transport including air obviously was the main point at issue although the Tass statement listed other points and stated the Soviet position on them.

(Soviet insistence on complete transport control probably would continue to block any settlement since the western powers could not agree without putting Berlin entirely at the mercy of the Russians. The western position has always been that control of all Berlin functions is a four-power matter, as agreed at Potsdam.

(The Russians originally gave their reason for suspension of rail transport in and out of Berlin as "technical difficulties" of the railroad.)

The statement said an agreement had been reached at Moscow by the four powers to settle the affair; that the matter was referred to the four commanders in Berlin for implimentation and that negotiations were broken off when the three western powers stepped in and took the differences of the four commanders to the Kremlin "for joint examination with the USSR."

The Tass statement said three issues had stood between the four powers and settlement of the Berlin situation. According to Tass, these were:

1. Soviet insistence on Russian control of all transport in and out of Berlin.

2. Soviet fear that the four-power financial commission set up for Berlin would "intervene in regulation of money circulation in the Soviet zone as a whole."

3. Four-power control over Berlin's trade with the western zones and third countries. Tass said the Soviet "expressed consent" to the wish of the western governments for such four-power control.

(In Washington, a high State Department source declined to make any immediate statement on

Red-Gaullist Brawls Mar Queuille Plea

Paris, Sept. 25 (AP).—Communists and Rightist followers of General Charles de Gaulle tangled in fist fights tonight while Premier Henri Queuille broadcast an appeal against strikes periling his wobbly cabinet.

Communist labor leaders had just called for more strikes to enforce demands for wage increases of 36 per cent and, eventually, a new government.

Communists broke into a hall where De Gaulle's party scheduled a meeting with Jacques Soustelle, a leading De Gaullist, as speaker.

At least 40 persons were injured as Communists fought the rightists with broken bottles, smashed furniture, fists, wooden clubs and iron bars. Nearly 1000 police came to restore order and chase the Communists. The meeting proceeded among the wreckage, while ambulances took away about 10 of the most badly hurt.

Communist labor leaders threatened to tie up the coal mines in an unlimited general strike October 1. They said they already had 100,000 men on strike in various

Chiang, China's Outstanding Leader, 64, Little Understood Through World

It's been 20 years since Gen. Chiang Kai-shek emerged from obscurity to become China's strongman and leader. For two decades he's been the outstanding man of China's 400 million people. Yet, today, the generalissimo is still little known both inside and outside his vast country and even less understood.

The generalissimo is a great figure whose high place is assured in history. But how identify him?

He has been called the unifier of his vast country; yet today civil war still rages in China.

He has been called the scourge of Communism in his unhappy land; yet the Communists appear stronger than ever.

He has been called a great liberator and champion of democracy; yet Chiang is the boss—of the army, of the party, of the government.

What is known of Chiang's career is similarly a crazy quilt of contradictions.

Born to wealth and married to riches, he has lived an austere life, abstaining from liquor and tobacco. He studied in Japan, later appeased Japan, and finally fought Japan to the finish. He trained in Russia, fought alongside the Chinese Communist armies, then turned on them with fanatical fury.

He was accused of expending the greater part of his military strength against the Chinese Communists rather than against the Japs. But in seven years' war he never accepted bids for peace even when the Japs had captured his capital, his major cities, practically all of his railroads, shipping lines and coastal industries.

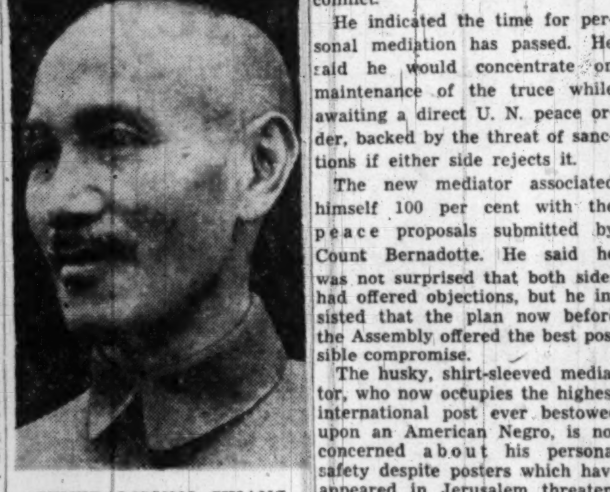
The thin, wiry generalissimo was born 64 years ago at Fenghua, Fukien Province, Chiang was still a youngster when his father died and he came under the influence of his mother, who instilled in him a puritanical sense of duty and discipline.

Chiang was married at 15, attended China's West Point, studied in Japan, and there joined the revolutionary movement of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, founder of the Republic.

Dr. Sun died in 1924 and in the ensuing struggle for succession Chiang rose to military power, but only temporarily. In 1927, Chiang met and married the second woman to influence his life, attractive, American-educated Soong Mei-ling. (Just what happened to his first wife is not clear.)

Mei-ling had brains to go with her beauty. Her brothers, the Soongs, were rich and powerful; her sister was the widow of Dr. Sun. It was perhaps inevitable that such a combination, the rough but wily soldier and the charming but clever wife, should boost Chiang into Dr. Sun's empty saddle in 1928.

It's been said that Chiang Kai-shek's most important attribute is his stubbornness in the face of disaster. So it proved in the years since he assumed leadership of Nationalist China. He rode roughshod over all opposition—military, political or otherwise, and today sits, though sick and ailing, more firmly than ever in the saddle, with Mei-ling, as always, by his side.



GENERALISSIMO CHIANG
Misunderstood?

The two, together, survived their most decisive crisis in December of 1936. Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, the generalissimo's second in command, shot down Chiang Kai-shek's personal bodyguard and took Chiang prisoner. For 13 days Chiang's life hung in balance. Madame Kai-shek flew to her husband's prison to live or die with him. She helped effect Chiang's release. Just what happened has never been fully explained, but whatever, Chiang stiffened his attitude toward Japs and began uniting his countrymen for the conflict which began seven months later.

Three years after Chiang wed Mei-ling, he became a convert to Christianity, and like her, sought inner peace in Methodism. Prayer and reading of the Bible is said to be a fixed part of their daily lives.

Even as they pray, civil war is with them, and new disaster imminent.

Tsinan's Fall Stuns China

claims that the victory cost the Reds 50,000 casualties.

Responsibility for the costly loss appeared to rest on Chiang, himself, although government sources sought to put the blame on turncoat Gen. Wu Hua-wen, who deserted Tsinan with his troops and went into the Communist camp.

Political repercussions were quick to follow the issuance of the communique.

Shantung Legislator Fu Su-nien cried that now "North China and South China are two separate countries.

National forces are all but driven out of Manchuria, and now must seek to stop the Communists from overrunning the whole country.

The American Embassy tonight said it had no word from the eight American missionaries in Tsinan. Likewise, the government did not mention the fate of Gov. Wang Yao-Wu, leader of Tsinan's defenses. Official sources, however, said he had been captured.

Bunche Hopes For Firm U. N. Peace Action

By Kenneth Bilby

Haifa, Sept. 25 (NYHT).—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting United Nations truce mediator, said today a favorable climate had been obtained for permanent settlement of the Arab and Jewish conflict.

In his first interview since the assassination of Count Folke Bernadotte, Dr. Bunche declared that "prompt and unqualified action by the General Assembly at this crucial stage can break up this grim conflict."

He indicated the time for personal mediation has passed. He said he would concentrate on maintenance of the truce while awaiting a direct U. N. peace order, backed by the threat of sanctions if either side rejects it.

The new mediator associated himself 100 per cent with the peace proposals submitted by Count Bernadotte. He said he was not surprised that both sides had offered objections, but he insisted that the plan now before the Assembly offered the best possible compromise.

The husky, shirt-sleeved mediator, who now occupies the highest international post ever bestowed upon an American Negro, is not concerned about his personal safety despite posters which have appeared in Jerusalem threatening him with the same fate as Count Bernadotte. He has not asked for police protection for himself or his staff.

He moves about freely between his temporary Haifa headquarters and the Zion Hotel, where he lives. Israeli military police constantly accompany him, but only because the Jewish government has insisted.

Epstein Urges Direct Jewish-Arab Dealing

By The Associated Press

Eliahu Epstein, Israeli minister, suggested yesterday the best way to settle the trouble in Palestine in for Jews and Arabs to get together directly and "win the peace."

Epstein, recently back from Israel, conferred 20 minutes with Undersecretary of State Lovett.

Epstein said he had told Lovett that "many of these new proposals (of Count Bernadotte) are at the expense of Israel." The United States already has indorsed Bernadotte's proposals.

New 'Arab Government' Acting in Palestine

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Ahmed Hilmy Pasha, premier of the newly announced "Arab government for all Palestine" informed the Arab Higher Committee today that his government is taking over all political and civil responsibilities in Arab areas of the Holy Land.

Hilmy Pasha said a new Palestine had been formed, and its temporary capital would be a Gaza. Later, the capital will be moved to Jerusalem, which will become the capital of Arab Palestine, he declared.

Peron Cabinet Strengthened

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Sept. 25 (AP).—President Juan Peron moved to strengthen his cabinet today 24 hours after police had announced uncovering of a plot to assassinate him and his wife and overthrow the government.

The President accepted the resignation of the Navy Minister, Rear Admiral Fidel Anadon, one of his top-ranking advisors. In the absence of Foreign Minister Juan Bramuglia at the U. N. Assembly in Paris, Anadon also has been acting Foreign Minister.

In his place, Peron appointed Enrique Garcia, 56, only full admiral in the Argentine navy.

Although sources close to the retiring Navy Minister said the resignation was the result of a misunderstanding with the President, Anadon publicly denied the incident was connected with the investigation of the alleged assassination plot. He reiterated friendship for the President and support of his government.

Informed sources said Anadon may have stepped down because two of the 17 persons arrested in Argentina in connection with the alleged plot are Navy chaplains.

Buenos Aires was quiet today after hearing Peron personally denounce John Griffith, former United States cultural attache at the United States Embassy, as instigator of the assassination plot allegedly set for Columbus Day, October 12.

The pro-Peron General Confederation of Labor strike to permit hour general strike to permit workers to hear Peron.

Seventy-five persons were injured in the tumultous demonstration in which crowds shouted anti-American slogans before the United States Embassy.

The Communist newspaper La Hora joined the government press in blaming the alleged plot on "Yankee imperialists." All those arrested are Argentines, most of them members of the once-strong Labor Party which formerly supported Peron.

Czechs Point Spy Hunt at U. S. Embassy

Prague, Sept. 25 (AP).—Czechoslovakia was in the grip of a vast spy hunt tonight.

Officials hinted that the trail of plots to overthrow the Communist government and blow up public buildings led to the United States Embassy.

The American Army Counter Intelligence Corps stationed in Germany was named as the principal villain by the Czechs. Eight persons described as CIC agents sent back to work in Czechoslovakia have been arrested during the week. Fifty persons accused of aiding them also have been seized.

The American Embassy never has been named outright. But police at Usti-on-the-Elbe, in announcing today the arrest of Josef Koch, said he confessed that he had conferred with "an official of foreign nationality" in that offical's embassy building. Police added that a Czech employe of the "mentioned" embassy was among those arrested.

(In Frankfurt, Germany, a U. S. Army spokesman said Czechoslovakia's spying charges against American Army counter intelligence agents in Germany were "made out of the whole cloth.")

The accusations are a mixture of attacks on the CIC, British intelligence agents, the fugitive Gen. Lev Prchala and Dr. Vladimir Krajina, former general secretary of the National Socialist Party now in London.

Three related purges are being conducted.

One is in the gymnastic and cultural organization, Sokol, whose members are accused of ant-government demonstrations.

Another is of Czech professors and students accused of circulating anti-government pamphlets and of demonstrating.

A third is of police forces, with 4000 officers having been fired in Prague alone.

The Czechoslovak Press Bureau has listed the arrest of 84 groups accused of distributing Pamphlets, with 114 persons named, and has disclosed 75 persons were sentenced to from six months to nine years.

Princess Elizabeth Awaits Birth of Baby

London, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Princess Elizabeth will return to Buckingham Palace at the end of next week to awaist the birth of her baby, sources close to the royal family said today.

First reports said the birth was expected in mid-October; the latest put the date at mid-November. None of the reports was confirmed officially.

U. S.-Owned Oil Firm Run By Hungary

Budapest, Hungary, Sept. 25 (U.P.). The government announced that beginning today the state will take over management of the United States-owned Hungarian-American Oil Co. to prevent sabotage and to assure undisturbed production.

The firm, the property of Standard Oil of New Jersey, has escaped nationalization so far because it was wholly foreign-owned. Observers predicted that today's decree is probably the first step toward state ownership.

Nothing was said about remuneration.

Six top officials of the company, including two Americans, Paul Ruedemann, Hartsdale, N. Y., and George Bannantine, St. Louis, Mo., were arrested last week for "industrial sabotage."

industries throughout the nation. In addition a 24-hour utility strike throughout the country was threatened for October 1.

The increased labor pressure came just after Queuille had managed to survive a bitter legislative quarrel over when to hold local elections. The National Assembly voted 299 to 274 to postpone the elections from next month until next March, thus apparently ending the complex series of actions in which the Assembly repeatedly reversed itself.

Soviet Reported to Demand End of Finnish Rifle Clubs

Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 25 (AP).—The Communist press said today the Soviet Union had demanded dissolution of Finnish rifle clubs allegedly made up of former members of the outlawed Home Guard.

A Finnish Foreign Office spokesman denied a formal protest had been entered, but said Lieut. Gen. A. Savonenkov, the Soviet Minister in Helsinki, had made inquiries about the clubs of Foreign Minister Carl Enckell.

The leftest newspapers said the Soviet note charged the former members of the Home Guard had been engaging in target practice in violation of Finland's peace treaty.

The Home Guard was formed during the civil war with Communists in 1918, and was dissolved after the last war as a semi-Fascist organization.

The Socialist government of Premier Karl Fagerholm, formed in July, has been attacked in the Soviet press as being made up of elements which led Finland into war against Russia in 1939, and who now wants to push Finland into the camp of the western powers.

The new government was formed after elections in July in which the Communists suffered heavy losses. The elections were held after Russia and Finland signed a treaty of friendship and mutual aid requested by the Soviet Union.

Soviet Demands Transport Control

the United States position, but it was expected that since the Russians had released their version of the Moscow and Berlin negotiations, the three western powers would shortly follow suit.)

The Russians blockaded Berlin late in June after the western powers introduced their own currency in western Berlin to combat inflation and the black market.

When Russia insisted that only Russian-sponsored currency be allowed to circulate in Berlin, the Allies refused and the Soviets blocked the land routes to the city—which lies deep in the Russian zone. The western powers have been supplying the city by air since.

Western diplomats have been conferring for weeks in Moscow with Foreign Minister Molotov and, twice with Premier Stalin, about the blockade. The talks shifted to Berlin last month where the four military governors failed to reach an agreement. Russia replied yesterday to notes from the western powers, dispatched earlier this week, asking whether there could be an agreement, covering the currency dispute and the blockade. The contents of the reply have not been divulged.

Currency Plan Blamed

Tass did not say who authorized its statement.

The agency asserted, however, the Berlin situation was "brought about by separate actions of the western powers" and means that the three governments are "not content with their absolute rule in the western zones of Germany but desire to rule monetary matters in the Soviet zone."

The statement contended this would "disorganize the economy of the eastern zone and eventually dislodge the U.S.S.R. from there."

The Russians during the blockade have spoken of Berlin as a Soviet zone (rather than a four-power) city. It was on this contention that they insisted that only Russian-sponsored marks be allowed to circulate there.

Tass, blaming the western power currency plan for the Berlin blockade, said in its statement:

"This compelled the Soviet command to take steps for restricting transport communication between Berlin and the western zones of Germany in order to safeguard the interests of the German population and protect the economic life of the Soviet zone against disorganization."

Agreements Listed

The Tass statement said that as a result of August negotiations in the Kremlin, Russia, the United States, Britain and France reached an understanding that the following measures be carried out, provided the four military governors in Berlin agreed:

"First, recently introduced restrictions in transport and trade between Berlin and the western zones, as well as the movement of freight to and from Soviet zone would be lifted.

"Secondly, simultaneously with this, the German mark of the Soviet zone would be introduced as the only currency for Berlin while the western "B" mark would be withdrawn.

"At the same time, agreement was reached to the effect that introduction of the German mark of the Soviet zone as the only currency for Berlin, and a number of functions in regard to subsequent regulation of currency circulation in Berlin, be under quadripartite control."

The statement said the four commanders in Berlin accordingly were instructed to work out measures implementing the understanding achieved in Moscow. A continuation of negotiations on other issues was envisaged.

Tass said the negotiations among the four commanders were not completed because the governments of the United States, Britain and France referred the differences for a joint examination with the USSR in Moscow.

Tass continued:

"The above mentioned differences concern three issues, the Soviet government stand on these issues being as follows:

"1. The Soviet government insists on establishment of control by the Soviet command over transportation of commercial cargoes and passengers by air between Berlin and the western zones, similarly to transportation by rail, water and highway. Air routes cannot remain outside of control, since the four governments reached an understanding that agreement should envisage establishment of appropriate control over money circulation in Berlin and trade between Berlin and the western zones.

"2. The Soviet government believes it necessary strictly to adhere to the agreement reached by the four governments in Moscow concerning a quadripartite financial commission and its function with regard to financial measures connected with introduction of circulation of a single currency in Berlin. The Soviet government cannot agree to such extension of the functions of the financial commission as would result in the latter's intervention into regulation of money circulation in the Soviet zone as a whole.

"3. The Soviet government expressed consent to the view of the governments of the United States, Great Britain and France concerning establishment of quadripartite control over Berlin's trade with the western zones and third countries, including issuing of appropriate licenses thus removing differences which existed on this issue.

"All above said clearly shows the real attitude of the Soviet government on the subject of regulation of the situation in Berlin on a mutually acceptable basis. In these conditions it depends on the governments of the United States, Britain and France whether negotiations on the above subject will be disrupted or whether a satisfactory agreement will be reached by the USSR the United States, Britain and France."

It was not clear whether the Tass statement was the same as yesterday's Russian reply to the three-power note of Wednesday. Earlier, informed sources at Paris had said the Kremlin note was neither a "yes" nor a "no" to the specific proposals reported in the last-ditch western note.

The reported "maybe" answer is believed intended to serve two purposes: First to reject western overtures without saying so and second to appear ot keep negotiations going on in an attempt to throw responsibility for rupture on the West.

It was anticipated by all three governments on the basis of previous Soviet statements and on the basis of the uncompromising speech made to the General Assembly this morning by Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Soviet delegate.

Reds' Threat To Jam Airlift Proves Empty

Berlin, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Russia warned the United States and Britain today that Soviet planes would fly in formation near the crowded airlift corridors from western Germany, but American authorities said tonight that no such flights materialized.

Two hours after nightfull, American officials in Berlin said they had received no reports of any Soviet formation flying. United States Air Force quarters said earlier they believed the Soviet warning was just another move in the "war of nerves."

American officials filed a written protest, saying the scheduled formation flights would violate four-power air safety regulations.

Yesterday, the Russians announced "heavy antiaircraft practice in one of the western air corridors. One American pilot reported seeing what appeared to be flak, and another pilot said he saw a Russian plane strafing the ground. But today United States Air Force headquarters in Wiesbaden denied flatly that any flak was seen by airlift pilots who flew 4243 tons of supplies into Berlin yesterday.

The Air Force announcement contradicted some published reports.

State Department Aide Escapes Red Police in Austria

Vienna (Sunday), Sept. 26 (AP).—George W. Renchard of Detroit, a State Department employe, escaped early today from two Russian police.

He had been en route from an assignment in Holland to a post in Vienna when the Russians arrested him last night in Amstetten, in the Russian zone on the corridor road from the United States zone of Austria to Vienna. The Russians asserted his travel permit was out of date.

The incident was in a non-Russian district and United States authorities were able to free him.

Vishinsky Asks Arms Cut, U. N. Ban on Atomic Bomb

control plan of the (U. N.) Atomic Energy Commission or with the principles governing regulation of conventional armaments approved by a majority of the members of the Commission for Conventional Armaments."

Vishinsky called on the Assembly to set up "within the framework of the Security Council" an international cuntrol body to carry out reduction of armaments and armed forces of the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China. His proposed one third slash would be put into effect within one year.

Delegates immediately noted that the phrase "within the framework of the Security Council" would give Russia a veto on the control body's decisions. Russia previously proposed such an arrangement for an international atomic control commission and it was opposed by the other four great powers.

The nub of Vishinsky's proposals came at the very end of his speecl in these three plans:

1. The Assembly recommends to the Big Five, as the first step in the reduction of armaments and armed forces, to reduce by one third during one year all present land, sea and air forces.

2. The Assembly recommends prohibition of atomic weapons as weapons intended for the aims of aggression and not for those of defense.

3. The Assembly recommends establishment within the framework of the Security Council an international control body for the purpose of supervising and controlling the implementation of the measures for the reduction of armaments and armed forces and for the prohibition of atomic weapons.

Vishinsky said after months of debate U. N. efforts to control atomic energy and slash armaments have not moved one inch. He blamed this all on the western powers.

On the atomic issue, he said it was clear that the real reason for the attitude of the western powers "was that the United States deemed it necessary to retain the threat of the use of atomic weapons as a key factor in the cold war against Russia."

He said the United States plans to spend billions of dollars in the military budget in the next five years. He added sarcastically:

"This is the United States five-year plan, gentlemen."

The Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister criticized the five-power Brussels alliance as being "in direct contradiction with the interests of strengthening the peace and security of the peoples."

Slav delegates in the Assembly applauded when Vishinsky rapped the United States position on atomic energy and again when he said Russia will continue to stand guard for peace among nations.

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin was the only notable absentee. Marshall sat poker-faced throughout.

Britain and France, along with most of the small nations, still have not given their policy speeches and general debate will be resumed Monday. As soon as it ends the Assembly committees will begin work on the 59-item calendar.

Vishinsky said persons high in the governments of the United States, Britain, France and some other countries are heading the campaign of "malicious lies" against Russia. Besides Forrestal, he listed Ari Force Gen. George C. Kenney, Army Secretary Kenneth Royall, United States Senator H. Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) and several leading Britons.

He said these persons and in particular the members of the supreme command of the United States "come forward with flashily colored plans for utilizing the military aviation and the atomic bomb for the destruction of such Soviet cities as Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, Kharkov and Odessa."

"Thus," Vishinsky said, "Forrestal as minister of defense overstepped all limits when, speaking before the Armed Forces Senate Commission and insisting on increasing the Army and additional assignment of three billion dollars for war purposes, instigated for war against the U.S.S.R., calling for the creation of powerful air forces capable of inflicting incessant blows far beyond outer bases existing at present.

"Royall and Bridges and other adventurers spoke in the same manner, openly calling for attacking the oil fields in Batum and Baku, the Donetz Basin and the industrial regions beyond the Ural Mountains."

He attacked the U. N. Korean Commission, the U. N. Balkans Commission and the U. N. Little Assembly in familiar Russian blasts.

He generally passed over the controversial Palestine question, merely saying the Security Council had not fulfilled its duty, and that the Assembly's 1947 partition plan had not been carried out.

Truman Charges Dewey Will 'Go Along' With GOP Plan to Rewrite Power Laws

appearance, spoke from a flag-draped stand outside of the railroad station. On the platform with him was House Democratic leader Sam Rayburn, a long-time champion of public power, together with Texas' Gov. Beauford Jester and Attorney General Tom Clark. A crowd of 12,000, many of the men in ten-gallon hats cheered Mr. Truman as he excoriated the "do-nothing, good-for-nothing Eightieth Congress."

Mr. Truman documented his charges against the GOP by quoting from an article written by Representative Dondero which appeared in the magazine Public Utilities Fortnightly, September 9. Dondero is Chairman of the House Public Works Committee.

He quoted Dondero as making these statements: "We can stop the trend toward an increasing number of publicly owned power facilities. The Government should follow a policy of selling the power at the busbar, or at the dam, to all comers without favoritism or discrimination." Mr. Truman represented Dondero as saying that the present law, which lets the Government build transmission lines to get power to users at the lowest possible rate, "can and should be changed by the next Congress." He then read this direct quotation from the Dondero article: "We Republicans are divided on many issues, but on this one issue we are of one mind."

What it all meant, Mr. Truman said, was that the Republican leaders believe that the benefits of the low-cost power from Federal dams should go to "private utilities who will get the power cheap at the dam from the Government and sell it to you at a high profit." "The Republicans don't like to see cheap public power," he said, "because it means that the big power monopolies can't get their rake-off at the expense of the public."

Mr. Truman said at the outset that in 1933 the Democrats took reclamation "out of mothballs" and really did something about it. They did this, he added, because the American people had elected a President who "believed in the West." He said that more than 20 million dollars had been spent in the El Paso area on the Rio Grande reclamation projects, which meant the irrigation of 160,000 acres. He said the Republicans had consistently fought the program for the West. "That is why I have been amazed in this campaign to hear spokesmen of the Republican Party claim that they are friends of reclamation," he said. "The record proves they are not.

On the way Southeastward this morning, the 17-car special train made two stops in New Mexico. Former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson, now contesting for a Senate seat with Patrick J. Hurley, appeared on the rear platform with Mr. Truman at both places.

"I know you're going to elect Clinton Anderson for United States Senator," Mr. Truman told the crowds. New Mexico Democrats who boarded the train said that they thought Anderson was a sure winner over Hurley.

Sizable numbers of Indians were noted in both of the New Mexico crowds. A group of Apaches was led up to the rear platform at Deming, and Mr. Truman said: "Well, I'm happy that these real Americans are going to look after their own interests by voting the Democratic ticket."

He was presented with a tooled leather necktie and a handsome belt such as is awarded to rodeo winners.

popularity in Middle Western farm States may be on the increase and, second, the strength of the Democratic presidential ticket in Minnesota may have an important bearing on the Senate race in which Senator Joseph H. Ball, the incumbent Republican, is running for reelection against Hubert Humphrey, the Mayor of Minneapolis.

Today's report bring to 11 the number of States covered by the institute in its series on political sentiment in the individual States. All States will be covered.

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights party candidate, has been found leading in South Carolina, President Truman in Missouri and Minnesota, and Governor Dewey in the rest—New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, California, Wisconsin, Massachusetts and Indiana.

In the Nation as a whole, President Truman has been found gaining although Governor Dewey is still considerably ahead. Latest figures reported September 24 s'owed Dewey with 46½ per cent, Truman with 39 per cent, Wallace with 3½ per cent, Thurmond with 2 per cent, while 9 per cent are undecided in their choice of a candidate. Minor party candidates, including Norman Thomas, Socialist, poll a combined total of less than 1 per cent.

The Minnesota situation will be of interest to political observers because it indicates that the defection from the Democratic Party since 1944 has been much less marked there than in other States.

President Roosevelt carried Minnesota in 1944 by a margin of 52.8 per cent of the major party vote cast. On a comparable basis, with the undecided vote eliminated, Mr. Truman's percentage in today's poll would be 51 per cent in Minnesota, or a drop of less than 2 percentage points in Democratic presidential strength in the State since 1944.

The figures for the 11 States reported so far are given below:

| | Dewey | Truman | Wallace | Undec. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| New York | 42% | 32% | 14% | 12% |
| Pennsylvania | 53 | 37 | 3 | 7 |
| New Jersey | 50 | 38 | 3 | 9 |
| Mass. | 49 | 42 | 3 | 6 |
| Ohio | 50 | 38 | 3 | 9 |
| Indiana | 49 | 40 | 3 | 8 |
| Wisconsin | 51 | 38 | 3 | 8 |
| Minnesota | 42 | 47 | 4 | 7 |
| Missouri | 36 | 53 | — | 11 |
| California | 46 | 41 | 5 | 8 |

South Carolina figures are: Thurmond 52 per cent, Truman 26 per cent; Dewey 10 per cent, Wallace less than 1 per cent, and undecided 12 per cent.

by some regular Democratic leaders. They expect small Dixiecrat response if the party is not on the ballot.

Maryland Progressives are aiming for 10 per cent of the vote, but their major party opponents think the ticket of Henry A. Wallace and Glen Taylor will not materially affect the outcome. Progressive leaders count on pulling votes about equally from the two major parties, a conclusion shared by Democratic leaders but not by Republicans. Republicans believe it will be mostly Democratic votes that turn to Wallace.

Both CIO and AFL leaders believe the vote of organized labor will go primarily to President Truman.

The fight to carry the State is really a fight to carry a city—Baltimore. Dewey in 1944 won a majority in the counties, but it was more than offset by Roosevelt's vote in Baltimore. Dewey carried 15 of the 23 counties.

Taking the 23 counties as a unit, Dewey's vote in them was 180,132 to Roosevelt's 151,997, or a margin of 28,135. But in Baltimore, Roosevelt ran some 50,000 votes ahead of city was 163,493, and Dewey's was 112,817.

So the Republican fight this year is to build up their vote in Baltimore, while holding their ground or gaining some more in the counties.

Along the Eastern Shore, Republicans say they expect Dewey to carry their section, even though he swung but three of the nine counties there in 1944. There are Democrats to be found who agree that Truman won't beat Dewey on the Eastern Shore.

One factor that may help the Democrats, and they believe it will, is that both the State administration and Baltimore city administration and the two United States Senate seats are in Democratic hands. Democrats had the State administration in 1944, and Republicans had the city.

Democrats say it will help because they will have that many more campaign workers. Republicans say it doesn't matter because they have usually been up against the fact that Democrats were in control both of the State and the city.

Dewey Hits U.S. Workers' Grain Trading

worked as a newsboy. A crowd of about 5000 turned out at the station, somewhat fewer than greeted President Truman two days ago.

Dewey joked about the number of California cities that claim his running mate as a native and revived a gag he hadn't used since the Oregon primary.

This one was about the old man who walked up to him in Salem, Oreg., and said:

"Mr. Dewey, I've been wanting to vote for you ever since you licked them Spaniards."

But it was at Fresno, Calif., that Dewey first openly flouted Mr. Truman's bitter attack on the Republican Congress, and individual members of it.

Only two days ago, Mr. Truman told an audience in this district that Representative Bertrand W. Gearhart (R., Calif.), was a "terrible" Congressman.

By way of answer Dewey singled out Gearhart to present him to a GOP rally at a Fresno park. Dewey said he was "deeply honored" to be presented by "Bud" Gearhart, and called him a "nonpartisan" Congressman.

He again appealed for unity "regardless of party or view," and said:

"Far be it from me to be partisan."

Some 10,000 turned out for the Fresno rally.

As the train left Fresno, Dewey called Elliott V. Bell, his No. 1 adviser, back to his private car for a "conference." Instead, Bell walked in on his own birthday party. Governor and Mrs. Dewey presented him with a cake and Dewey's fine baritone led in singing "Happy Birthday to You." Bell was 46 today.

At Modesto, Calif., where 4000 turned out, Dewey took to the rear platform again. He gave them his unity speech, welcoming even Wallace supporters. "Maybe we'll convert them," he said. He made another unbooked speech on the unity theme to a smaller throng at Tracy, Calif.

Dewey resumed the "nonpartisan" line at San Francisco tonight. He said high prices "are not a political problem," and insisted:

"I want no part of any campaign which aims to make personal political profit out of the distress of our people."

Then he aimed another uppercut. Presenting what he said are the three principals causes of high prices, he said he did so to "strip this subject of . . . fraud and demagoguery" . . .

Dewey's "three causes" of inflation:

1. The terrific cost of the war in money and goods: "Every good American is proud of his share in the task."

2. Foreign-aid programs: Much of the initial 20 billions spent abroad "was wasted behind the iron curtain—much of it was squandered," but now we have a genuine by-party program that is "a sound investment in peace."

3. Administration policies: For years they have been "openly, avowedly, deliberately discouraging production and trying to raise prices" and the present Administration "cannot pass the blame to anyone else."

Tracing every war's aftermath of inflation, Dewey said the Administration had the choice after this one of gradually lifting controls until supply caught up with demand, or abolishing all controls.

Instead of doing either, he charged, the Administration fumbled, hesitated and finally followed the "Wallace thesis" that we are headed for an economic collapse.

The depression didn't come, Dewey said, because "our country is so great that it even can survive an Administration which goes on innocently dropping monkey wrenches into the machinery."

Va. Democrats Meet Briefly

Richmond, Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—The Democratic State central committee met and adjourned in 17 minutes today after instructing the chairman to open State headquarters, and directing that funds from the Jackson Day dinner be turned over to the treasurer to be used "in the interest of the Democratic Party."

The committee declined to hear State Senator Frank S. Richeson of Richmond, representing the States Rights Democrats, and Robert Whitehead of Nelson, a supporter of the Truman-Barkley ticket, on the ground that they were not members of the committee, and not entitled to the floor. The ruling was made by State Chairman G. Alvin Massenburg.

The only other action taken were the election of W. C. Thomas of Wythe, to succeed John D. Hooker, who resigned as an elector from the Fifth District, for the Truman-Barkley ticket, and approval of the appointments made by the State chairman.

These appointments include Mrs. William Page Williams, Brookneal, vice chairman; Jesse Dillon, Franklin County, secretary, and W. Tayloe Murphy, treasurer, of the State committee and members of the executive committee.

Austin Hits Republican 'Double Talk'

F. Byrne Austin of Takoma Park, Democratic candidate for Congress from Maryland's Sixth District, charged last night that the Republicans are disclaiming responsibility for high prices and trying "to play the city worker against the farmer."

Austin spoke at a picnic rally of more than 3000 Democrats on the Meadowbrook Recreation Center grounds at Chevy Chase, Montgomery County, Md. Bonfires and searchlights gave the meeting the air of an oldtime political rally.

Austin, the chief speaker, said citizens of his district "are convinced that the Republican eightieth Congress removed price controls for the profit of the few and at the expense of the many.

"They blame the city worker for higher prices when talking to the farmer," Austin said, "and they blame the farmer for high prices when they talk to the city worker.

Austin said the Republican National Committee was "in effect telling the wealthy that if they want to keep on having a Congress that will treat the rich as a specially privileged group they will have to pay for it," and was expecting them to contribute a portion of their savings through tax reductions.

Austin told the rally he was pledged to support the Democratic Party platform.

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, Democratic national committeewoman from Maryland, blamed the Republicans for higher prices and called on housewives to elect a Democratic Congress.

She said Henry Wallace was "griped because he wasn't nominated for the vice presidency in 1944," and had "assembled around him all the country's radicals."

Governor William Preston Lane, who filled an earlier engagement at Laurel, Md., arrived during the final phase of the rally. In a brief, informal talk, he declared himself a firm believer in the two-party system, citing France as an example of what multiplicity of parties can do in creating national strife.

The Governor also urged support for Austin.

At the mention of Wallace, the crowd booed.

Among other speakers were J. Ingram Medley, member of the Democratic State Central Committee for Montgomery County, Mrs. Anna Roach, prominent Democratic clubwoman, and Will Allen, who ran in the Democratic primaries for Congress last May against Austin and was defeated.

Wallace Hits Rivals' Stand on Race Bias

St. Louis, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party candidate for president, charged both Republicans and Democrats today with failing to make an honest effort to pass promised Federal laws to kill racial discrimination and "the Jim Crow system."

In a speech prepared for delivery at the party rally, he also accused Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, of assuring Southern Democrats that there was no serious intention of trying to carry out President Truman's civil rights program.

Wallace, whose speeches on racial issues recently led him into a series of hostile demonstrations in the South, put new emphasis on those issues as he moved into this border state. He flew here—into the home state of President Truman—from Cleveland on the third day of his 8500-mile campaign tour.

He coupled his declaration on racial rights with another charge the Republicans and Democrats had united into a "bipartisan machine" which gave the voters no clear choice this year.

He said the "Jim Crow system" in this country presented "dangerous contradictions" because it showed the United States betraying its ideals in the eyes of the rest of the world.

"Republicans and Democrats have both been lavish in their promises to tackle this issue with the forthright courage it demands," Wallace said. "Neither has made an honest effort to live up to those promises."

Thoughts of Family Kept Custer Going

for the training, experience and equipment he carried that "lessened the rigors of life in the wilderness."

Scalise said: "If I had any useful equipment with me it was because I was taking it back to turn in when I got my discharge." (Scalise was scheduled to get his discharge on his return to Fort Belvoir, Va., but his wife said there that he had planned to reenlist.

"We knew we could not build a cabin and survive the winter because we had no ax," explained Captain Custer. "We felt we could survive 30 days at most. Besides small game, grouse and rabbits we ate blueberries, mushrooms, chocolate bars and a jar of jam."

The party included Capt. Sir Robert Stirling-Hamilton, senior British naval liaison officer at Ottawa; Custer, 43, U. S. Naval attache there; Lieut. (j. g.) Charles Wilcox, USN, the regular pilot; Master Sergeant Scalise and Chief Petty Officer Jack M. Kastner, of the U. S. Navy.

Custer said that when they finally sighted the plane which found them yesterday, "We all thanked God on our knees."

"The first night," he said, "we set up shelter and held a council by our campfire near the fallen plane. Sarge, as we affectionally call Scalise, had the skill of an expert rifle or pistol man to kill small game."

Since they had only 50 rounds of .38-caliber and 50 rounds of .22-caliber, the party decided to permit only Scalise and Kastner to fire, except in self-defense.

But they found hunting poor in that area, though there were signs of caribou and deer around.

Each night they held a prayer meeting.

One of the survivors got the idea of starting a forest fire to attract attention to their position, but the brush was too damp to burn.

They tried to fish, but the shore line was too shallow for fish.

"Each night we would broadcast our position, hoping the radio was working and each night we prayed we'd be found the next day," Custer said.

Finally on last Tuesday, out of food and with game scarce there, Captain Stirling-Hamilton laid out an arrow in the beach sand pointing south for possible rescuers to see and the party headed in that direction.

Armed with sticks, they fought their way through the underbrush 15 miles the first day. The next day they covered only 4½ miles.

On Thursday rain threatened.

"It seemed nightmarish," Captain Custer said. "We spent a wretched night. The grouse we shot began to go bad, but we boiled it again and ate it."

Friday morning they held a prayer meeting, and about 7:30 a. m. resumed their trek over fallen timbers. By noon, they had gone only a mile and a half.

"At 12:24, Kastner said he thought he heard a truck or train motor. At 12:27, we saw a plane to the east. We fired three Very flare cartridges and cut up a parachute panel and waved it at the plane," Custer said.

"The plane did not see us and continued on its course at 1000 feet."

Sick with disappointment, the men camped immediately on a lakeside.

"Kestner said he thought he heard planes to the north and at 3 p. m. a plane came out of the overcast, saw us and wagged its wings," Custer said.

Capt. Stirling-Hamilton suggested they pray. "We thanked God on our knees," Custer said. The plane dropped a message and map indicating their position and instructing them to proceed to a nearby lake. Rugged terrain prevented a ground landing.

"We then ate the remaining grouse like a crowd of drunken sailors," the naval officer said. They boarded the Canso rescue plane last night and arrived here this morning.

Captain Stirling-Hamilton said main decisions were decided by a vote but "at all times we were relying on the leadership of Captain Custer."

The men will be flown from here to Ottawa.

Captain Custer said with a laugh the men had fun at their dinner periods.

"We had no dinner dress to wear at mealtime but Sir Robert added a touch of formality to those occasions by tieing a handsome white scarf around his neck," he recalled.

Fatigued, bearded and carrying sticks which they used to walk miles through the brush, they grinned for photographers before heading for a roast beef dinner, their first real meal in 13 days.

Shaking hands with American Air Force officials there to greet the men, Custer said, "Thanks for coming up. But I hope I will never have to do the same for you!"

Captain Kastner, who crash-landed the plane 13 days ago, said, "Everything went wrong."

"Compasses, engines, about everything that could happen did," Kastner said.

Searchers said the plane was in good condition, that "someone did a beautiful job of landing it."

Custer said he asked Kastner to take the controls when it was decided to land because of a low gas supply.

Custer said that a short distance out of Churchill, the plane ran into snow and ice. "We tried to get down through the overcast, but we found the ceiling very low. We went back up and stayed on our magnetic compass for nearly three hours."

"We checked periodically to see if we could get out underneath the clouds. It seemed strange we had not broken out of the overcast as predicted at Churchill, but it was considered imprudent to head back north where we knew the ceiling was low."

Besides this, the radio was not reliable, he said.

"Later, to our distress, we learned that the magnetic compass was violently affected by some disturbance," Custer said. "Our gas began to run out and we decided to land. I estimated the chance of rescue would be greater by heading in a south-westerly direction . . . We steered a westerly course for 40 minutes.

"I called Kastner to come up forward and take over the plane to make the landing because of his greater experience. Kastner flew over the area and picked a small lake. He landed perfectly."

The crew of the Lancaster sighted the plane on the edge of the lake after a widespread search involving over 40 planes and a United States naval blimp from Lakehurst, N. J. A flying boat, diverted from its search nearby, flew to the lake and found an arrow in the sand pointing south. Following in its pointed direction, it found the men and dropped a map and instructions to proceed back to the lake. Rugged terrain made a ground landing impossible.

The United States Navy sent a heartfelt "thank you" to the RCAF for its part in the rescue. The message, addressed to Defense Minister Brooke Claxton on behalf of the chief of United States naval operations, said: "The chief of naval operations, Admiral Louis E. Denfield, speaks for the United States naval service and the families of his shipmates who were successfully rescued."

Custer said he would recommend that letters of commendation be given to Kastner and Scalise "for the excellent way in which they handled themselves."

Orders Sent Custer To Return to Capital

Navy Secretary Sullivan, who personally kept Mrs. Custer here informed of her husband's rescue yesterday and Friday night sent Captain Custer orders yesterday to return here as soon as he is able. He is to report to the Navy Department on his trip earlier this month as an observer aboard the Canadian carrier Magnificent through Arctic waters.

Get Welcome Relief From Stomach Gas, Sour Food Taste

Do you feel bloated and miserable after every meal? If so, here is how you may rid yourself of this nervous distress. Thousands have found it the way to be well, cheerful and happy again.

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Clark Adds 4 Groups to 'Subversive' Lists; Loyalty Board Makes New Roster Official

By the United Press

Attorney General Tom C. Clark has added four organizations to the Justice Department's original list of subversive groups, the Loyalty Review Board disclosed last night.

The four were labeled "Communist," and listed by the board as the American Committee for European Workers Relief, the American Council on Soviet Relations, the Communist Political Association and the People's Radio Foundation, Inc.

A revised list made public by Chairman Seth W. Richardson of the Loyalty Review Board combined into one list the names of 123 organizations previously designated.

The revised list was distributed by the board to all executive department agencies for their use in checking on the loyalty of Government employes.

For the first time, Clark was revealed to have placed the organizations in separate classifications, naming 22 as totalitarian, 15 as Fascist, 82 as Communist, 6 as subversive, 4 as groups advocating violence to deny others constitutional rights, and 5 as committed to overthrowing the Government by force or violence.

There were some duplications among the six categories, thus reducing to 123 the total number of organizations listed.

The Communist Party was named as subversive, and as advocating violent overthrow of the Government.

Civilian Check

Army Probe Of Loyalty Hits Snag

The Army's probe of the loyalty of its civilian personnel has struck a snag because its review procedure, under which accused persons can examine transcripts of their hearings, may conflict with President Truman's secrecy order on loyalty data, it was learned yesterday.

Inquiry disclosed that pending reviews are being held up until it is determined whether the President's order, which was designed primarily to maintain the confidential status of material sought by congressional committees, applies to hearings insofar as the accused and their attorneys are concerned.

Army procedural rules established last May 14 provided that the accused, or respondent, was to examine the transcript or notes of the hearing and either initial the record as correct or file written exceptions. The snag resulting from the President's secrecy order so far has prevented the Army from proceeding.

Report on Atomic Spies Due This Week; Termed 'Shocker'

By The Associated Press

An official close to the House Un-American Activities Committee said yesterday its forthcoming report on atomic espionage "will shock the public."

It will state, the official declared, that Presidents Roosevelt and Truman and Attorney General Tom C. Clark "had all the facts" on a Russian spy ring that got atomic bomb secrets but did nothing about it.

The official, who declined use of his name, said the report will assert that Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Truman and Clark knew that "Soviet agents in a complete professional spy ring, working with amateurs" successfully obtained American atomic secrets.

"It was a complete admission," the official said.

Earlier, Representative Vail (R., Ill.), a member of the committee, said the report will assert that some scientists working with the supersecret Manhattan atomic bomb projects at the University of Chicago made attempts to steal atom secrets.

He told reporters: "We are inclined to believe they were successful."

Vail also said a separate phase of the committee's atomic espionage inquiry—under way since mid-June—had revealed that some atomic material had been stolen from the Manhattan Project and sent to Russia.

Vail declined to name the scientists alleged to have been involved. He said some of them will be named in the committee's report, now expected to be issued early this week.

The committee official said that so far as he knows, there will be nothing in the report not already known to Government agencies.

"But so far as the public is concerned it will be new," he said. "And the facts, the testimony will shock them. The facts will show deliberate espionage by Soviet agents."

He's bold, romantic and clever— Follow "The Saint," a new Post comic.

NLRB Has Asked For 31 Injunctions

By The Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board has made use of its sharpest weapon under the Taft-Hartley law—the injunction—31 times, a survey showed yesterday. In only six instances, however, did the board move of its own accord.

In the first 13 months under the new labor law, the board's general counsel, Robert N. Denham, has sought injunctions against unions 29 times and against employers twice.

All but six of these were of the mandatory type in which he had no choice under the law but to petition a court to stop an alleged unfair labor practice, after inquiry showed a complaint to be proper.

Of the total of 31 petitions, the courts granted 18 of those against unions and one against the employer. These injunctions were to halt secondary boycotts, certain types of sympathy strikes, and strikes over board certification of bargaining agents.

The six times Denham voluntarily went to the courts for help, major issues were involved.

Twice John L. Lewis was the offender. Denham won the first case against Lewis, when Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough ordered the mine leader to bargain with the Southern coal producers, under threat of contempt of court. Denham withdrew the second Lewis case.

In another case, Denham obtained an injunction against the AFL International Typographical Union. Now he is charging the union in Indianapolis with having violated the injunction, granted by Judge Luther M. Swygert last March 27.

Another injunction plea, against the AFL Meat Cutters Union on the West Coast, was withdrawn. The two other times Denham used his discretionary power to go after an injunction, it was the employer who was charged with an unfair labor practice by refusal to bargain.

The court granted an injunction against the General Motors Corp. forcing it to bargain with the CIO-United Auto Workers on a group insurance plan. But the court denied Denham's petition for an injunction against Boeing Airplane Co., Seattle, to force it to bargain with the striking International Association of Machinists. The strike ended a short time later.

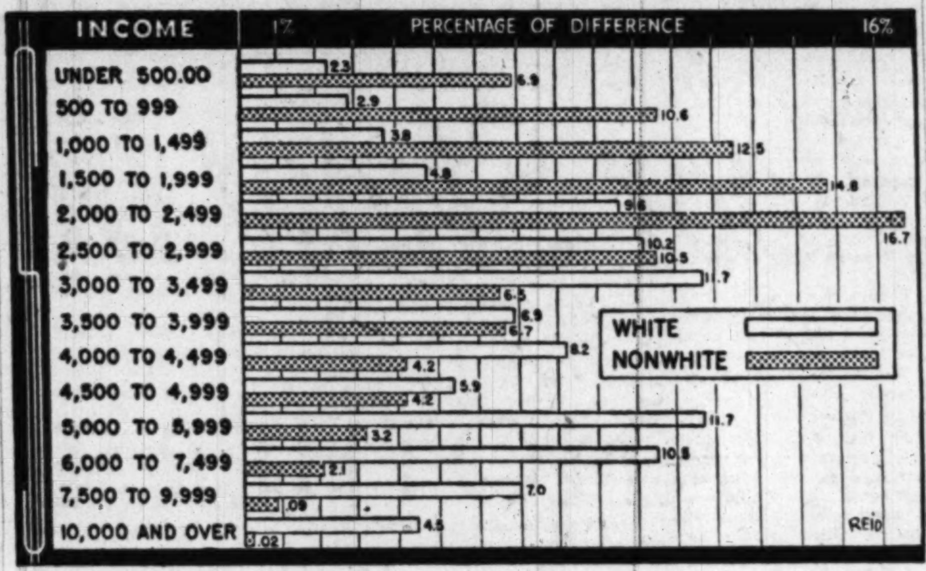
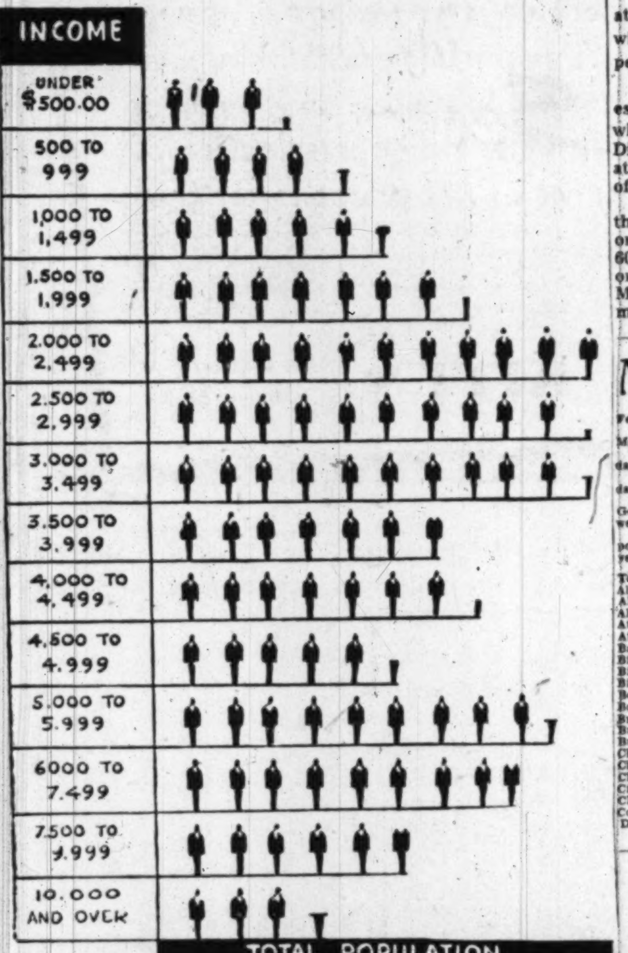
1 in 3 Workers Here Made $5000 Last Year



BAR-GRAPH based on Census Bureau figures released yesterday shows the percent distribution of income among white and nonwhite families in Metropolitan Washington last year



INCOME CHART, also based on Census Bureau tabulations, gives a breakdown of the number of Washingtonians in each wage bracket

are included.

The survey shows that about 90 per cent of the earners who lived in Washington last year worked there, while about 60 per cent of those in other sections of the metropolitan district commuted to Washington to work.

By sections, about 65 per cent of Maryland earners in the District commuted to Washington jobs, and about 54 per cent of Virginia earners worked in Washington.

On a Metropolitan District basis, only a third of the earners lived in the suburbs.

The average income of white families in the Metropolitan District was $4600 as compared with $2600 for nonwhites. Average income for white individuals was $2500 as compared with $1400 for nonwhites.

On the basis of sex, the Census Bureau report shows that men in the Metropolitan District reached their earning peak in their middle 30s, while women reached it between 45 and 54.

For men, the average earnings were $1578 from 20-24; $2860 from 25-34; $3368 from 35-44; $3351 from 45-54, and $3372 from 55-64. For men 65 years and older, the average was $1809.

For women, average earnings ran considerably lower. Beginning at an average of $1922 between 20-24, women earned $2095 from 25-34; $2090 from 35-44; $2222 from 45-54, and $2088 from 55 to 64. No tabulation of women's earnings above 65 was given.

For those who like to recall the "good old" prewar days, the Census Bureau had some startling statistics:

The average income of Metropolitan District workers in 1947—$3900—was nearly double that paid in 1939—$2000. But residents of the area who rented their homes in both years had to pay only 29 per cent more rent in 1947 than in 1939.

Last year, people who lived on the Maryland side of the Metropolitan District made more money per person than those in other sectors, the census figures show. The average in the Maryland section of the district was $2988, as compared with $2725 for Virginia, and only $2268 for Washington. Average for the Metropolitan District as a whole was $2413.

The survey shows only 29.3 per cent of dwelling units in Washington were owner-occupied, while in the rest of the Metropolitan District, the percentage was 39.5.

Life in the suburbs was roomier than life in Washington last year, the figures show. In the Metropolitan District, there were 3.01 persons to 4.35 rooms, on an average, while in Washington itself, there were 2.79 persons to 3.82 rooms.

Dwelling units having three rooms were the single largest category in both Washington and the Metropolitan District.

In Washington, 12.8 per cent of the population lived alone and liked it. In the Metropolitan District, 10.2 per cent of the population "batched" it.

Couples occupied 31 per cent of dwellings in Washington and 27.8 per cent of dwelling units in the Metropolitan District. Families of three persons lived in 21.4 per cent of Washington units, and 23.7 per cent of Metropolitan District units.

Four-person families took 16.8 per cent of Washington dwelling units, 19.4 per cent of Metropolitan District units. Five-person families occupied 8.6 per cent of Washington units, and 10.1 per cent of those in the larger area. Families of six or more persons lined in 9.4 per cent of Washington dwelling units, 8.9 per cent of those in the Metropolitan District as a whole.

Tenants in the Metropolitan District paid higher average monthly rent ($53) than those in Washington ($51).

Of all dwellings in the Metropolitan District, 95.4 per cent were in good condition, or in need of only minor repairs, and 88.7 per cent had a private flush toilet. Of the 4.6 per cent which needed major repairs, 2.2 per cent had a private flush toilet.

In Washington, 94 per cent of dwelling units were in good condition, and 87.8 per cent had a private flush toilet. Of the 6 per cent which needed major repairs, 3.1 per cent had a private flush toilet.

In addition, the Census Bureau estimates there were 285,988 nonwhites living in the Metropolitan District, including Negroes, Asiatics, Indians, etc. The majority of these persons were Negroes.

There were 524,000 workers in the Metropolitan District on wages or salaries. Of this number, 219,600 worked either for the Federal or District government, or nearby Maryland or Virginia State governments.

Plane Plant Employment Seen Doubled

By the United Press

The United States Employment Service disclosed last night that the aircraft industry again is in need of Rosie the Riveter and her working companions.

The employment service said in a report to the National Security Resources Board that employment in the aircraft industry is expected to double as a result of the expanded defense program. The total number of workers will increase from 250,000 to about 500,000, it is believed.

Robert C. Goodwin, director of the Employment Service, said he had no doubt that women as well as men would respond to the call for more aircraft workers.

On the general manpower situation, Godwin said some workers will have to shift from less essential to more essential jobs if the Nation's needs are to be met. But there is no immediate need for manpower controls similar to those imposed during the war, he stated.

Workers may be reluctant to change jobs, however, because of the scarcity of housing and the other inconveniences of moving. As a result, he said, local labor should be utilized wherever possible to fill in the manpower gaps.

Goodwin said the most serious shortages ahead are for all kinds of engineers, medical doctors, dentists, nurses, grade school teachers, stenographers and bricklayers.

Atom Preeminence Held Aim of U. S.

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Pre-eminence in all phases of atomic energy development is the interim objective of the United States, says David E. Lilienthal. "The ultimate objective is still international control."

Lilienthal, chairman of the United States Atomic Energy Commission, also believes today's American leadership offers the biggest chance for future world control.

Archibald MacLeish, writing in Life magazine, reported Lilienthal's views, as based on recent conversations with him.

MacLeish, former Assistant Secretary of State, said Lilienthal told him he believes "we're worse off as a world than we were three years ago." Noting attempts for world atomic control had failed, Lilienthal summed up the new American policy this way:

"The ultimate objective is still international control. Failing that for the present, what we've done is to fix a shorter-range objective along the same road.

"The interim objective is American pre-eminence. But not pre-eminence in atomic weapons alone . . . pre-eminence in atomic development in all fields right across the board—health, industrial uses, agricultural uses, uses in research and in the advancement of knowledge——the whole scale. . . ."

MacLeish said he asked Lilienthal how American objectives—immediate pre-eminence and eventual world control—can be said to "lie along the same road." He got this answer:

"Because the drive for American pre-eminence across the board in all areas of development of atomic energy gives the greatest chance of anything I can see to advance the ultimate objective. . . . What we want and must have is real international control.

"The Russians (in U. N. discussions) were talking about paper agreements that lacked reality, and we wanted reality . . . The best hope of getting it right now is through actual development of atomic energy—to demonstrate the all-pervasive power of this new instrument of knowledge and its potential usefulness."

Pennington Again Heads YMCA Drive

Lee R. Pennington of the FBI headquarters staff in Washington, has been reappointed chairman of the Central Branch YMCA membership campaign which will be staged from October 1 to 23.

Pennington

Col. George de Camp of the Army Ordnance headquarters staff, has been renamed vice chairman of the drive which this year will aim for 1200 new members, 500 boys and 700 men.

Taking a cue from the presidential campaign, the drive will organize campaign workers into two competitive groups—the "Democans" and "Republicrats."

3200 Expected at D. C. Medical Assembly

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Washington's own medical conferences of the year, the scientific assembly of the District Medical Society, opens here Monday.

The three-day nineteenth assembly is expected to attract some 3200 members of the medical and allied professions to its technical and public sessions at Hotel Statler. Theme of the programming is "Modern Medicine and the Patient."

Dr. Robert H. Groh, chairman on arrangements, said the program has been patterned to give physicians a view of their patients' needs, biologically, medically and sociologically.

Exhibit of Doctors' Art

A new feature will be public exhibit of doctors' arts and letters, the first such exhibit of its kind in Washington. On display will be oils, water colors, charcoals and photographs. Others include literary works and musical compositions in manuscript.

For the public, too, the society is sponsoring a program Monday night in the Presidential Ballroom of the Statler in which science writers will quiz the guest speaker, Dr. Howard B. Sprague of Harvard Medical School, on his subject, "Heart Disease—How to Live With It."

Participating in the platform interview will be Frank Carey, Associated Press, who won this year's $1000 Westinghouse Award for science writing; Gerald G. Gross, editor of Washington Report on the Medical Sciences; Thomas Henry of the Evening Star and Ron Ross of Science Service.

Dr. Charles Armstrong, chief of the division of infectious diseases, Public Health Service, will open the scientific sessions at 10 a. m. Monday with a discussion on progress in virus control. Dr. Stuart Mudd, bacteriologist of the University of Pennsylvania, will describe electronmicroscopic visualization of bacteria.

Papers Scheduled

Twenty-four speakers, including many leaders in their fields, are scheduled to give papers before the scientific sessions. Among their subjects are nutrition, psychiatry, surgery, medical education and allergies.

The Medical Society's annual dinner will be held Tuesday evening, with Morgan Beatty, commentator, author and reporter, as guest speaker. Honored at the dinner will be Drs. Arthur C. Christie and Joseph S. Wall, who will be awarded certificates for meritorious services to the community and the medical profession.

The Women's Medical Society dinner is planned for 6:30 p. m. Monday at the Mayflower Hotel; dinner of the Alumni Association, Medical College of Virginia, is scheduled for Monday at the Statler; the George Washington University Medical Society luncheon will be held Tuesday, and luncheon of the Georgetown University Medical Society Alumni is slated for Wednesday.

Budgeteers Whet Knives

Senate, victim of a one-man filibuster.

The District budget men will begin a searching examination, item by item, of each budget request Monday at 10 a.m. in closed sessions in the office of Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler. They will sit alongside and advise the District Commissioners who will hear each department head justify his requests.

After that the Commissioners will hold a public hearing on October 21 and then send their recommendation to Congress for final action.

The first budgets to be checked are for the executive offices, which will be presented by Fowler, and the corporation counsel's office, which will be explained by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West.

The budget office thoroughly approves of a sales tax, which has been suggested annually as a fund raiser for the past decade. The officials support a 2 per cent general sales tax to start, declaring that if it yields too much revenue, a cut to 1 per cent would be advised. This would preclude the possibility of any department head "spending like a drunken sailor," they promise. If too low, it could be raised, they point out.

The sales tax passed by the House last year provided for an exemption on all sales from 1 to 13 cents, a 1-cent tax on those from 14 to 15 cents, inclusive; 2 cents' tax on 51 cents to $1 and an additional penny tax on each 50 cents thereafter.

Exempted were food and medical items generally, gasoline, admission tickets, utility services, telegrams, newspapers and magazines.

Enactment of a sales tax in the District would place residents in the same category as Maryland, where a 2 per cent sales tax is now in force. Virginia also is considering adoption of a sales tax, but Gov. William M. Tuck opposes its enactment.

District budget officials pin their hopes on enactment of a sales tax early enough in the next session of Congress to provide a seven-months' yield of 7½ million dollars. The tax would require two months to set up collection machinery. Estimating that it will take three months to pass Congress, a seven months' return during the first year is the best that may be anticipated, officials say. In 12 months, the yield would be 13.5 million dollars.

The sales tax has its supporters and its opponents, both among residents and Congressmen. The Washington Board of Trade last week pledged again to fight for its enactment, declaring that the 3½ million visitors to Washington a year, as well as residents of Maryland and Virginia who work in the District, would then contribute to the cost of Government here.

Other backers in the past have included several groups who are for it, if it is linked with a reduction or outright repeal of existing income taxes. These include the Federation of Women's Clubs, Northwest Council of Citizens Associations, and the Federation of Business Men's Associations, Inc.

The Federation of Citizens Associations has taken the position that if the sales levy is adopted, the income tax should be repealed. The Junior Board of Commerce has declared itself opposed to a sales tax unless some other taxes are ended.

In complete opposition to the measure have been the Washington Committee for Consumer Protection; the District chapters of the League of Women Shoppers, the League of Women Voters, the Americans for Democratic Action, American Veterans Committee and the Women's Auxiliary of the United Public Workers, CIO; the Washington Industrial Union Council, CIO; the District department, American Legion; and the Naval Gun Factory local of the International Association of Machinists.

During the last session of Congress, a pay raise for the District's workers who did not share in the $330 a year boost given to Federal workers was tied to passage of a sales tax by Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) head of the Senate District Fiscal Subcommittee.

When Senator Olin D. Johnston (D, S. C.), began a last-ditch filibuster against the sales tax, after the bill passed the House, 116 to 71, the Republican leadership withdrew the measure.

4 D. C. Students Get Atomic Fellowships

Four Washingtonians are among 162 persons just awarded research fellowships by the Atomic Energy Commission.

The awards, announced yesterday, brought to a total of 206 the number of graduate students who have been selected for training under the AEC-financed fellowship program during the 1948-49 academic year.

The Washington winners are: Miss Evelyn Boyd, 23, of 2336 Ontario rd. nw.; George A. Ferguson, 24, whose father, George A. Ferguson, sr., lives at 2433 M st. nw.; George William Sherard, 30, formerly of 1515 10th st. nw.; and Walter Dexter Whitehead, jr., 25, of 5241 Broad Branch rd. nw. Miss Boyd, Ferguson and Sherard are Negroes.

Native of Washington

Miss Boyd, who received her bachelor's degree from Smith College and a master's degree from Yale, is a native of Washington and a graduate of Dunbar High School. In 1945 she won a Phi Beta Kappa key at Smith; next year she was awarded a Julius Rosenwald Fund fellowship, which permitted study on her doctorate at Yale.

Miss Boyd plans to use the latest fellowship for further study at Yale, in the field of mathematics.

Ferguson, who was born in Washington and attended Armstrong High School, received his bachelor's and master's degrees at Howard University. He served overseas in the Army for two years, both in Germany and Japan.

Ferguson, whose father teaches mechanical drawing at Armstrong, is married but has no children. He will continue his studies, in the field of physics, at the University of Pennsylvania.

Research in Physics

Sherard, born in Fitzgerald, Ga., received his bachelor's and master's degrees at the University of Cincinnati. He is on leave from Howard University here, where he has been an instructor in physics since February, 1946. He will use the AEC-fellowship for research in atomic and nuclear physics at the University of Pennsylvania.

Whitehead, who worked in Washington recently on a Carnegie Institution fellowship, did his undergraduate work at the University of Virginia and also obtained his master's degree there. He will continue his studies at the same school, concentrating on the "scattering of alpha particles."

The fellowship program, which is administered for the AEC by the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences, is carried on under provisions of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946. It is designed to insure continued expansion of research and development in atomic energy and its related fields, to alleviate the shortage of trained scientists and technicians, and to assist in the acquisiton of a growing fund of theoretical and practical knowledge.

Vatican Reported Willing to Resume Ties With Russia

Vatican City, Sept. 25 (AP).—The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said today the Catholic Church, "despite everything," would gladly renew diplomatic relations with Russia.

The paper said the church was willing to do this "as soon as the possibility was given her (the church)," and asserted that relations that existed between the church and Russia "certainly were not broken by the Holy See."

Osservatore made this declaration in denying a charge by Communist Ambrogio Donini—once Italian Ambassador to Poland—that the church's orders aim at "the destruction of communism the destruction of the USSR."

VFW Plans Flag Survey

First step in the program of the Silver Spring Memorial Post, VFW, to promote Americanism among Montgomery County children will be a survey to determine the number of American flags lacking in schoolrooms of the country's public schools.

Commander Joseph Buscher has appointed a special committee headed by Ward Caddington to conduct the survey. The Board of Education will be requested to accept the flags and also include the daily recitation of the "Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag in Each Classroom."

After the number of flags needed is determined the post's steering committee under the chairmanship of Trial Magistrate Alger Y. Barbee will consider means of procurement. Barbee's committee also has recommended the establishment of a speakers' bureau selected from the post's membership. This bureau would be available upon call of public school officials to provide talks on the fundamental principles of American Government.

The program was proposed by Buscher, he said, when he learned of the many schools and schoolrooms without flags.

$25,000 for Storm Sewer Work Voted by Arlington Board

Badgered by complaints about flooded cellars, rats and mosquitoes, the Arlington County Board yesterday appropriated $25,000 to install storm sewers.

County Manager A. T. Lundberg was directed to tell the board at its next meeting where the money can best be used. Member Basil M. DeLashmutt, who moved the appropriation, admitted it would make hardly a dent in the county's needs, but said no more money was available now.

The action followed a complaint by a delegation from Westover that a 180-foot open storm sewer caused their cellars to be flooded whenever it rained. Lundberg reported it would cost $78,175 to solve the problem permanently.

The board also:

1. Agreed to open bids October 14 on a $750,000 county incinerator. Bids also will be opened the same day on a $1,776,000 bond issue for elementary school construction.

2. Deferred action on Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan's proposal to set up a county civil service commission.

3. Deferred action on a request of the Arlington Civic Federation for a survey of county tax assessing by the Bureau of Public Administration. The federation specifically wanted to find if more revenue could be raised without increasing tax rates. Member F. Freeland Chew thought it "smacked closely of a smear on the commissioner of revenue."

4. Deferred action on a rezoning request that would permit erection of an eight-story apartment building on Ft. Myer dr., near Lee blvd.

5. Heard County Board Candidate I. Lee Potter urge job security and higher wages for county employes.

St. Ignatius Church at St. Thomas Manor Marks 150th Anniversary Today

An open-air celebration of the 300th anniversary of St. Thomas Manor at Chapel Point, Md., and the 150th anniversary of the St. Ignatius Loyola Church at St. Thomas Manor will be held at 3 p. m. today.

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, D. D., Archbishop of Washington, will preside over the exercises, which will mark the end of the third century of religious activities at the manor.

As part of the celebration, the Alcala Caravan, No. 16, Baltimore, Order of the Alhambra, will present to the church a bronze tablet in commemoration of the event.

Fifty fourth degree Knights of Columbus will act as guard of honor for Archbishop O'Boyle. The archbishop will be celebrant at Solemn Benediction on the lawn overlooking the Potomac River, and the choir of the Sacred Heart Seminary at Woodstock, Md., will carry on the services in its famed Gregorian chant. Several scores of altar boys of Southern Maryland, Washington and Baltimore will assist at the altar.

The chief speaker of the afternoon will be the Rev. Dr. John Tracy Ellis, professor of American history at Catholic University.

Tours through the 200-year-old Manor House, the 286-year-old chapel and the 150-year-old church will be conducted by guides in colonial costumes from 1 to 6 p. m. It was in the manor house that much of the early religious history of Southern Maryland took place, including the election of Bishop John Carroll, first Catholic bishop in the United States.

To Preside at Solemn Mass

Archbishop O'Boyle will preside at a solemn mass at 10 a. m. in the church. The Rev. Raphael Huber, O. F. M., of Catholic University will be celebrant. The preacher will be the Right Rev. Edward F. McAdams pastor of St. Joseph's Church here.

The cornerstone of St. Ignatius Church was laid by Bishop Carroll in 1798. In the adjacent Manor House, erected in 1741, there was first promulgated the viva voce restoration of the Society of Jesus, and the Manor House was the first community of the restored Jesuit Order in this country.

There has been uninterrupted succession of resident pastors at St. Thomas for 286 years. The public is invited to today's services.

"Gosh! Everything around here runs by electricity but this!"

"What a cinch it is for Mother and Dad around this house! Most everything gets done by pushing a button. Cooking and dishwashing are as simple as 1-2-3. Even the laundry is a light job. And look at those radio and television sets over there—electricity again! Seems to me this fiddle is about the only thing NOT wired for electricity.

"Well, Son . . . while you didn't once call his name, Reddy Kilowatt does just about everything. Ask Mother and Dad . . . they seldom mention his name, either, but they rely on him how and plan to rely on him MORE. They rely on him because his wages are low, because he's indispensable in their time-and-work-saving lives."

Liberal Solution

In ousting John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker, from membership in the American Veterans Committee, the AVC national planning committee has faced courageously the issue which has befuddled too many liberals. The AVC has recognized bluntly that the Communist claim to liberalism is fictitious. In fact, communism is the antithesis of liberalism, as has been evident in the countries where progressive organizations seeking a middle ground have been the first to be liquidated.

With the Gates expulsion, the AVC also has recognized the liability which Communist members impose on any group attemping to achieve a liberal program. The Communist tactic, described in the gobbledygook of party literature and sadly apparent in a number of organizations which started out with lofty aims, is to join liberal causes, outclamor the other members and subvert the organization to Communist ends. As the AVC noted, a party member can join it only for the objective of furthering the purposes of the Communist Party and as such is a "clear and present danger."

This decision is no invasion of freedom of belief. It is, however, an affirmation of the right of an organization dedicated to free institutions to protect itself against persons who use those institutions only to destroy them. The AVC's example is one which could profitably be followed by other groups struggling with the same problem. For the issue is simply that of a belief in human freedom, and not a false choice between communism and reaction, which in the final analysis are the same thing.

Foreign Policy

Prof. Thomas A. Bailey has asserted in his book, The Man in the Street, that foreign policy is too important a matter to be entrusted in time of crisis to the vagaries of public opinion. He goes so far as to admit that Mr. Roosevelt "repeatedly deceived the American people during the period before Pearl Harbor," and to that extent supports the indictment brought by the late Professor Beard and others. However, Professor Bailey argues that Mr. Roosevelt was justified in this deception because he was in a better position than the people to judge the menace to the safety of the United States represented by the Axis powers.

The question whether the people or the President are the better judges of foreign policy is the subject of a symposium in the current issues of American Perspective, published here in Washington by the Foundation for Foreign Affairs. None of the symposiasts indorses Professor Bailey's view. Indeed, Professor Mulford Sibley of the University of Illinois asserts that the policy-making function of the people in a democracy "involves much more than a plebiscite; it implies continuous and public discussion of a principle from its embryonic form to its final statement." Professor Sibley believes that "a President, who on the plea of 'international crisis disregards the conditions essential for a democratic decision, who uses deception for what he regards as the public good, should be removed forthwith from office." To the argument that the character of modern war makes it impossible to delay the formulation and application of policy until the democracy has made up its mind about it, Professor Sibley cites the example of Gandhi, to show that war is not necessary even in the last resort to the settlement of international disputes. "What possible logic," he asks, "is there in using methods to preserve democracy which by their very nature destroy the democratic process?"

Much the same view is taken by Mr. C. Hartley Grattan, who observes that Professor Bailey's defense of Mr. Roosevelt is based on the principle that the end justifies the means. It also assumes, says Mr. Grattan, that there can be only one correct foreign policy, recognizable by those who are sufficiently well informed and therefore may be supported by both political parties. Mr. Grattan insists that there is room for as many diverse opinions on matters of foreign policy as on domestic questions. A less extreme view is taken by Prof. Max Kampelman of Bennington College, who supposes that "in a context of sovereign power struggles" it may be advisable for people to delegate the policy-making power to the Executive, but asserts that the decision to delegate rests with the people and the delegation of power may not be taken for granted "by the leaders without the people's consent." Prof. Nathaniel Peffer of Columbia University thinks that the main difficulty is the lack of a responsible Cabinet. The present system, he points out, makes it possible for policies to be formulated by the President and a clique of confidential advisers without consultation of Congress or even of the Secretary of State. He dismisses the argument that the people are incapable of understanding questions of foreign policy by observing that the experience of our generation has proved that this is also true of statesmen and diplomats.

A position about midway between Professor Bailey and Professor Sibley is taken by Bertrand Russell, the well-known philosopher. Earl Russell believes that in the day-to-day conduct of foreign affairs the Executive must be given a free hand. He also thinks that a literal insistence on "open diplomacy" would make any sort of agreements with foreign powers impossible. Thus he perceives a necessity for secrecy in certain diplomatic operations, including the negotiation of treaties. However, he insists that no agreement should be considered binding until it has been debated and approved by some popularly elected official body.

Bernadotte Plan

It is plain that a strong stand by the United Nations is all that is necessary to settle the Arab-Jew dispute in the Holy Land. Members now have on their desks the last report—a report in the nature of a testament—of the late U. N. mediator, Count Bernadotte. The key of the report is that a "Jewish state called Israel exists in Palestine, and there are no sound reasons for assuming that it will not continue to do so." If wisdom consists of attention to realities, here is the starting point for settlement. Already the British, the holdouts on recognition, have given the report their "wholehearted and unqualified support." U. N. support of the Bernadotte Plan in unequivocal terms would do a great deal to repair the damage that the U. N. has sustained in the Middle East as a result of its record of pusillanimity on Palestine.

Among the fictions on the issue of Palestine which have hitherto been nursed in Britain and the Middle East division of the State Department is that there is an entity called the Arab world. There is no such world. There are Arab countries, which are disunited on the issue of Palestine, even within those countries. For example, the Palestinian Arabs, whose Higher Committee always had more status at Lake Success than in Palestine itself, are now quarreling with Trans-Jordan's Abdullah. Abdullah, as we long ago anticipated, will have no truck with the notorious Mufti and his odoriferous Nazi gang, and has emerged as the dominant Arab voice in the disposition of Arab Palestine. The Arab League, which sits at Cairo and which has assumed a prerogative in Palestine without the slightest support in fact or in law, is equally anathema to Abdullah. When the Egyptians, the main support of the Arab League, infiltrated into Jersusalem, they got such a hot reception from the Arab Legionnaires of Abdullah that their commander, it is credibly reported, was summarily disposed of. Thus the stage is set for a Jewish-Abdullah arrangement in Palestine under the auspices of the United Nations—if the United Nations quits its stalling and insists on it.

As to the plan itself, Count Bernadotte withdrew his first suggestion on Jerusalem, that the Holy City should be under Abdullah with the Jews given some kind of autonomy. He recognized that the world was repelled by it. The count went back to the original U. N. recommendation for internationalization of Jerusalem under U. N. authority. Abdullah, of course, won't like it. At the beginning of hostilities he wanted not so much to fight the Jews as to get control of the Holy City, so that he could set himself up as King of Jerusalem, rivaling Ibn Saud, who controls the Arab holy cities of Mecca and Medina. But, even with the aid of the British, his operation was not successful, and he must now accept the defeat of his scheme and cooperate with the United Nations. Recognition of Trans-Jordan and Israel as members of the Unifed Nations, as Secretary Marshall proposes, would go a long way to propitiate Abdullah, and, along with a decided stand by the United Nations, put him in the frame of mind to acquiesce in the Bernadotte Plan.

Need For Initiative

The deadlock over Berlin and indeed over the whole German settlement, the prospective discomfort in settlement of the Italian African colonies question, the delay in writing an Austrian treaty, and many other instances of frantic motionlessness in making the postwar peace all suggest the need of bold action. In the game of power politics it does not pay always to be simply countering the other fellow's moves. He who holds the initiative has an enormous advantage.

Only 15 months ago the United States seized the initiative when Secretary of State Marshall first proposed the European Recovery Program. The Russians, who might have come into the Marshall Plan—and thereby scotched it—were set back on their heels. How badly they suffered may be judged by the desperateness of their efforts to regain balance. The Berlin blockade is an example. By such drastic measures they have succeeded in putting us again on the defensive.

We have need now to act boldly. The statesmanship that so recently came up with a "stroke of the moment" like the Marshall Plan is surely not drained of ideas for new and equally promising ventures. Both as General and Secretary of State Mr. Marshall has the watchword: "Move Forward." In acting upon it, the United States and the other Western nations are, to be sure, naturally less supple in diplomacy than the Soviet acrobats, but they have one source of formidable strength the Russians do not have, and that is high purpose. The primary Marshall Plan aim lies in uniting and strengthening all of Europe. Perhaps it can be revived by taking the initiative to breach the curtain between eastern and western Europe at a point known as Yugoslavia.

The idea of offering economic benefits to Tito, who is, though a dissident Communist, still a Communist, has its distasteful side. But trade is a two-way street, and the benefits would be reciprocal and should be kept reciprocal. Moreover, foreign policy is always a question of choices, and the choice here may show possible profits greater than the risks. It seems, at any rate, a gambit well worth exploring, especially in view of the fact that it is in Yugoslavia that the great split in international communism first showed itself.

Red Issue

Governor Dewey handled the Communist issue with forthrightness and a good deal of common sense in his Los Angeles speech. While avoiding any effort at suppression, he would expose Communist activities at home and launch a truth campaign abroad. Both of his proposals are in keeping with the freedom that the American people cherish and with the realities of the world situation.

"In this country," Mr. Dewey says, "we'll have no thought police. We will not jail anybody for what he thinks or believes.' Only if Communists violate the law would Mr. Dewey subject them to prosecution. While this makes sense, candor should have induced the New York Governor to acknowledge that it is the policy now being carried out. Of course, President Truman has laid himself open to attack on this point because he declared that the exposure of Communist activities is a red herring. But the fact remains that the Government is making a conscientious effort to screen out from Federal employment all disloyal elements, and a great deal of light is being turned upon Communists' work in this country in spite of the bungling methods so frequently employed by the Committee on Un-American Activities.

As for Mr. Dewey's truth-telling counteroffensive, the basic idea is excellent, but the long-continued activity of the Voice of America robs the Governor's proposal of any novelty. Presumably he hopes to improve the Voice and to utilize various other media, such as motion pictures, to tell America's "magnificent story of freedom." Certainly the world must be kept informed as to what the United States is thinking and doing. Certainly also the virtues of democracy must be given positive emphasis in a world that is constantly exposed to lying propaganda from Moscow. Without pretending to have solved all their problems, the American people can at least demonstrate the feasibility of continuing to seek solutions in freedom and peace. And we suspect that this is the primary objective which a majority of mankind is seeking.

It is on the question of methods to be employed that Mr. Dewey's speech may give rise to some misgivings. He speaks of his truth-telling counteroffensive as if it were a gigantic selling job, and in some respects it undoubtedly is. Nevertheless, it is a delicate undertaking, as the Voice of America has discovered. The United States cannot put itself into the position of bombarding other countries with propaganda without creating the sort of reaction that now arises among intelligent people in free lands against the bilgewater that comes out of Moscow. Of course, Mr. Dewey has no idea of following the lead of the "liemakers," but it is also important to remember that freedom is not a commodity that can be spread through the world by mere salesmanship as if it were a soap or a dynamized automobile.

Self-Help

ECA allocation figures, which have not yet been officially transmitted to the ECA, show that $1,263,000,000 of direct Marshall Plan aid will go to Great Britain. This is about one quarter of the first-year total. The other 15 nations, plus Bizonia and the French zone in Germany, are to get amounts varying in size from 989 million dollars for France down to 11 million for Iceland. But these figures tell only half the story. The other, and perhaps more significant half, reveals the intra-European contributions. Britain, for example, promises to make 282 million dollars available to other countries in the group, principally France. This brings the British net receipts down to 981 millions. France, on the other hand, is on the receiving end both from the United States and from European contributors such as Britain and Belgium to the tune of $1,312,000,000 all together. The British, furthermore, will allow other countries to finance 218 million dollars out of their sterling balances, in effect an additional contribution to the nonsterling countries.

If the ERP nations, and particularly the British, have heretofore seemed to be "dragging their feet" in spite of the compelling need to get the program into operation, the present evidence indicates that they are now ready to make sacrifices. Much remains to be done in the shape of integrated economies, as in, say, steel, to consolidate which in a continental industry is, in the American hope, the purpose of the steel committee that is functioning in Paris. However, Americans can recognize in the programmed figures the very considerable contributions to be made at the other end, and watch with sounder hope to see that the promises are, in fact, fulfilled.

Support for Truman

To these Messrs. Alsop and other Eastern reporters who are covering the President's current tour it may appear that Mr. Truman is indulging in fear technique. I do not think that such is the case.

I spent the first 20 years of my life in Shelbina, Mo., a small town about 200 miles from Dexter, Iowa. I refer to my home town because it is such a striking example of the thing Mr. Truman was talking about. In 1900 Shelbina had a population of about 2200 people but by 1920 that number had declined to 2000 and by 1930 the number was 1800. In other words, the depression reached that community years before it reached the metropolitan areas.

The desperate economic situation in Shelbina of the early 1920s led to the formation of what is today a farm cooperative. During the 1930s the AAA and its successors, crop loans, erosion control, a county agent, and more reecently the parity program, resulted in the greatest prosperity in the history of the town. The activities of the cooperatives gave the community its first regular payroll and today the community has a population of about 2500, recent growth which percentage-wise has been equalled by only a few among the older communities of the Nation.

Shelbina's prosperity, which still hasn't brought Cadillacs or Packards to any of its residents or to the owners of any of the neighboring farms, is New Deal prosperity. It is prosperity aided by and definitely dependent on planned agriculture. Failure to maintain farm prices would cause Shelbina to again recede into the vassalage of the 1920s which made loafers out of some who remained in the town and drove away many others from the place in search of even the means to sustain life.

I do not think that Shelbina and its surrounding community are unique in the farm belt, I do not think that its residents are so unintelligent as not to comprehend their status in the Nation's economy. What the Alsops' call threats are not that. As they concern Shelbina, the things which Mr. Truman talks of are historical facts.

Mr. Dewey says that all is well and if he is elected all will remain well, but the Republicans have never done anything to protect the farmer and they have given no real assurances that they ever will. Mr. Dewey claims that he will continue the support program but if he cannot change one Senator's views on the issue of displaced persons, how can he expect to control a majority of Mr. Taber's House on the not inexpensive support program? CHARLES STOUT.

DP Instruction

Thanks to the kindness of an American friend I have read today a clipping of an article in your August 12 issue: "Virginia Farm Machinery Stumps Displaced Polish Refugee, Family."

Methinks that I could help Mr. Paul E. Rhinehart or others who might be interested in the problem of displaced persons labor. Before 1939 I was an auditor of the Polish Farmers' Trading Associations and farmers' cooperatives, during the war an instructor at the Polish armored vehicles training center in Britain, then an instructor in English until my recent demobilization.

Mr. Rhinehart believes that the displaced persons can fill a great need on American farms, if they are trained in modern farming methods. The DPs can be trained provided they understand the language of instructors. The Polish armored vehicles training center turned out the men of Zielezinski type as truck drivers in eight weeks' time, as tank drivers in a somewhat longer time. After the cessation of hostilities part of that center was changed and gave to former Polish soldiers instruction in tractor driving and farm machinery use and maintenance. Here are the fully experienced instructors who speak English, Polish and usually some other language, too.

The next thing is the instruction in English. Here again are the instructors ready—the former members of the pool of Polish instructors in English, trained and experienced. With help of that excellent YMCA publication English for Coming Americans, they will be able to give the DPs at the time of their farming course the necessary rudiments of the English language.

I am sure that given an opportunity to get the DPs organized and properly trained by those instructors while working, I could make it a paying proposition both to Mr. Rhinehart or others and the DPs. I should welcome any inquiries from those interested in that matter.

Press Responsibility

The prognosis is negative! That is stark reality. The leading scientists tell us. The churches tell us. The intellectuals tell us. Our own uncertainty, confusion and unhappiness should tell us. And yet, we do not recognize or believe it.

Is it because we cannot cope with the complexity of the problem—cannot take the facts and synthesize the correct solution? Or is it that we do not know the facts?

Therefore, we must inquire, "Do we know the facts?"—and a touchy question it is. It is certain that our press will loudly declaim such inferences. Our radio and motion-picture studios will chime in the chorus. We will be told by each that we are the world's most informed people—and we can only ask, "Is that a fact?"

Freedom of the press in our country has been one of our loudest talking points. Still—of what value is it to us?

It is free to ignore the momentous utterances of the world scientists, clergy and intellectuals. True, it reports them, but it does not repeat them; as though these things were only of passing interest. Unless they are repeated, how can we begin to be aware of the seriousness of the situation?

It is free to ignore glaring discrepancies—free to make flaming front-page headlines one day on a delicate subject and then to retract them (perhaps) the next day—but in small print on the back page. This is unfair to us. How can we think rationally? Most of us will remember only the headlines and we shall never see the retraction.

It is free to omit reference to those far more numerous agreements between ourselves and Russia, and free to mention only the occasional disagreement. Is it because of the sensationalism of disagreement?

As the fountainhead of information which determines fully 90 per cent of our people's opinions, is it not incumbent upon the press to correct these dangerous practices?
WILLIAM H. REYNOLDS.
Washington.

Playground Rights

Since the Recreation Department refuses to discuss its policy of segregated playgrounds with any political group I offer this incident as an indication of its position as of a year ago.

Last summer my teen-age son was playing baseball with a team of white and Negro boys from the neighborhood. This was a spontaneous performance, with no intention of making an incident at all. The Recreation Department playground director demanded that the game be broken up and summoned the police from the Seventh Precinct who forcibly ejected the colored boys from the grounds. The white boys were indignant. My son asked me if the police had a right to do that. As a former member of the D. C. Recreation Council, I knew that the answer was no, but I offered to call the authorities.

I telephoned the playground headquarters and asked, as a property owner, living across the street from the Georgetown playground, by what authority the police can act to remove colored children from white playgrounds. The reply was that unfortunately they had no authority to do so, that the department is dependent on the support of the neighborhood to help enforce the playground ruling. I assured him that he mistook my intention, that I objected to the policy. The local director was informed of the ruling and warned that if the police intervene again the matter will be carried to the chief of police.

Since the local colored children cannot afford the luxury of displeasing the officers of the local precinct by insisting on their legal rights, there has been no repetition of the incident.
RACHEL WELCH.
Washington.

"Ship Knot"

Please permit me to make a few observations relative to your editorial of September 20, called "Ship Knot." The issue involved, as it occurs to me, is fundamentally—shall the right of labor to bargain collectively be destroyed by national legislation? The ruling by the NLRB to the effect that the union-controlled hiring halls is an illegal enterprise, if followed to its ultimate consequences, would result in a systematic and insidious dissolution of organized labor.

In a moment of national and international crisis, when world leadership is in a tenuous crucible, it is hardly feasible or practical to demonstrate a sympathetic attitude toward a course of action that is antagonistic to millions of workers, for our domestic policies are weighed and scrutinized by those who would be our friends and by the sinister minds of those who seek to destroy.

If, as it appears, the Taft-Hartley Act is an insidious weapon that seeks to improperly proportion pressure and power, it is the sacred responsibility of our Congress to readjust its inadequacies, lest it defeat its real purpose.
NELSON S. BURKE, Jr.
Washington.

Ilse Koch

I have witnessed with shock and indignation many things that have occurred in Europe since the war, but one of the worst was the commutation of the sentence of war criminal Ilse Koch. I pause to wonder how officials have the audacity to dismiss this action to the American public by naming it a mere military move. I should suppose that a multitude of citizens like myself are outraged.

Progressive Education

A Communication

AS A former classroom teacher more recently a professor of education, and at present a full-time parent and comparatively new resident of the District area, I have been very interested in the recent letters and news items concerning education. Both the news items and the letters indicate a strong tendency on the part of parents to assume that progressive ideas in education are responsible for mental softening, lack of discipline, and inadequate accomplishment. Especially, they lament a lack of mastery of the three Rs.

Genuine progressive education, when well understood by teacher and student, is a much more rigorous, thoughtful and thorough discipline than the traditional fact-learning which prevailed in the schools most of us attended. In addition, it works much more intelligently for the development of individuals who are better poised intellectually and emotionally and therefore more able to attack and solve their own problems.

The progressive education movement, like many other reform movements, has suffered seriously from the tendency of many who do not understand it (and who are often fundamentally unsympathetic to it) to jump on the bandwagon. This has produced very unfortunate results.

FOR EXAMPLE, when the wisdom of learning the multiplication tables as separate and isolated facts was rightly questioned, many teachers misconstrued this questioning to mean that they need not be learned. This is not the case. What is meant is that the information and skills which we need to live effectively should be learned in the process of living effectively rather than in a prearranged and predigested logical manner—often without meaning to the learner.

Logical arrangement is important, but it is much more meaningful when it is achieved by the learner as the natural outcome of summarizing his individual learnings. Well arranged learning achieved in this way is a much more rigorous mental and social discipline than rote memorization.

Educational research supports my own experience. The Eight-Year Study, otherwise known as the Thirty-School Experiment, was designed to measure the relative merits of progressive and traditional purposes and procedures. Individual students in progressive high schools were statistically matched with individual students of comparable background and ability in traditional schools. Detailed and comprehensive records of these students in both styles of schools were compiled.

A SIGNIFICANT result is that the students of the progressive schools at least equalled and often excelled their traditionally educated counterparts in academic achievement in college and university. A more significant outcome is that the more the progressive school deviated from the traditional curriculum, the higher the scores which its students made on tests of subject matter and skills in comparison to the scores made by their traditionally educated counterparts on the same tests.

But the really significant result is that, in follow-up studies, the graduates of the progressive schools were found to be engaging in more community activities, were more concerned about the general human welfare, and were better able to handle their own social and emotional problems.

A school is progressive to the extent that its teachers and its students are free to examine critically all aspects of the environment in which they live, are encouraged to act upon the knowledge which they achieve, engage in the process of achieving an integrated scheme of values which they understand and by which they are learning to live, are open minded about the values which they hold, and are growing in the courage and ability to revise these values. Such education cannot take place without the three Rs. Placing them in a contributory perspective does not eliminate them.

It is much harder to learn to be intelligently critical of what one reads than to learn to read. It is much harder to reconstruct the facts of history around their meaning for us in 1948 than it is to memorize the facts. It is much harder to act in accordance with what one knows than it is to know. Yet these are among the purposes for which the genuinely progressive educator works.

Postoffice Service

What a noble poster in my New York neighborhood postoffice I saw recently! So deeply did it impress me that I must write its praise and add a suggestion.

The poster depicts an aged letter-carrier, grown gray in service of the people of America, heavy-laden with a bag over the shoulder, about cheerfully to hand a letter to dear folk in a country cottage. "Write Today" is the cryptic counsel alongside "Make Some One Happy."

Small copies of that appealing scene, with the so appropriate plea, should be available for wider dissemination. Indeed, why not on a postage stamp, in tribute to the good postoffice itself! GEORGE EDELMAN.

Navajos Have Chance of Riches

By Drew Pearson

THE Navajo Indians, starving last winter, may become among the wealthiest in the Nation if the Indian Bureau succeeds in collecting full royalties for the uranium taken from their tribal lands.

Last spring this column revealed that the Vanadium Corp. was not paying the Indians a royalty on the uranium they extracted, but only on the less valuable vanadium. Acting on the facts disclosed in this column, the Indian Bureau set out to investigate, found that most of the data was in the secret files of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The Vanadium Corp. claimed that it was paid only a processing fee, got no money for the uranium itself. However, the Indian Bureau has been pressing for a report from the AEC to find out how much uranium was taken from the Navajo Reservation, and the outcome may be a suit against the Vanadium Corp., brought by the Indian Bureau on behalf of the Navajos.

Meanwhile, prospecting for uranium in the arid Southwest has taken on the proportions of a boom. The Navajos, however, are missing out because of a tribal ruling that all new discoveries must be placed on the public auction block. As a result, the Vanadium Corp. has outbid all comers, and prospectors have received nothing for their discoveries.

The Indian Bureau hopes to repeal this ruling and open the reservation to private prospectors.

Note—The Vanadium Corp. of America, which has a corner on uranium inside the Navajo Reservation, also has uranium interests in South Africa and Peru.

Students Export Democracy

WHILE this columnist has been talking about making democracy live, the students of Bowdoin College, Me., have been going out and doing something about it.

Tired of war and sick at the thought of another war, they devised a plan to bring foreign students to the United States of America. If people get to know each other, they figure, people won't fight each other.

What the Bowdoinites do is encourage various fraternities and student groups to consider whether they want to sponsor a foreign student and help him study in the United States of America. If so, the college waives the tuition and the student group raises the money for board and room.

Thirteen foreign students are now at Bowdoin—the future leaders of Brazil, Austria, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ethiopia, France, Finland, Greece, Holland and Venezuela. The idea is now spreading to other colleges, and should be a real step toward keeping the peace.

Merry-Go-Round

CHARLEY POLETTI, widely touted one-time liberal Lieutenant Governor of New York, has been cashing in on the contacts he formed while United States military governor of Italy. Poletti has so many European law clients that he has moved his entire family to Switzerland for a year. (Critics are unkind enough to point out that if you live abroad for a year you escape paying United States income taxes.) . . . CORRECTION: Asa Caraway, of the Democratic National Committee, is not the son of former Senator Hattie Caraway, as previously stated in this column. Mrs. Caraway's sons are Paul and Forrest. Apologies for the error . . . There is a very good reason why Fulton Lewis has been lambasting Tennessee's "young Cordell Hull," Congressman Estes Kefauver, Democratic candidate for the Senate. Fulton's wife is lovely Alice Houston, daughter of Tennessee's Claudius Houston, onetime chairman of the Republican National Committee. The Houston clan is out to block Kefauver at any cost.

Snagged on Own Hook

THE House Un-American Activities Committee is in such a suspicious mood that recently it got a bit suspicious of an investigator hired by one of its own members—Congressman John McDowell, Republican, of Wilkinsburg, Pa.

It all started when McDowell got worried about some Yugoslav fishermen on the West Coast. During the war, when the United States was hard up for food, these fishermen transferred from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and Representative McDowell got the idea that some of them were Communists. He also heard that they were cruising around Alaska.

Consulting former Premier Nagy of Hungary, a strong anti-Communist, McDowell hired Yugoslav linguist Bogumil Vosnjak to mingle with the fishermen and see what they were up to. The FBI, also watching the fishermen, got suspicious of Vosnjak and arrested him. Vosnjak flashed a letter showing that he was working for the House Un-American Activities Committee.

This situation, where sleuths were watching other sleuths, got Chairman Thomas all up in the air, and he wrote the following letter to his chief investigator, Robert E. Stripling:

"Dear Strip:

"Talked today to McDowell on the telephone concerning Vosnjak: I told McDowell I'd gotten some unfavorable news from the FBI concerning Vosnjak and that I didn't want to take any chances with this fellow. Further, I didn't know what it was all about in the first place, but that, based on what I learned today, I didn't want to have any of him. Therefore, Mr. McDowell should contact the man and make it plain to him that he is in no way connected with our committee and that if he is doing anything for McDowell or the committee at the present time, he should cease operations immediately.

"I likewise informed Mr. McDowell that I would sign the original voucher for $150, but that all other expenses incurred by Vosnjak would have to await a conference between you, Mr. DcDowell and myself."

Since then Vosnjak has been cleared, and the committee members are breathing easier. But for a time they were about as suspicious of each other as they are of some of their own witnesses.

Under the Dome

WHEN crusty Air Force Gen. George Kenney was put out to pasture, he roared like a stuck bull. The veteran air warrior didn't like being shunted off to the Air University at Montgomery, Ala., which he viewed as the first step toward retirement. In his place, Lieut. Gen. Curtis Le May was called home from Europe to head the Strategic Air Command. Reason: Kenney is 59, Le May only 42 . . . This town's name is not Moscow, but it's gotten to be a place where sleuths tail other sleuths almost as much as the NKVD secret police do. Those keeping an eye on Senator Ferguson of Michigan, for instance, noted him dining three times in one week with handsome FBI Man Lou Nichols . . . Those watching Lou Nichols note that he goes in and out of the office of Congressman J. Parnell Thomas like an animated shuttlecock.

Eye Bank's Dividends

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

NEW YORK Sept. 25.—At 9 a. m., the blind girl lay on the operating table, waiting for the miracle. The left side of her face grew numb from the local anesthetic. She could neither feel nor see the surgeon operating on her left eye.

At 9:18, she gasped with the shock of excitement—she suddenly could see the surgeon's gloved hand. Then the world went black again, but this time from the darkness of bandages.

Twelve days later, with the bandages gone, the miracle held good for the 18-year-old girl. Light flooding in through the once-useless eye gave the world color, shape and expression for the first time in 15 years. Six months later, in another 20-minute operation, vision was restore to her right eye.

The operation had put new windows in the girl's eyes. It was something like replacing blackened or painted window panes with clear ones.

This window is the cornea, the transparent, dome-shaped part of the front of the eye. Taken from the eye, it looks like a tiny watch crystal. It's about the size of a dime, but only 1/25th of an inch thick. Tough and flexible, but inelastic, it covers the iris and forward part of the eye.

Often the cornea is damaged or becomes cloudy or opaque through accident or illness. Both windows of this girl's eyes had been ruined in an accident with a bottle of lye when she was three. Except for the clouded windows, her eyes were normal.

The surgeon that morning deftly cut and removed a small round piece of the damaged cornea. Then from a donated human eye he took a piece of clear, healthy cornea of exactly the same size. This he fitted into the girl's cornea. She could see as soon as the new piece of window fell into place.

Then came the gamble—whether it would become attached to her own cornea, and whether it would remain transparent.

Bequests of Eyes

THE girl is one of hundreds of persons who have had vision restored partially or completely through the work of the Eye Bank for Sight Restoration. In three years the eye bank has obtained nearly 900 eyes for cornea transplant operations. Some were eyes that had to be removed in operations because of accidents or medical reasons. Most were obtained after death from persons who willed their eyes to the bank, or whose relatives wished to make the gift.

Of the Nation's 250,000 blind persons, somewhere between 10,000 and 15,000 are blind simply because of damaged or deformed corneas. Only these, whose eyes are otherwise normal or nearly normal, can possibly benefit from the replacement of the eye windows. With present techniques, the operation is successful in about 80 per cent of the transplants, says Dr. R. Townley Paton, vice president of the eye bank.

The fresh windows are perishable, and one main job of the eye bank is efficient timing. Cornea tissue can be preserved now for about 60 hours. It must be transferred to the blind patient before that deadline. The eye bank is assuring a supply of eyes that can be rushed to waiting patients and surgeons in almost any part of the country.

Mrs. Aida De Acosta Breckinridge, executive director of the bank, directs this task, with wholehearted cooperation from many hospitals, the Red Cross and air lines. Eyes are flown or otherwise hurried to the bank. There they are examined to make certain that the cornea is healthy and usable, and then are dispatched by air and Red Cross vehicles to the hospitals and patients on the long waiting list.

A Divisible Window

ONE good cornea can be used to give sight back to as many as three blind eyes, since only a part of the cornea may be replaced. The age, sex, race or blood of the donors makes no difference.

The bank, supported by public contributions of eyes and funds, now has 150 cooperating hospitals as well as branches in Chicago, New Orleans, Boston and San Francisco.

Another main phase of its work is research on eye diseases. One project seeks methods of preserving corneas longer. Another, which has had limited success so far, is intended to preserve the jelly-like vitreous fluid that fills the back chamber of the eye and to use it to replace damaged or clouded fluid in living eyes.

The research may lead to better knowledge or improved treatment of other types of blindness and eye diseases, including glaucoma and cataracts. Studies are made with animal eyes, and with human eyes in which the cornea for some reason can't be used, or from which the cornea already has been removed and used.

Matter of Fact

Tito, on Spot, Warms Up to West

By Stewart Alsop

THE comfortable Crimean dacha of Josef Stalin, according to reliable reports, has lately been receiving a steady stream of satellite Communist leaders. Romania's Ana Pauker was the first to make the pilgrimage, shortly after the Belgrade conference, but Bulgaria's Dimitrov, Hungary's Rakosi and Czechoslovakia's Gottwald and Klementis have followed her, to pay homage to the aging dictator and to receive his orders. For some reason, no Polish leader, as far as is known, has yet made the trip.

The dacha has doubtless been the scene of discussions on Berlin, and the question of the succession to the dead Andrei Zhdanov's post in the Cominform has probably also been considered. But the chief purpose of the satellite pilgrimage to Crimea, it is believed, has been to settle the fate of the rebellious Marshal Tito. And, from information now available, a fairly accurate picture of Stalin's timetable for Tito can be pieced together.

The timetable has already been upset by the shooting some weeks ago of Yugoslav Gen. Arso Yovanovitch, Tito's wartime comrade in arms, as he attempted to cross the Yugoslav frontier. Yovanovitch, it has now been learned, had been chosen by Moscow to become the instrument of Tito's downfall and his successor. He had served with the Red army and was considered entirely loyal to the Kremlin.

Accordingly, arrangements were made for him to leave Belgrade on the plane of Madame Pauker, Tito's arch enemy, at the end of the Danube conference. He was then to be groomed to lead an anti-Tito putsch, with the full support of the Kremlin and the satellites.

Trieste Trigger Men

THE plan misfired. OZNA, the efficient Yugoslav secret police, discovered what was up before the Pauker plane took off. Yovanovitch tried to escape, but he was caught and shot, not, it is believed, by a simple frontier guard, but by a special OZNA task force.

But a substitute for the dead Yovanovitch will doubtless be found, perhaps among the Yugoslav officers now in Moscow, and trained in the role he is to play.

This role will, of course, be much easier if Tito is dead. Therefore, efforts to assassinate Tito will be redoubled—Trieste Communists, loyal to the Kremlin, have already been instructed that it is their duty to kill Tito if the opportunity arises. The OZNA will certainly have its hands full in protecting the life of the Yugoslav dictator.

Meanwhile, the economic squeeze on Yugoslavia by the Soviet sphere will be further tightened in an effort to weaken Tito's hold on his country. Already, Russia, Albania and Romania have cut off supplies, including the oil which Tito desperately needs. If necessary, the Kremlin will certainly order the extension of this blockade to all the satellite countries, although this would be economically painful, especially to Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

When the time is ripe, the anti-Tito putsch which was to have been led by Yovanovitch will be ordered by Moscow. It will be led by the substitute for Yovanovitch designated by the Kremlin and supported by such Yugoslavs as the Kremlin can muster and partisans from all the non-Slav satellite states.

U. S. Envoy in Contact

SUCH are, almost certainly, the Kremlin's plans, which have now been conveyed to the satellite leaders in Crimea. Their scope suggests how very painful a thorn in the Kremlin's side Tito must be. The plain fact is that the Kremlin considers a wholly reliable Yugoslavia strategically essential in case of war.

But what are the west's plans for Tito? For it is pretty obvious that for economic reasons alone, Tito cannot hold out indefinitely against this kind of pressure from the east, without some measure of economic support from the west.

In general, it may be said that the attitude of the western powers is that of being ready and willing to make any reasonable arrangement with Tito, without thrusting unwelcome friendship upon him. Already, the first tentative approaches have been made.

When an oil ship appeared recently in Trieste harbor, Tito's loyal Slav Communists in Trieste approached British Commanding Gen. Terence Airey and American Political Adviser Robert Joyce. A deal was concluded and Tito got some precious oil. Moreover, contact has been established between the Tito regime and the western diplomats, including American Ambassador Cavendish Cannon, where previously the westerners were wholly isolated.

Tito has the wherewithal, including copper and bauxite, for fairly extensive trade with the west, provided he is willing to trade. And, barring a wholly unanticipated reconciliation with Moscow, the pressures which the Kremlin is already bringing to bear will certainly force Tito to turn more and more to the west for economic support.

That support should be, and almost certainly will be, forthcoming. No one suggests that Tito has suddenly become a simon-pure democrat. But in the context of the grim struggle which is now in progress, we must support Tito simply because it is in our interest to support Tito.

Accident Experts Seek Solution

Record 91,000 Workers Disabled

By Sigrid Arne
Associated Press Staff Writer

HE was a skilled worker in a District of Columbia machine shop. He was buying his house. His kids were in school. The future looked pleasant.

One afternoon a sliver shot off the steel block he was tooling. His left eye was gone.

He got the $2000 legal compensation, but his employer had to put him on a job that paid only a third of his old wages. There's now small chance of college for his children.

The California bus driver stopped at an intersection. A drunken driver careened into him, jammed the bus engine back against his legs. Both legs are gone now.

He gets $30 a week, but it isn't enough. He has lost his house. His wife works in a candy store, and he tries to keep the home running in a wheel chair.

In 1947 some 91,000 workers met such a tragedy: permanently disabled. Another 17,000 were killed outright. And two million were injured enough to lose some time from work.

Topped War Peak

THOSE figures come from the Bureau of Labor Standards, which found that for some reason accidents on the job were even more numerous in 1947 than during the war, when the big production push was on. They're leveling off a little now.

But the 1947 rate started a lot of "This has got to stop" thinking. When the figures reached the White House, President Truman asked the Labor Department to call a conference. It will meet Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

It will bring together men from management, labor, education, State and local governments, voluntary safety councils and insurance companies. This group will try to find out what we need to know about accidents on the job.

Next spring a larger conference will meet to agree on a national safety program to follow through.

Small Plants Worst

THE Bureau of Labor Standards has found that the most accidents happen in certain industries: 1 out of 5 workers was hurt in lumber and logging, 1 out of 8 in mining, 1 out of 10 in heavy construction.

In the major industries which have devoted study to danger on the job, accidents hit only 1 out of 200 workers last year.

The bureau has found that 70 per cent of the work accidents happen in the smaller concerns, where less attention is paid to preventing accidents.

Iodine Also Plays Sleuth

Salt, Given Atom Bath, Becomes 'Tracer'

By Frank Carey
Associated Press Science Reporter

GOOD old table salt—with radioactivity "built in"—is giving new aid to science in detecting heart and blood system disorders.

Another household standby—iodine—is being used in radioactive form to help doctors detect cancer and other abnormalities of the thyroid gland, and to spot hidden tumors of the brain.

The element phosphorus, in radioactive dress, is helping doctors locate cancer in the breast. And the common element iron, equipped with ray-emitting power, is being employed in the study of anemia.

These are examples of how by-products of atomic bomb development—the radioactive, or ray-emitting, forms of common elements—are being used as "tracers" to diagnose or to increase understanding of certain human ailments.

Only minute quantities of these "isotopes" are needed for this tracer work—far too small to have any adverse effect on the body.

Reports to the Atomic Energy Commission from hospitals and research institutions give the latest available information on tracers.

Tracked by Counter

TABLE SALT is chemically known as sodium chloride. Sodium is a common character in the blood stream. Thus, if you inject a salt solution containing radioactive sodium into the body, the ray-emitting sodium will be carried along in the blood stream the same way regular sodium is.

Now if you hold an instrument called a Geiger counter over the body, you'll be able to "track" the course of the radioactive sodium. This is because the rays it emits can be picked up by the instrument. These signals are recorded as sounds.

If there's something wrong with the blood channels, the radioactive sodium will become jammed, or at least slowed down.

Here's how doctors are taking advantage of these facts:

At Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Los Angeles, researchers are using radiosodium to trace the blood's flow through the chambers of the human heart. Enlargement or deficiency of the heart can be quickly determined.

One of the worst puzzlers in medicine is a condition called "thrombosis," or clot formation in the veins. This condition can lead to an even more serious one—pulmonary embolism—the formation of a big clot that is carried to the lungs.

Pulmonary embolism kills more people than does cancer of the stomach, according to doctors at Sinai Hospital, Baltimore. It sometimes kills women convalescing after childbirth.

There are medicines which can break up these blood clots, but the trick is to detect them in time—or, better, prevent their formation.

To attain these objectives doctors must have a thorough knowledge of the blood flow in veins throughout the body—particularly in the legs, where clots frequently form.

Doctors at Sinai Hospital say radiosodium is adding to the fundamental knowledge of venous thrombosis and pulmonary embolism.

Guides Amputation

IMPAIRED circulation sometimes calls for an arm or leg to be amputated. The University of California Medical School reports using radiosodium to diagnose more than 200 cases of 19 different types of circulatory disorders in the hands and feet.

"The diagnoses have been so reliable," says the AEC, "that they are used to determine whether or not it is necessary to amputate, and where to make the severance if it is necessary."

Here's how radioactive iodine and radioactive phosphorus are serving as diagnostic aids:

Some cancerous, abnormally growing tissues absorb certain elements—such as iodine and phosphorus—faster than normal. Since iodine has a natural tendency to concentrate in the thyroid gland (in the neck), scientists at a number of institutions are using radioiodine to help detect cancer of the thyroid. A greater concentration of the element than usual could be a sign that cancer was present.

In some instances it has been possible to detect the spread of cancer from the thyroid to other parts of the body.

Radioiodine also has made possible the detection of certain noncancerous conditions of the thyroid. These are overactivity, which can mean the presence of toxic goiter, and underactivity, which can mean a disease called "cretinism."

At the University of Minnesota, scientists are using radioiodine to diagnose and locate brain tumors. Researchers incorporate the radioiodine into a dye which has the property of concentrating in tumor tissue. The technique, although not perfected, has been used successfully in a number of cases.

Used on Eyes

WHERE does radioactive iron come in to the anemia picture?

Anemia is a disease wherein there is an impairment of red blood cells. Iron is a natural constituent and vital ingredient of red cells.

Massachusetts Memorial Hospital, Meharry Medical College and the University of Minnesota are using radioactive iron as a tracer to determine how much iron is taken up by red blood cells when a patient is suffering from anemia. The objective is to try to improve treatment.

All these are examples of the use of radioisotopes as "tracers."

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

$3 Steaks Disappoint Revenue Workers At Okla. Convention

Oklahoma City, Sept. 25.—The Federal worker out in this fabulous cow country can't afford to eat steak either.

The only disappointment in the convention here of a group of Internal Revenue employes was the $3 steaks—the price is as high as it is at home.

It was rotting to hear these workers say their budgets would permit them to eat meat only once every other day. That's a common complaint of the modestly paid worker who has been caught in the rush of upward prices. But I heard a new employe grievance here which is:

That there is an acute lack of equipment in Revenue offices and that many of the employes have purchased typewriters and adding machines at their own expense in order to get out the tremendous volume of work.

And these are among the people, of course, who collect about 40 billion dollars a year in taxes for Uncle Sam. I'm sure a dozen of the 400-odd delegates who attended the National Association of Employes of Collectors of Internal Revenue here told me that millions more in taxes could be easily collected if they had a bit more help to check up on the chiselers.

The 1950 budget to be sent to Congress in January may recommend funds for 7000 new revenue employes. The delegates were told by Al Cross, the deputy commissioner for accounts and collections, that both the Bureau and the Treasury Department will urge the expansion.

However, the Bureau hasn't been able to fill the 50,000 jobs approved by Congress for this fiscal year—not at the present salary rates. People are quitting the agency every day to earn more money in private industry. One office manager told me he had tried to rehire in the past several weeks 56 experienced employes who had resigned from his office in the past year.

"I couldn't persuade a single one to return," he said, "as the least any were making was 50 per cent more than we could pay them."

So it's most likely that the Administration also will urge Congress to provide additional funds to upgrade many of the deputy collector jobs which now range from CAF-4 to CAF-9. The convention went on record in support of a new and adequate pay raise and job reclassification bill.

President Truman was lavish in his praise of the work of the Revenue employes. His letter to them said in part:

"Your accomplishments have been achieved in the face of many difficulties and discouragements. They have been possible only because of the zeal and patriotism of the Internal Revenue employes, a fact which has been amply recognized by an impartial group appointed by the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

"It has been my personal pleasure," the President wrote, "to recommend that additional funds be provided for promotions and pay raises for a substantial number of Internal Revenue employes, some of which funds have already been appropriated."

Indirectly, the President took a well-deserved swat at the lop-sided and politically inspired report on the Revenue agency which was issued early this year by the House Appropriations Committee. That report was costly as it drove out of Revenue many valuable employes and broke the morale of others. A later report made by qualified experts who had no political ax to grind sharply contradicted the committee's wild charges.

On salaries, incidentally, the convention here voted to initiate the creation of a legislative council to be made up of other representatives of Treasury employes in order to pool their efforts and strength behind a pay program.

The delegates also demanded that the travel allowance of Federal workers be raised from $6 to $8 a day; that car mileage be boosted from 5 to 8 cents a mile; that longevity promotions be given to employes who are at the top of their grades for an unreasonable period of time, and that employes who are ordered to work overtime be paid either full time-and-a-half or be given 1½ hours compensatory leave for every overtime hour worked.

Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder came out here to pay his high respects to his employes. He revealed that the work simplication program had saved half a million man hours in the past year. "The same volume of work," he said, "is being produced by a smaller number of people."

The Secretary urged an extension of the work-improvement program. He reminded them that if only one minute could be saved on each income tax return that 50 million minutes could be used for other work.

750 in D. C. Classified For Draft; No Appeals

Selective Service Officials Puzzled; Total of Those Failing To Register Unknown

Puzzled District draft officials yesterday revealed that of 750 men already classified, many as 1-A, not one has appealed his classification.

This latest perplexity, they said, falls on top of another unanticipated problem: The number of men from 18 through 25 who failed to register for the peacetime draft during the prescribed August 30-September 18 period.

William E. Leahy, District Selective Service director, said he believes the lack of appeals may be caused by uncertainty on the registrant's part as to procedure.

He pointed out that each of the District's 15 draft boards has been assigned a Government appeal agent, a lawyer whose job it is to answer registrant's questions and advise them of their rights.

Should See Appeal Agent

"If a registrant has any questions," Leahy said, "he ought to get in touch with his appeal agent by calling his draft board."

Leahy and Frank D. Norton, deputy draft director, said they had "no way of knowing" how many Washington draft-age men have failed to sign up for Selective Service. Since the registration period ended September 18, however, 850 delinquent registrants have signed up at draft headquarters, 19th and D sts. nw.

A crew of volunteers will be on hand there Monday to handle any additional latecomers, Norton said. The registrars also will sign up men who have become 18 since the period ended.

Leahy and Norton reported that 51,451 men registered here between August 30 and September 18, while another 2500 cards have been received of District men who signed up elsewhere.

Of these, a total of 10,461 men are single and non-veterans, the draft heads announced. They will form the pool from which the District will supply its draft calls. The first call, in November, is for 55 men. Some 5466 men have already received questionnaires, and the total is expected to rise to about 8000 by the end of the month.

Registration in District

Leahy broke down the District registration total as follows:

Federal agencies operated 61 centers, signed up 10,802 men (21 per cent). Private industry, with 31 centers, handled 3486 men (6.2 per cent).

The Fire Department, at 34 firehouses, registered 23,425 men (45 per cent). The Police Department, at six precinct stations, signed up 4874 men (9 per cent).

The city-wide centers—District Bldg., Municipal Center, Dunbar High School, and the Armory—registered 8439 men (18 per cent.) And two American University centers signed up 425 men (.8 per cent.)

To the 1158 volunteer registrars, Leahy and Norton extended the gratitude of District Selective Service. They also expressed thanks to agencies which participated: the District Red Cross chapter, the volunteer center of the Council of Social Agencies, the American Legion Auxiliary, and the Board of Trade.

They offered particular thanks to the Fire Department and Chief Clement Murphy, to the city postoffice, which sorted some 40,000 registration cards by zone in a little over two hours, and to the Board of Education and Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, for extending the use of schools as registration centers.

Ground Is Broken For Playground At Brookmont

Beginning of construction on the long-sought Brookmont (Md.) playground was marked yesterday by groundbreaking ceremonies at the site of the play center between MacArthur blvd. and the Capital Transit Co. carline south of Maryland dr.

The first spadeful of earth at the playground site was turned up by James Arenz, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Arenz, 4101 Maryland dr., who was given some assistance by Donald H. Drayer, chairman of the Brookmont Civic League's playground committee. Among those participating in the exercises were Jesse Frank Nicholson, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and A. Morton Thomas, commissioner engineer.

The playground, to be developed by the Park and Planning Commission, will include a baseball diamond, tennis courts, a play area and, eventually, a fieldhouse. A campaign to establish the center was started several years ago by the Brookmont Civic League.

P-TA Sponsors Reception

TIME REGAINED—Jane Stark, of 1414 Hemlock st. nw., set her clock on standard time last night and prepared to enjoy an extra hour of sleep this morning as the Nation went back on Standard Time at 2 a. m.

Girl's Diary Used in Hunt For Slayer

Persons mentioned in Mary Kline's diary were being interviewed by Anne Arundel County, Md., police last night in their search for clews to the slayer of the Glen Burnie girl and her escort, John H. Mahlan.

County Police Chief John H. Souers said his men had talked to several school chums and others name in the diary kept for three years by the 18-year-old redhead.

"We haven't found anything worthwhile there yet," said Souers, "but we're still working on that angle, among others."

Souers would not discuss the "other" angles of the week-old dual murder. He admitted four young men are still being questioned by police, but none has been booked. He would not disclose their names or the reason for questioning them.

Souers said he expects to receive on Monday a Federal Bureau of Investigation report on fingerprints taken from the automobile of the 25-year-old postoffice worker after his body and that of the girl he took out on weekly dates were found last Sunday in a wooded spot 6 miles west of Annapolis. The car had been discovered two days earlier 5 miles southeast of Glen Burnie.

Souers also expects, probably Monday, a complete report of an autopsy on the girl, which may show whether she was raped.

The chief knew nothing of reports that mine detectors were used by a searching party for a third time yesterday to comb the woods near where the bodies and the automobile were found in hopes of finding the .38-caliber revolver with which both victims were shot through the head. He said none of his men were with such a party, reputedly led by the girl's father, John H. Kline, and the Rev. Edward Kirkley, Glen Burnie clergyman. Neither Kline nor the minister could be reached last night.

Souers said he also knew nothing of a story that a "break" in the double-murder mystery might come at any hour, although "I'm sure hoping for something to develop." He would not say whether he had "something" in mind that might develop soon.

Souers said he had not heard a Baltimore report that police there had turned over to investigators a story that a Baltimore hunter had seen a black sedan about 3:30 a. m. a week ago yesterday about 100 feet from where Mahlan's blood-spattered car was found.

Couple Arrested, Two Police Hurt In Row Over Dog

A fracas that started over a dog at 45 E st. nw. at 5 p.m. yesterday brought fire apparatus and police cars, stopped E st. traffic from Union Station, sent two policemen to hospital and a man and his wife were arrested.

It all began when James Gilbert, 45 F st. nw., told First Precinct Pvts. E. E. Kitchen and I. W. Brewer children had taken his dog into a basement at 45 E st. nw. Arriving there, the police said they were abused with loud language by Lloyd Price, 34. They arrested him. He broke away, ran a few steps, wrapped his arms around a tree, and the melee was on.

About 50 neighbors gathered. Two passing firemen radioed a fire alarm. Seventh Battalion Chief A. M. Grunwell arrived and radioed for police. A scout car, a cruiser, a motorcycle man and patrolmen arrived.

After it was over, Private Brewer's right hand was broken in the melee, Kitchen suffered head injuries and a cut hand, and Price was hurt on the head. They were treated at Casualty Hospital. Price was charged with being drunk and disorderly and assault with a dangerous weapon. Mrs. Price also was held for assaulting an officer.

Gilbert's dog was not found.

Arlington Tax Increase for Schools 24c

Chairman Joy Computes Cost Of Bond Issue

Cost to Arlington taxpayers of the proposed $4,750,000 school bond issue will be a tax rate increase of 24 cents per $100 of assessed valuation on personal property and real estate.

This was stated yesterday by Barnard Joy, chairman of the county school board, which plans to submit the bond issue to a referendum November 2. The board has stated that the money, if voted, will be used to build 100 classrooms and a high school gymnasium.

Joy gave the following explanation as to how he arrived at the figure of 24 cents:

Assuming that the bonds are sold at 3 per cent interest and are to be paid off over 25 years, the total annual payment of interest and principal will be $261,250.

With 90 per cent collection from a 121-million-dollar tax base, 1 cent increase per $100 assessed valuation would bring in $10,890. The tax rate increase needed can be determind by dividing $10,890 (revenue from 1 per cent $100 increase) into $261,250 (annual payment on the bonds.) The answer is a fraction less than 24 cents.

These figures include only the cost of building the schools. They do not reflect additional expense of operation.

Joy pointed out that the bonds would be considered desirable as an investment because they are exempt from income tax.

Police Pick Up Third Suspect In Yoke Case

The reported ringleader of a trio of alleged yoke artists who robbed two George Washington University students at knife point last Sunday night was picked up yesterday by two detectives of the police robbery squad.

The youths arrested Friday in the case were arraigned yesterday and their hearings set for Thursday.

Samuel Small, jr., 23, of 4500 Galt pl. ne., the alleged leader, was arrested by Detective Sergt. Paul Clarke and Detective J. T. Bailey acting on a tip, police said. He was charged with robbery by force and violence and held under $10,000 bond.

The two others, Edward Lucas, 18, of 46 Blagden's ct. nw., and Randolph Valentine, 22, 440 O st. nw., are being held under like bond on the same charge.

Victims of the trio, according to police, were Victor E. Seyen, jr., and Mervin H. Gunderson, both of 3207 Adams Mill rd. nw. The yoking occurred near 7th and O sts. nw. as the students, newcomers to Washington, were viewing the city.

Seyen was robbed of $35 in cash and a watch valued at $125 and Gunderson lost $40, police said. None of the loot was recovered, they said.

Police said they would question the trio in connection with a number of similar robberies.

Bag Containing $501 Is Seized in Store

A money bag containing $501 was reported snatched from a cash register on the first floor of the Hecht Co. department store just before closing yesterday as a clerk was totalling receipts.

Paul Herman, store detective, said the thief was a slim, light-skinned Negro, about 35 and 5 feet 10 inches tall, wearing green sweater and brown trousers.

Georgetown Gets Cancer Study Funds

Medical School Receives Grants Of $157,000 From Institute

Grants of $157,500 to Georgetown University Medical School for cancer research were announced yesterday by the National Cancer Institute.

Georgetown received one grant of $9000, and another of $148,500 —the largest single grant included in the $1,300,000 awarded by the National Cancer Institute to finance cancer research in 26 States, Puerto Rico, Canada and France as well as the District.

The larger grant to Georgetown is for renovation and expansion of the animal house laboratories, the Rev. Paul A. McNally, dean of the Medical School, stated.

Plans call for construction of a new wing to house animal laboratories and animal operating rooms now scattered through the medical school and hospital.

Growing animal cancer research at Georgetown, necessitating additional facilities includes:

Pioneer experiments with calcium 45—radioactive calcium. Studies are being made of the metabolism of calcium in normal and malignant tissues in animals. The object is to discover if calcium has potentialities as a therapeutic agent.

Heavy metal research—to study effects of such oil soluble metals as zinc copper calcium nickel and magnesium on tumors.

Studies of enzymes in body secretions to develop better techniques of detecting the presence of cancer.

The $9000 grant is for bone tumor research. This fund will be used for research into the causes of cancerous and non-cancerous bone tumors and studies to determine effectiveness of present treatments.

Girl, 3, Added To Mystery Malady List

At least one more victim of the strange, unindentified illness which has broken out in Southeastern Washington was reported yesterday.

Latest case of the grippe-like malady which continued to baffle physicians and health authorities was a 3-year-old girl.

Suffering from the typical symptoms—high fever, headache, muscular pains,—she was treated at Providence Hospital, then sent home for treatment by a private physician.

The child's home is in the Southwest section, but close by the Southeast area. Her 18-month-old sister was stricken with the mystery malady Monday; the 3-year-old Friday and Saturday.

Both girls attended a party in the Southeast section last Sunday. Their mother said they drank water and prepared lemonade mix, ate ice cream, candy, cake and peanuts at the party.

The 3-year-old girl for whom the Southeast party was held suffered an attack of the malady some three weeks ago, her mother said.

However, exhaustive tests have ruled out water as an infection source. And the malady is "not primarily food-borne," according to Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Health Department's bureau of preventable diseases.

"But it is possible that it may sometimes be transmitted via food," Dr. Cumming said when informed of the Southwest sisters' cases.

Health Department pathologists reported that throat, blood and stool cultures have failed to yield positive findings. All that is known so far is that the illness is "probably caused by a virus."

Meanwhile, no further cases were reported at Providence Hospital where 14 doctors, nurses and attendants were taken ill. Some 20 residents of Southeast Washington have been treated at Providence for similar symptoms.

The infection first struck hospital staff members on September 16, following admission of two obstetrical patients who had similar symptoms.

St. Marys County to Vote On Modernizing Schools

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 25.—Public schools are on trial in historic St. Marys County.

When residents of this Southern Maryland community vote in November they will decide whether they want to replace an antiquated system of one- and two-room schoolhouses.

Before them will be a referendum on a $350,000 school bond issue that would start the county off on a $900,000 program of improvements.

Only five of the county's 30 public schools now have indoor sanitation and central heating and less than a third have electricity.

Complicated Issue

Ten of the buildings are one-room schoolhouses and 14 have two rooms. Only three of the 30 buildings are of brick construction and two of these were built by the Federal Government.

The issue that will come before the voters, though, is not a simple one of good schools for bad. Entwined in it are religious, economic, and political implications.

A predominantly Catholic community, since its founding in 1634, St. Marys always has sent a majority of its children to parochial schools.

In the past Catholic families have shown little inclination to raise their tax rate for better public schools while continuing to support church schools.

Became Center of War Activity

During the past 10 years St. Marys County has grown in population from 14,000 to 32,500. A farm community on a peninsula between the Potomac and Patuxent Rivers, it became a center of war activity with establishment of the Patuxent River Naval Base.

The two schools built with Federal funds to provide schooling for the children of service personnel and war workers made a sharp contrast with the county schools.

The Frank Knox Elementary School, owned by the Navy but operated by the county, is a modern 15-classroom building with an auditorium and a cafeteria.

So bad are the county schools that a number of Protestant families send their children to the Catholic schools. A nominal fee of a dollar a month is charged for each child.

The county provides the school bus service for the parochial schools, last year at a cost of $60,000. This sum is approximately half of what the county spent to operate its public schools.

If St. Mary's votes for the bond issue it will be a major step. The county never has borrowed for school building purposes.

Authorized $200,000 Loan

A year ago the Maryland Legislature authorized a $200,000 school loan for the county but the commissioners by a 2 to 1 vote turned it down. They said they wanted the voters to decide if the county should go into debt for schools. They pointed out that the county still is paying off a loan of $200,000 made more than 25 years ago for road improvements.

Behind the school modernization program are the St. Marys County Council of Parents and Teachers and the St. Mary's County Education Planning Committee.

The latter group is led by Oliver Guyther, a young Democratic Party delegate to the Maryland Legislature, who in fighting for school improvements has bucked his party's leadership within the county.

W. B. Duke, president of the P-TA, is a farmer and long-time resident of the county. Noting the contrast between the two Government-built schools and those elsewhere in St. Marys, he is fighting to bring county schools up to standard.

He described the schools as "a disgrace to our county."

Tour of Schools

Duke led a Washington Post reporter and photographer on a tour which showed these conditions:

At the two-room Leonardtown Elementary School, one of the best owned by the county, children were studying in a room lit by only two ceiling highlight fixtures. A chimney from a wood-burning stove hung over their heads.

At the River Springs Elementary School there were no lights at all and in order to get a drink of water children had to walk a hundred feet from the school to a mud hole through which bubbled a spring. Hands were washed over a basin while the teacher poured water from a pitcher. This was found to be the method of keeping the children clean in all of the schools lacking water.

At Chaptico Elementary School, the children carried all water for drinking and washing in a bucket from a garage an eighth of a mile away. Although the school had been wired, lights had not been installed. Floors were uneven and the door so cracked and split that light could be seen through it.

Large Holes in Wall

At the Oraville Elementary School, where two small frame buildings accommodate all six grades, there were large holes in the outside wall. The school has no lights and the stove is too small to adequately heat the room.

"It is 11 o'clock on cold days before the children leave the stove and go to their seats," Mrs. Henryetta Burroughs, the teacher, said.

At the Negro Jarboesville School, attended by 50 high school students and 175 in the elementary grades, window frames were found to be so rotten that they no longer will hold glass. A sink and two stoves have been set up in a room for teaching home economics but only one of the stoves, which uses bottled gas, could be operated. The outside lavatories were in poor condition. The school had been electrified but each room had but one light.

This school, probably the worst in the county, will be moved some time this year to a Government-built dormitory recently bought by the county.

Regional Schools Planned

The proposed school construction program would set up a system of regional schools. Classes from the one- and two-room buildings would be consolidated to provide graded education. Three new schools for white children would be built and four schools would be remodeled and additions built. Three new Negro schools are planned and one school now in use as a combination elementary and high school would be modeled for elementary students alone. All schools would be electrified and central heating, water and inside toilets would be installed.

While the county school board has drawn up the $900,000 program for new school construction, it has taken no stand on the referendum.

The program as advanced by the P-TA and by the education planning committee calls for the commissioners to take immediate advantage of the $200,000 loan authorization.

By advancing its tax rate 5 cents on $100 the commissioners have taken advantage of a State-wide incentive program. Collections of $6000 have qualified the county for State aid of $20,000. Guyther and his supporters maintain that the county can set aside the $6000 a year for interest on a $200,000 loan and use State aid of $20,000 a year to pay off the loan in 10 payments.

$23,200 Needed Now

A $23,200 program of the Board of Education for renovating and repairing schools until the building program gets under way could be financed out of general funds, the two organizations say.

Early this year the commissioners authorized $11,200 for repairs. Over the summer months, County Schools Supt. Lettie M. Dent has spent about $4000 repairing floors, replacing shingles, purchasing new wood-burning stoves and wiring three of the schools.

Miss Dent, who has been superintendent of the schools for 20 years, believes that she has been "throwing away good money on outmoded, dilapidated buildings."

"We try to make up in instruction what we lack in facilities," Miss Dent said, "but actually we are stymied."

The P-TA and the education planning committee say the $350,000 bond issue would get the $900,000 construction program under way and establish a precedent for additional loans to complete the program.

The money can be repaid without raising the tax rate, they maintain. A few months ago the county legalized slot machines and hiked the cost of liquor licenses. This money, they believe, should be diverted into the schools.

Chinese Woman Pianist Shows Sympathy, Technical Promise

By Paul Hume

Florence Wong, Chinese pianist, was heard in recital last night in Columbia Hall at the Washington Missionary College.

Miss Wong, who has done her preparatory work for the concert in the Orient and in England, has the requisites for a fine pianist. She is, above all, musical in her instincts, and plays the piano as if it were an object to be treated well, respected, and loved. In return for her conception of music and her chosen instrument, she is rewarded with a handsome tone, colored in a variety of ways, and capable of wide latitude in sonority.

By disposition romantic, Miss Wong inclines successfully to music of profound sentiment. Schumann, Brahms, and Chopin occupied the greater part of her program, and were fully comprehended by the young artist. She is ready to play both Schumann's Carnaval, and Brahms' fiendish variations on that theme of Paganini, except for the most taxing moments. Even at times of stress her tone is adequate to the task. It is simply that technically they still lie beyond her capabilities.

Time will no doubt add those final touches of spaciousness which are now absent from these monumental passages. Other than giant demands find Miss Wong happy and poetic in her work. Delicate nuances of Brahms' variations she made expressive. Waltz movements and light, fleeting pages came out clearly. So, too, in Poulenc's Pastoral she illustrated both form and meaning in her phrasing of the fragile music.

Of her Chopin, the Berceuse and A minor etude fared best, again because their stature does not exceed Miss Wong's present attainments. It was a pleasure to hear so musical a pianist, an artist at home in her field, who understands both her art and its physical medium.

Flower Show Planned

Planners Ask Funds For Sesqui, Bigger Staff

Budget Requests Of NCPPC Exceed Current Period's Figures by $18,030

Funds to prepare for Washington's Sesquicentennial celebration in 1950 and for staff expansion to keep up with Greater Washington's growing population highlight the National Capital Park and Planning Commission's budget requests for 1950.

The requests, released yesterday by the District Commissioners, call for spending $18,030 more in fiscal year 1950 than during the current budget year. Of the $95,530 asked for 1950, $17,224 is in new funds to take care of within-grade salary advancements, and to hire an associate city planner and a statistical clerk.

Staff Inadequate, Grant Says

In asking for the money, NCPPC Chairman General U. S. Grant 3d called the present staff "inadequate" for the commission's needs, and one of the smallest in the country when compared with cities of similar size.

"In fact," he said, "the professional staff is approximately the same size as it was in the first seven or eight years of the commission's existence when Washington had half the population it does now."

General Grant said the commission feels it is "imperative" to "correct this deficiency," and cited as reasons the upcoming Sesquicentennial Celebration in 1950, when the commission will be expected to present its plans for the development of the National Capital.

"These plans," said General Grant, "the commission has yet in large part to prepare." General Grant said the commission hopes to publish its long-awaited "comprehensive plan" report during 1949.

It then anticipates "the need for preparing many supplementary and detailed studies, drawings and plans together with written explanatory material des[illegible] to secure a better citizen un[illegible]nding of the commission's [illegible]osal for the development of the community in which they have chosen to live and work."

General Grant said Greater Washington has grown by 42 per cent since 1940, and that more than a third of the present population of about 1,400,000 persons is outside the District of Columbia.

"Because of the more rapid growth of the suburban area and the tendency to locate governmental activities outside the District, the need for comprehensive planning on a regional basis is becoming increasingly evident and urgent."

Many Needs Are Urgent

General Grant said he had been furnished an estimate showing more than 60,000 dwelling units now in construction in the area. This construction program, he said, has "created needs for public facilities of all kinds, many of which have now become urgent."

"The leadership of the commission is being sought increasingly not only by Federal and District agencies but by the planning authorities in Maryland and Virginia . . . If public funds are to be expended wisely, decisions and policies with regard to these facilities should be made in accordance with sound planning principles and fitted into a general plan for the whole metropolitan area."

Parks Ask $2,304,985 Next Year

Department heads want to spend 312,385 more next year to operate the National Capital Park system of Washington and the National Zoological Park than during the current fiscal year.

This was learned yesterday when the District Commissioners released budget requests calling for a total of $2,304,985 for the fiscal year 1950.

National Capital Parks asked for $1,747,000, as compared with the 1949 appropriation of $1,500,000. The National Zoological Park wants $557,985 against $492,600 for the current year.

Most of the increase asked for National Capital Parks is in salary advancements and in increased cost of supplies and materials.

Enough money to "restore" within-grade salary advancements which were not allowed by Congress last summer also was asked.

Of the total Parks Department request, $11,032 would go for within-grade salary advancements, and $49,420 would be used to meet the $330 pay increase allowed classified Federal employes under Public Law 900. An additional $115,000 would be used to meet a general increase in the wage scale of per-hour employes.

At the Zoo, Dr. William Mann, director, wants to spend $5000 to repair the bear dens; $15,000 to buy educational equipment; $4232 for a water main. Within-grade salary advancements for 1949 and 1950 would cost another $9715, and Federal pay increases would cost $44,220.

Dr. Mann estimated attendance at the Zoo during the 1949 fiscal year would be three million persons. During the fiscal year ended last July 1, 3,040,540 persons visited the park.

Rock Creek Cemetery
NON-SECTARIAN NON-SPECULATIVE

The classic dignity of the Letts mausoleum in Rock Creek Cemetery is characteristic of the atmosphere throughout this ancient sanctuary. Beyond it can be seen the busy city which surrounds but does not intrude on the peace and quiet of the cemetery.

Originally, Rock Creek Cemetery was a small, lovely churchyard, far beyond the limits of the city which was to become our nation's capital. The city grew in importance and extent with the years, and Rock Creek Cemetery was enlarged to provide for the increasing population. But during two and a quarter centuries it has retained the dignity and consoling quiet of that first glebe.

While Rock Creek Cemetery has always been operated on a non-speculative basis and the prices of its lots have been kept low yet it now enjoys a large trust fund which assures the perpetual care of every grave. Many beautiful locations are still available and you are invited to pay the cemetery a visit. You will see the world renowned statuary . . . you will see the magnificent mausoleums that have few equals anywhere . . . then, perhaps, you will be imbued with the majestic peace and solemnity of this truly wonderful abode of those whose earthly span has passed. Stop by the office and take home one of the handsome brochures that will keep for you the beauty of Rock Creek Cemetery for years to come.

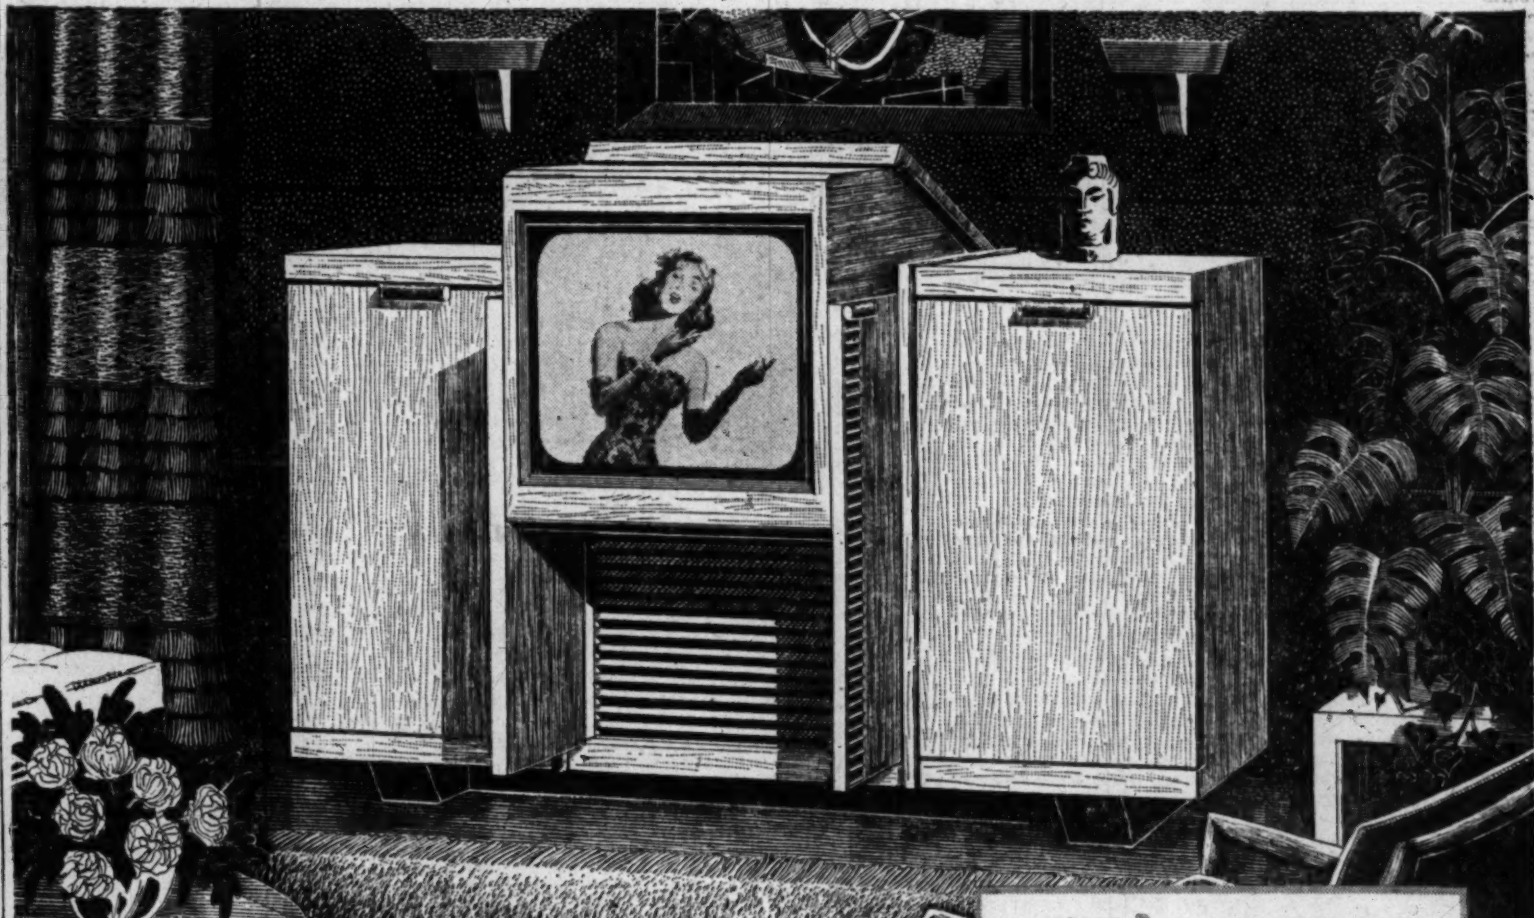
The air will be full of excitement...



There'll be sports, drama, news—entertainment for all the family. It will be right there in the room with you—but to see it you'll need a television receiver. To see and hear it at its best you'll need a Du Mont. This show is going to be good! You'll want to see it clearly. You'll want a big direct-view screen that gives a sharp, brilliant, flicker-free picture. You'll want fine tone quality. You'll want to be able to get all 12 television channels and FM, too. Well, that's the performance you can expect with a Du Mont, and we don't think you'll be satisfied with anything less.

FIRST IN DEVELOPMENT—It was Dr. Allen B. Du Mont's development of the cathode-ray tube from a laboratory curiosity that made electronic television practical.

FIRST IN PRECISION ELECTRONICS—Du Mont Laboratories are the world's foremost makers of fine precision instruments employing the cathode-ray tube for many scientific uses.

FIRST IN RADAR—In 1933, Dr. Du Mont filed a patent application which the army asked him to withdraw and develop the invention in deepest secrecy. That was radar.

FIRST IN BROADCASTING—Du Mont operates the first television network. Its key station—WABD—New York, has the largest and best equipped studio to be found anywhere.

FIRST IN STATION EQUIPMENT—A large part of the television broadcasting stations now on the air was planned by Du Mont engineers and built with Du Mont broadcasting equipment.

FIRST IN FINE RECEIVERS—Du Mont built the first commercial home receiver (1939) and was first on the market with a full line of fine postwar receivers (1946) for homes and public places.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Washington Eyed for Business Cue

A marked pickup has occurred in business trips to Washington. Manufacturers, Wall Streeters, economists and statisticians are dropping in with noticeable frequency at the Department of Commerce, the Treasury, the Federal Reserve Board, the War and Navy Departments and the Economic Cooperation Administration for friendly chats. Ultimate question: "What's going to happen to business?"

Livingston

Businessmen have butterflies in the tummy. They're nervous, as has been noted here before. They go to Washington for reassurance. Government officials, called on to administer to their pangs of doubt, develop a deskside manner. When her boss is tied up, a secretary is apt to say, "Sorry, can't get to him. He's holding a big shot's hand."

Most prevalent worry: Will the decline in grains and cotton go further? Will it spread to other areas of the economy? Next important concern: What do the Federal Reserve curbs on credit mean? Will banks stop making loans as the result of Federal Reserve curbs on credit? Will that flatten business? And some businessmen, blessed with a sardonic sense of humor, raise the question this way: Isn't the action of the Reserve a sure sign that the boom is over and the slide is on? Doesn't the Government always close the barn door after the horse is stolen?

There are subsidiary worries, too. Does the weakness in textile markets, does the promised closedown of Textron's Nashua, N. H. plant, foreshadow a general decline in consumer purchases? Does the catching up in production of small electrical appliances with demand imply a wave of cut-throat price competition?

As Snyder Sees It

The official Government answer is well known: We have more to fear from inflation than from deflation. Secretary of the Treasury Snyder reemphasized that in a recent talk to the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks in Louisville, and then went on to say:

"A high-level economy with widespread prosperity, such as we have today, does not necessarily imply that the foundation must be unsound . . . Neither production nor prices are being supported by a rising tide of speculation such as characterized the 1920 boom. Speculative interest in the commodity markets is proportionately normal. Speculation in the stock market has remained rational. Businessmen generally have been cautious about expanding their inventories."

THE GAP NARROWS

Drop in exports cuts U. S. trade surplus to $360 million from $940 million peak in '47.

Data: Department of Commerce — Prepared for J. A. Livingston

Government economists point out that the drop in grain and cotton prices can be isolated. First, because the decline has already been arrested by Government buying at support levels. Second, because bumper crops assure farmers of high incomes even with prices off. Third, because inventory losses to date are comparatively small and Government price supports prevent snowballing.

Next Turn, Down?

On credit curbs, the official line is that banks can still make advances to business for necessary productive purposes. Over cocktails, the Government official or economist will add that the banks can always sell off their Government bond holdings to the Federal Reserve to make loans. Ditto for the insurance companies and savings banks. As to installment-credit controls, which took effect September 20, the view is this: They won't stop buying on time; they'll restrain excesses, like "Nothing down and five years to pay."

The question businessmen have to decide is whether the return of a buyer's market is synonymous with recession or depression. Does it mean 1920-21, or 1929-33, or 1937-38 all over again? What makes businessmen particularly jittery is that the economy is already straining: Manpower and materials are tight. Therefore, they reason, business can't go up. The next turn must be down. The fact that many prices have stopped rising and started falling is the clincher.

Yet a price drop is not an invariable and immediate signal of a business recession. In the four years 1925 through 1928, industrial production rose 20 per cent while wholesale prices dropped 8 per cent. The break—heavily weighted by the stock market crash—didn't come until late '29. In the late '20s, State and local government expenditures on roads, hospitals, schools, were an expansionary influence. They are today. And so is the Federal Government. United States Government expenditures today amount to 18 per cent of the national income as against 13 per cent in 1939 and 4 per cent in 1929. They produce purchasing power—business activity.

Postpeace Economy

The Economic Cooperation Administration has just announced a boost in its fourth-quarter allotment to $1,769,000,000 from $1,300,000,000 in the second and third quarters. That will tend to prop up waning exports (see chart). Further, tension with Russia augurs increased military expenditures and perhaps increased aid to European countries. In Britain, the necessity to rearm has brought hints that maybe the United States will revive lend-lease.

We're not in a postwar economy at all; we're in a postpeace economy. That's what the businessman must bear in mind. That's why Government officials still fear inflation more than deflation. They can't estimate how big defense demands will be and what those demands will mean to the civilian economy.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 25 (AP).—Grains were under selling pressure during today's session on the Board of Trade. Lack of commercial interest in wheat combined with a lower cash corn market to furnished incentive for selling.

The market opened easy and rallies were not sustained. As the day progressed prices drifted lower and at the close wheat was ⅞ to 2¼ lower than the previous finish, December 2.23@2.23⅛. Corn was 2⅝ to 2⅞ lower, December 1.37½@1.37¾. Oats were ⅝ to ⅞ lower, December 72⅝. Rye was 1 to 2½ lower, December 1.57½, and soybeans were 7½ to 9 cents lower, November 2.34@2.32.

Soybeans, however, were under liquidation and plunged downward to near the daily limit. Traders believed that soybeans would decline to near the support level of 2.18 a bushel as the new crop is soon to start moving. Reports from the country are that the crop is of excellent volume and quality. Weaker prices for vegetable oils were also an influence.

There was considerable selling in lard and the futures closed 35 to 65 cents a hundredweight lower, October 17.92@17.90.

Rate Increase Pulls Pepco Out of Slump

By S. Oliver Goodman

A rate increase pulled Potomac Electric Power Co. out of a seven-month earnings slump and sent August net 98 per cent higher than in the same 1947 month.

The company's report, filed with the Public Utilities Commission, showed net income of $287,775 last month as compared with $145,290 in the same 1947 period. Principal factor was increased rates, effective on meter readings after July 20. The rate boost, granted by the PUC, was aimed to give Pepco a return of 5½ per cent on investment.

The August jump in net helped to reduce, but not overcome, the previous months' drop. The eighth-month net was reported as $1,782,801, off $237,681 as compared with the corresponding period last year.

August operating revenues totaled $2,807,200, a gain of $653,259 over last year. Operating expenses, not including taxes, totaled $1,757,954, up $293,206.

With sales of electric energy soaring to record levels and increased rates assuring a fair return, Pepco will be in a better position to meet additional capital needs. By early next year, it is expected that the company will market a new security offering to obtain funds for further expansion.

Ford Gaining Momentum in Output Race

Detroit, Sept. 25 (AP).—Ford is gaining momentum in its car and truck production but still is considerably behind Chevrolet in total 1948 output.

A battle for production honors between these two titans of the automobile industry was one of the things expected early in the postwar era. So far the efforts of both companies have been handicapped by materials shortages and labor troubles.

An all-out battle probably will not develop until the automobile market gets back on a competitive basis. Right now Chevrolet and Ford have more orders than they are likely to fill in the next 18 months to two years. Moreover, most industry experts are predicting the car builders will have materials troubles next year even worse than those of 1948.

So far this year Chevrolet has built approximately 575,000 passenger cars and 290,000 trucks, while Ford has made about 240,000 cars and 245,000 trucks. The Ford figures cover the company's Ford division only.

But for Ford's switch-over to 1949 models last spring the difference would have been much smaller. In the several weeks its assembly lines were down Ford lost a total of perhaps 100,000 units of production. More output was lost in the weeks that followed as production did not measure up to expectations.

But Ford began picking up a few weeks ago. Right now its passenger car assemblies are somewhat higher than those of Chevrolet. Ford's September car output to date totals approximately 54,000 units and Chevrolet's about 48,000. The figures aren't as significant as might appear at first glance, however, because they reflect a couple of days of materials shortage shutdowns for Chevrolet.

Airliner to Use Jet Exhaust Aid For More Speed

Philadelphia, Sept. 25 (AP).—American Airlines announced today inauguration out of Philadelphia and three other cities of a new Convair plane which it said is the first commercial airliner to be equipped with jet exhaust assist.

The jet assist captures formerly wasted power in the form of exhaust gasses and converts it into additional speed for gains of 12 to 15 miles an hour, the company explained.

American has received 35 of the new planes from Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Co., and has orders for 40 others.

Some of the planes were placed in service a week ago, the company said.

Cities included in service beginning tomorrow are Philadelphia, New York, Buffalo, Elmira, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton and Knoxville. Cities served on the Philadelphia flight include New York, Washington, Knoxville, Nashville, Memphis, Dallas and Fort Worth.

The Convair, a 300-mile-an-hour transport, is a 40-passenger ship. It eventually will replace American's DC-3s and DC-4s. The company also flies DC-6s and Lockheed's Constellations.

Columbia Pictures Omits Dividend

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Directors of Columbia Pictures Corp. took no action on a common stock dividend due at this time. The last payment on the common was 2½ per cent in common stock on May 14. # Textile Mills' Shift to South Stirs New England to Action

Boston, Sep. 25.—The postwar worries of New England textile manufacturers—long nursed in relative obscurity—broke loose this week under dramatic circumstances.

The stage was set in a congressional hearing in Nashua, N. H.—a city of 35,000 that was rocked back on its heels two weeks ago when Textron, Inc., announced the December 31 liquidation of its two mills there.

These mills, one producing blankets and the other sheets, employ 3500 workers—a tenth of Nashua's population—and have constituted its main industry for 116 years. Textron acquired them in 1945.

A subcommittee, formed from the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and headed by Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), sought to find out why the mills must close and what, if anything, could be done to keep them running.

Central figure in the drama has been Textron's president, Royal Little, and he summed up his company's position earlier in the week in a speech at Providence, R. I.:

"There is no major element of cost which is lower in New England than it is in the South. Power, fuel, freight, compensation, insurance, payroll taxes and local taxes are all substantially less in the South."

That, he said, was one of the prime reasons why Textron has embarked on a 12 million dollar expansion program in the South and in Puerto Rico.

The textile worker's job in New England will be "insecure," he declared, until he produces as much per hour as workers in other areas.

The relative productivity of the worker is the big fly in the ointment for any textile manufacturer in New England, as he sees it. Take-home pay in the North is 10 per cent more than in the South, he claimed, yet Textron employes in South Carolina produce 25 to 200 per cent more than those in Nashua.

Other manufacturers voiced similar worries.

Only in Salem was a contrary note sounded. Rudolph C. Dick, president of the Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co., denied Little's claim that Naumkeag would be forced to move out of New England.

The past year has been the most prosperous in the company's 109-year history, he stated. Naumkeag "positively does not contemplate leaving New England."

Textron has already closed several of its smaller New England plants. Will it attempt to fill the vacuum created in Nashua when it leaves?

First of all, Little recommended to Senator Tobey's committee that the Taft-Hartley law be amended "to prevent any unions in the industry from setting discriminatory wages or wage loads."

Safety Conference Plans to Be Laid

About 400 representatives of industry, labor and Government will meet here Monday for three-day preliminary sessions of the President's Conference on Industrial Safety.

Delegates meeting in the Interdepartmental Auditorium will lay the groundwork for a comprehensive Industrial Safety Conference scheduled for March 30 when more than 2000 delegates are expected.

President Truman, who summoned the conference, labeled 1947 statistics of 17,000 killed, 91,000 permanently disabled and two million injured in industrial accidents, "a sad record of disrupted lives." He asked the group to develop a practical, Nation-wide program for reducing accidents, and to give particular attention to the problems of the smaller plants where a great majority of the accidents occur.

Conferees will meet at 10:30 a. m. Monday and again at 2 p. m. Among those scheduled to speak are John R. Steelman, Assistant to the President; Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, who is general chairman of the conference, and Frances Perkins, former Secretary of Labor and now a member of the Civil Service Commission.

Board Asked to Study Prison Regulations After Inmate's Kangaroo Court Complaint

Baltimore, Sept. 25 (AP).—Reuben Oppenheimer, chairman of the Maryland Board of Correction, said today he would ask that a committee be formed to examine the board's regulations regarding hearings on disciplinary charges within Maryland penitentiary walls.

His statement followed by a day a prisoner's complaint that an unofficial "kangaroo court" is pestering him to death.

Oppenheimer said presidents of the Maryland and Baltimore Bar Associations, the attorney general and the Baltimore Criminal Justice Commission would be asked to appoint representatives to the committee.

The committee would be asked to offer any suggestions or recommendations it may have regarding prison disciplinary action, he said.

The prisoner, Harry Eyer, who is working out an 18-year sentence imposed in 1941 for armed hold-up and assault with intent to kill, asked the Baltimore Criminal Court to do something about the unauthorized court.

Judge Herman M. Moser referred the complaint back to Eyer, saying it properly belonged before the board of correction or possibly the attorney general.

By tonight, Eyer had taken no further action.

Burma Warship Levels Village of Syriam

Rangoon, Sept. 25 (AP).—A government spokesman said today the guns of the Burma navy frigate Mayu had practically levelled the village of Syriam, one and a half miles south of the capital on the Irrawaddy river.

The village is believed to have been held by white band PVO's, remnants of the nationalistic private army of U Aung Sang, who was assassinated last year. The white bands have revolted against the leftist government because it refused to compromise with Communists.

Bartender Held in Fatal Shooting

Detective Sergt. Uunzio Bonaccorsy was trying to get his eyes back in focus yesterday after a grim ordeal in which he stared down the barrel of a revolver for several torturously long minutes.

Bonaccorsy

Bonaccorsy and Detective Sergt. A. H. Molle responded to a call at the Owls Club, 63 H st. nw., at 7:45 p. m. Friday.

When they entered the front door they stumbled across the unconscious form of Henry Corley, 23, of 59 H st. nw., who had been shot twice in the abdomen. They were told the man who had shot Corley was in a telephone booth in a rear room. They raced back.

A man, later identified by police as Roscoe Banks, 23, of 63 H st. nw., bartender of the Owl's Club, was in the booth. When the detectives kicked open the door of the booth they saw that Banks was holding a .32-caliber revolver.

"Drop that gun," commanded Bonaccorsy, who was only a foot from Banks.

The man said nothing, but raised the weapon to the level of Bonaccorsy's face, only an inch or so from his nose. Although both detectives had entered the room with revolvers drawn, they were now stymied.

"Drop that gun," Bonaccorsy said a second time.

Nothing happened.

Bonaccorsy clicked back the hammer of his revolver and said huskily:

"Drop that thing or I'll blow you in half."

At this moment, Molle struck at the man's arm, knocking it down. Banks, who the detectives said appeared suddenly to emerge from his trance, tossed the weapon on the floor.

Police said Banks told them he shot Corley in self defense after the latter attacked him. Corley was taken to Casualty Hospital where he died at 5 a. m. yesterday. About a dozen persons were in the club at the time of the shooting.

United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence held Banks without bond for action of the coroner.

School Heads Deny Charge Of Contempt

Richmond, Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—Spokesmen for school authorities in King George and Gloucester Counties today said they did not consider themselves guilty of contempt of court.

Officials have been ordered by Judge Sterling Hutcheson to appear in Federal court here October 22 to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt in cases involving equal educational rights for Negro children.

"The way I feel," said Superintendent T. Benton Gayle of King George, "is that no inequality exists at present so far as learning processes are concerned.

"We do not have central heating systems, or toilets of the kind asked, or gymnasiums, but as far as the learning processes go, I believe we are offering equality."

Dr. Stanley T. Gray of Gloucester, chairman of the school board, said he did not consider that county in contempt. He said officials would come to Richmond to answer "as best we can."

Regarding a petition circulated among Negroes in King George calling for the repudiation of affiliations with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Gayle said he had nothing to do with it "although I'm in full accord with its purpose."

Snow Falls In Far West And Rockies

The United States Weather Bureau reported falls of snow, some mixed with rain, at Great Falls and Butte, Mont.; Reno and Austin, Nev., and Burns, Oreg.

Temperatures dropped to around freezing over some Midwest and New England areas in the early morning. The mercury dipped to below 32 at Cadillac, Mich., and was near that mark at Houghton and Pelston, Mich. Low points in New England included Rumford, Me., and Burlington, Vt.

The cool weather was expected to continue over the weekend.

'Tokyo Rose' in U.S.; Charges Are Filed

San Francisco, Sept. 25 (AP).—Mrs. Iva Toguri D'Aquino, alleged Tokyo Rose of Japanese wartime broadcasts, arrived from Japan today and was immediately charged by the Government with treason.

She arrived on the Army transport General Hodges, on which she sailed from Yokohama September 3 with WAC Capt. Katherine Stull and Army Capt. John P. Prosnak as guards.

United States Attorney Frank Hennessy and an FBI agent filed the treason complaint and a warrant for the arrest as soon as Mrs. D'Aquino arrived within the jurisdiction of the United States. The complaint filed with United States Commissioner Francis St. J. Fox, charged that Mrs. D'Aquino, as an American born citizen, "traitorously and treasonably" gave aid and comfort to an enemy of the United States through her wartime radio work for the Japanese government.

The complaint gave Mrs. D'Aquino's birthplace as Los Angeles, and the date of her birth as July 4, 1916.

It listed March 9 and March 29, 1944, as specific dates on which the woman, known to thousands of American troops as "Tokyo Rose," was alleged to have committed treasonable acts. The broadcasts covered a period beginning November 1, 1943, and extending to August 16, 1945, when conflict ceased.

FCC Head Speaks

Video Called Challenge to Theater Men

Chicago, Sept. 25 (AP).—A Government official warned movie men today that television is here to stay and they had better learn to live with it.

He advised cooperation, or "aggressive, imaginative competition."

Chairman Wayne Coy of the Federal Communications Commission told the annual convention of the Theater Owners of America that "eventually there will be one or more television sets in every one of the 39 million homes in America."

Then he reminded them that the motion picture business had missed the boat when television was little more than a hot gleam in radio engineers' eyes, and is still missing it.

Few movie interests went after television channels in the early days, he said, and most available channels are held by standard or FM radio broadcasters. These same broadcasters also have the bulk of applications now pending before the FCC for more channels, he added.

He suggested a study of television content, and told the movie house owners they have an opportunity to present local talent, as radio broadcasters have done, and could bring current news to their screens through television.

He suggested the movie houses use their large stages for broadcasting top television attractions. They also could use local television stations for advertising current runs of feature films by making the films available for local television broadcasting, he added.

Senator Baldwin Questions Slash In Koch Sentence

By The Associated Press

Senator Baldwin (R., Conn.) has asked a Senate committee to find out why the Army cut the sentence of Ilse Koch, convicted in the Buchenwald prison death cases, from life to four years.

The Senator sent his request to the Armed Services Committee, of which he is a member.

Ilse Koch, wife of the wartime commandant of the Buchenwald prison, was tried in connection with the deaths and tortures of prisoners. She was accused by Army prosecutors of having used the tattooed skin of executed prisoners to make lamp shades.

General Lucius D. Clay, U. S. military governor in Germany, approved a recent recommendation by subordinates that her sentence be reduced.

County Chamber Dinner

The Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce will hold a dinner meeting Monday at 7 p. m. at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club, Landover, Md. William A. Carson, president of the Prince Georges Board of County Commissioners, will outline a system for improving streets and municipal sewers in districts outside incorporated towns.

Girl, 3 Cats Found Slain

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 25 (AP).—The body of an 18-year-old girl, lying beside three decapitated cats, was found in the back yard of a suburban residence here yesterday.

The girl, Mabel Persons, had been killed by a shotgun charge in the heart.

Associate State Toxicologist Nelson E. Grubbs said the girl's body was found by a 13-year-old brother when he returned from school.

Grubbs said a shotgun was close at hand and that a long note, "written in good hand but without continuity," was found.

The cats had been killed at an improvised chopping block about 30 feet from where the girl's body lay, Grubbs added. The heads of the cats had been placed back in proper position.

The girl had been alone at the house.

The toxicologist said, "She was a good, solid outdoor type. We are making a verey careful investigation of her death."

'Blunder' Maroons Peruvian Japanese in the U. S.

(Mr. Steinberg is a former Government and U. N. economist, former research director of the Committee for Equality in Naturalization and former research associate of the Social Science Research Council. He is now concentrating on writing.)

By Alfred Steinberg

SHISHO NASHIRO works as an unskilled laborer at a frozen foods plant in New Jersey. He is of Japanese ancestry and he comes to us from Peru.

SHISHO NASHIRO

Six years ago Nashiro was brought to the United States against his will and interned under the Alien Enemy Act of 1798. In Callao, Peru, he left a wife and four children whom he has not seen since.

Nashiro had gone to Peru 20 years earlier from Japan and had built up a grocery business in Callao. He got along well with his neighbors, though he was aware of an anti-Japanese current running through political speeches and newspaper editorials.

One evening in January, 1943, Peruvian police walked into his house and took him away. They presented him with no charges and granted him no hearing. The next night he was turned over to United States Army MP's. With several hundred other persons he was put on a United States Army transport and taken to an internment camp in the Panama Canal Zone. After five days he was shipped to the United States.

For the next three years he moved from camp to camp in California, New Mexico and Texas. In 1946 he was told officially by the United States Government that he was not a dangerous enemy alien under the Alien Enemy Act of 1798. Unofficially he was told he should never have been brought here for internment. A mistake had been made. We would see what we could do to get him back to Peru.

Efforts were made by our State Department, but the government of Peru would not take him back. He then became an immigration problem and was labeled an illegal entrant. Pending disposition of his case, he was informed that he could leave his barbed-wire enclosure if he found a sponsor who would be responsible for him.

Seabrook Farms, Inc., of Bridgeton, N. J., makers of frozen foods, said it would pay him union wages and provide him with housing. He has been there two years, under what the Justice Department calls relaxed internment, or restricted parole. The Justice Department may deport him to Japan unless Peru relents and takes him back. The United States Government will not allow his family to come to him.

No Breakdown for Peru

SHISHO NASHIRO is not an isolated case. There are several hundred Peruvian Japanese in the United States who were brought here against their will.

An exact figure was not obtainable; when a State Department official was asked for a breakdown on the Peruvian Japanese, he said the figures were scattered all over the State Department.

There is Ichisuke Fujimoto, who was picked up in 1943 in Imperial Canete, Peru. He is at Seabrook Farms, too, after following Nashiro's trail into internment. He has a wife and seven children in Peru whom he has not seen in almost six years.

Eikichi Sakoda left five motherless children in Piura Paiti, Peru. To add to Sakoda's misfortunes, he has spent the last two years in the Seabrook Farms hospital, following an automobile accident in which both his legs were broken.

Kiichiro Takamura left a wife and three children in Piuru, Peru. The fact that his wife is a Spanish Peruvian and his children are all native Peruvians has not made it any easier for him to return there.

Yoshio Nakagawa had to leave his wife and 4-year-old son behind. His wife died while he was interned and his son, now almost 11, is being cared for by acquaintances in Peru.

Mrs. Aiko Yatomi and her two children, all three native Peruvians, were permitted to join Mr. Yatomi in internment. He died, leaving her and the children behind barbed wire in an alien land. Peru won't let them return despite their Peruvian citizenship.

Kako Nakamatsu is an alien Japanese. His wife, a native Peruvian, was permitted to join him in internment. They now have a child born in this country. He is an American citizen. Here is a family of three with three different nationalities.

Shimei Yakabi is a native Peruvian. He was called an enemy alien despite his Peruvian citizenship and was held in this country under our Alien Enemy Act of 1798.

Agreed on Blunder

THE ABOVE cases are part of a wartime action that this Government would like to forget. Without exception, Justice and State Department officials interviewed about it called it a blunder. Some justified it as a result of the belief of the military in 1942 that the Japanese would attempt to land in America. Some called it bad but unavoidable.

The story is somewhat of a parallel to our own evacuation of Japanese Americans from the West Coast in 1942. In their case, however, those cleared of allegiance to Japan were permitted to file claims against the Government for losses caused by their evacuation. The Peruvian Japanese who were found not to be dangerous enemy aliens were labeled illegal entrants. If Peru still refuses to take them back, the whole group probably will be deported to Japan next year.

"We want to go back to Peru," says Yasuhiko Ohashi, their leader. "But if we can't, we want to stay in the United States. It is more than a second home to us. We are all opposed to being sent to Japan. A terrible mistake has been made about us, but if something is done soon there is still time to reclaim a useful and democratic life.

"We were treated fairly in internment camps and appreciate what Seabrook Farms has done for us. Yet we want to be able to relax and drop our constant fear of the future. We want to do the work we are best suited for and we want to raise our children with a sense of belonging. They have never known this."

The general background of this story is complicated because it concerns relations between agencies within governments. Two features stand out: One was the anti-Japanese attitude of prewar Peruvian governments. The second was the desire of the United States to promote the Good Neighbor Policy and hemispheric security in Latin America.

Entered on Contracts

JAPANESE immigration to Peru did not get under way until 1900. The expansion of Peru's cotton industry at the turn of the century brought about a demand for cheap labor that led to an influx of contractual laborers from Japan. It was intended that each worker would stay two years and then leave Peru, but an increasing number of each group remained when their contractual obligations had been met. By 1940 there were from 20,000 to 25,000 Japanese in Peru.

Anti-Japanese feeling appeared in Peru with the depression of 1929. They drew attention because of their geographic and economic concentration. About 80 per cent lived in the Department of Lima and in the Province of Callao. In agriculture, they were important producers of cotton and garden products. They were active in retail trade and in the light industries.

Unlike some of the 300,000 Japanese in Brazil who were fanatic pro-Fascists, like the Shindu Renmei, no organized element of the Peruvian Japanese was ever found to be similarly inclined. Being for the most part only one generation out of Japan, probably a majority of the Peruvian Japanese retained a sincere loyalty to Japan. That would be natural. However, of the 1600 shipped to the United States for internment, there is no proof that one ever engaged in espionage or sabotage.

Anti-Japanese feeling in Peru reached fever pitch on May 13, 1940, when false rumors spread that firearms had been found in Japanese haciendas. A race riot developed in Lima and Callao, where Japanese-owned shops and bazaars were plundered.

When Pearl Harbor was attacked, hysteria swept Lima. Wild rumors spread that Japan planned to invade Peru. The government cated swiftly against the Peruvian Japanese. It closed Japanese schools; froze their assets; forbade them to travel without special permits; removed them from coastal areas and strategic zones; forbade them to fish or own firearms; declared all Japanese-held leases at an end; forced them to liquidate their businesses.

That was the domestic picture. On the international scene there was more in store for the Peruvian Japanese.

In a letter of explanation written by Secretary of State George Marshall on February 13, 1947, he said:

Cripps Can Correct Some U.S. Notions

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS arrives in Washington today, to be welcomed and honored as the chief architect of Britain's economic recovery.

It will be a strange new experience for him. If he had come to American shores 10 or 15 years ago, his approach would have sent shivers through the visa division of the State Department.

He was looked upon in those days as a distinctly dangerous character. He had the temerity, and the bad form, to make a public protest in 1937 against the coronation lavishness in London. He felt his pacifism so deeply that he made a speech inciting the workers in the armament industries to lay down their tools rather than make the implements of war.

He believed so deeply in cooperation with Russia, and cared so little about party discipline, that in 1939 he was expelled from the Labor Party executive because of a memorandum calling for a "popular front" with the Communists.

It made no difference to his critics that he was a brilliant barrister, an unrivaled authority on corporation law, a King's Counsel who earned more than $100,000 a year from private clients. He was caricatured in Punch as a rabble-rouser in legal robes, and he was derided and disliked as one of the most extreme left-wingers in British public life.

Man at the Throttle

TODAY THIS MAN has become the dominant driving force of the postwar British government. He has been the field commander in Britain's economic siege, persuading the men and women of the garrison to tighten their belts, sounding the bugle call of "export or die," and only the other day winning a whole army to his side when he gained the support of the great Trades Union Congress in his drive for greater productivity.

He is a ministerial Pooh-Bah with more responsibilities than any dozen men of lesser caliber could handle. He is Chancellor of the Exchequer, the chief officer of the British treasury, with vast powers in the fields of monetary policies and taxation. He is also Minister of Economic Affairs, and as such the formulator and executor of British production and trade policies.

Since Winston Churchill was "unceremoniously dismissed" from office in the election of 1945, probably no man has come as close as Cripps to being a national British leader.

He has just spent a week in Canada in complex trade and currency negotiations, conducted for the most part in secret. Now he comes to Washington for a visit which, so far as an average reporter can determine, will be neither complex nor secret, nor unimportant.

The occasion for his visit is the annual meeting of the governors of the International Bank and the International Monetary Fund. This year there appears to be nothing of overwhelming importance on the agenda of either organization. But Cripps, like many of the other governors, is using this meeting mainly as an opportunity to meet his opposite numbers from many countries, and above all to get better acquainted with American leaders, official and private.

He will see a good deal of Secretary John W. Snyder and other Treasury officials, who may want to question him about the drain of dollars from the sterling area, or about the prospects of making sterling freely convertible once more.

The occasion for his visit is the annual meeting of the governors of the International Bank and the International Monetary Fund. This year there appears to be nothing of overwhelming importance on the agenda of either organization. But Cripps, like many of the other finance ministers and central bankers, is using the meeting as an opportunity to meet his opposite numbers from many countries, and above all to get better acquainted with American leaders, official and private.

Intra-Europe Mainstay

IN PRIVATE and in public, Cripps can be expected to dispute what the British regard as at least three serious American misconceptions.

The first is the idea that Britain is "dragging her feet" in European cooperation. Cripps can retort, as he did in the House of Commons September 16, that Britain has agreed to make a virtual gift of 500 million dollars' worth of exports to other European countries, as part of the new intra-European payments scheme which goes into effect in October. Under this scheme, Cripps told the House, "The United Kingdom will be supplying machinery and vehicles to Europe at a rate not far short of that at which Europe will be receiving them from the United States."

The second American idea which disturbs the British is that all British industry is hopelessly outmoded and obsolete, that British workers don't work hard and that Britain, therefore, is a bad risk. Judging from Cripps' past statements, he will deny the indictment with all his skill and power.

His own productivity drive, now supported by management and labor, is an effort to make better use of existing equipment and manpower, and to apply everywhere the lessons learned by the most forward-looking of British industries.

Finally, Cripps can be expected to make it plain that Britain does not expect an indefinite continuance of American aid. He can point to his own repeated warnings that Britain cannot count on American help for more than a year; and that in any case she must be standing on her own feet when the four-year program of Marshall aid comes to an end.

Barbs Bounce Off

HE MAY FACE criticism here, especially over the Labor government's announced purpose to nationalize the steel industry, but it will not upset him. Probably no man in public life has felt so much hostility and has cared so little.

When Cripps was serving as British Ambassador in Moscow, long after he had returned from the political wilderness, a friend once asked him how he felt when he was disowned by his own party, disliked by the opposition, one man and one voice against scores of millions. "Didn't it get on your nerves?" the friend asked him. Ambassador Cripps thought for a minute, then smiled and said, "Do you know, I never thought of it until you asked me just now."

Cripps can shed criticism so easily because of his completely intellectual approach to the problems he faces. There is nothing subjective about him. The greatest faults attributed to him in these postwar years are that his approach is too intellectual; that he does not think of his country as made up of 46 million human beings; that when he saw the necessity of further rationing and austerity, he thought too little of its effects on human lives.

Because he is identified with the austerity program, and because he is a vegetarian (for health reasons), the public thinks of him as an austere person, a killjoy who doesn't enjoy his life and doesn't want others to enjoy theirs.

It is true that Cripps could no more be a back-slapping politician than a night club crooner, but he is neither inhuman nor joyless. In a small group of people whom he knows well, his nickname of "misery Cripps" simply does not fit. In his own family, with his wife and six children, he is a different Cripps from the one the House of Commons sees. A visitor who eavesdrops on his country house in Gloucestershire would find a pipe-smoking Cripps hammering a new bookshelf or puttering in the garden.

Welcomes the Press

FOR A SUPPOSEDLY cold and austere man, Cripps is a polished performer in public speeches or in press conferences. Most British ministers avoid full-dress meetings with the press because of the tradition of answering questions only in the House of Commons. But for Cripps, who knows the need of public support for his program, the press conference in London is an established institution.

He conducts a press conference with a mastery that most politicians would envy. [illegible] that everyone can get the question as well as the answer, he usually paraphrases each question before replying, and his paraphrases are more succinct and clear than the originals.

Most photographs of Sir Stafford Cripps bolster the legend that he is personally austere. One of the few showing him smiling, this picture was made as he waved a greeting on his mission to India in 1942

The reply is always quick, unruffled and to the point. Sometimes Cripps parries a little too adroitly, and enjoys the parrying a little too much, with the result that a frustrated questioner thinks him arrogant. It isn't arrogance; probably it's just long practice as a debater on the front bench of the House of Commons, where verbal fencing is an art and clever parrying a virtue.

The Conservatives used to make fun of him as a visionary. They do so no longer. Winston Churchill discovered Cripps' capacity to get things done by using him in a succession of responsible wartime posts—first as Ambassador to Russia, then a deputy leader of the House, next as leader of a historic special mission to India and, toward the end of the war, as Minister of Aircraft Production.

Now that Cripps has become virtually the economic dictator of Britain, Churchill keeps a certain awe of him. When Cripps reached his present heights in the Labor cabinet, Churchill rejoiced that "at last we have one first-class intellect brooding over our affairs."

It is risky to predict that this "first-class intellect" will become Prime Minister some day. Cripps, after all, is neither a trade union leader like Ernest Bevin nor a political organizer like Herbert Morrison. But Cripps is coming to have a following that cuts across class and party lines. When capacity, drive and intellect are allied as they are in Sir Stafford Cripps, nothing, not even a future lease on 10 Downing Street, is impossible.

Our Antarctic Claims Pose Puzzle

By Robert E. Nichols

THE Antarctic continent, for nearly 200 years a scientific enigma, is now becoming a political enigma as well.

The United States has voiced a desire to internationalize Antarctica's six million square miles. The State Department recently announced that "informal talks" to that end are being conducted with other interested friendly powers.

The move marks a complete about-face in policy since April, 1947. This is not an easily discernible fact, since the attitude of the United States has been carefully hushed up.

This writer accompanied the 1946-1947 naval expedition into the Antarctic. Although the United States was no longer at war, he was unable to report all he saw because of rigid censorship. One of the most important of these operations, however, was not in the "security" category. This was the program to make formal territorial claims in virtually every part of the Antarctic continent visited by American ships or planes.

Who ordered this claim-making, why the subject has remained a secret and why the State Department now is adopting a policy in complete contradiction of such operations are unknown.

Planes Dropped Charters

EVERY flight made by United States planes during the 1946-47 expedition participated in making claims. At the apex of each flight, the crews dropped American flags and formal charters proclaiming sovereignty over the area explored. And this involved most of the continental perimeter.

In the first 60 days, the expedition mapped more than 300,000 square miles of hitherto uncharted territory. There were more than 50 flights on which flags and claim charters were dropped. And the crews of each plane signed as witnesses of the claim-making, presumably relaying their reports to Washington.

Furthermore, there is good reason to believe that a subsequent naval expedition in 1947-48 extended the operations begun by the so-called "High-Jump" expedition.

Since the State Department, and not the Navy, formulates foreign policy, the activities perhaps do not have great significance. However, this writer has ascertained that the State Department was fully aware of the claims. Naval spokesmen indicate that the 1946-47 activities were performed in the Navy's role as an "instrument of foreign policy."

Just for the Record

THERE are two possible explanations why the United States approved the claiming of sovereignty over much of the Antarctic coastline. One is that the State Department believed it would do no harm to go through the mechanics of making claims, even if the Government had no intention of acting on them. The other is that, working independently of the State Department, high Navy officials took it upon themselves to make the claims and let the State Department take the ball from there.

The other nations which have an avowed interest in that area of the world are, for the most part, close allies of our Government. New Zealand, the United Kingdom, France, Norway, Chile and Argentina all have conducted investigations there.

On the basis of exploration, the British have far stronger claims than practically any other nation. Their men have spent longer periods in the Antarctic and their scientific reports, with the possible exception of those made by the United States, have been more revealing.

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, whose name is almost synonymous with the Antarctic to many Americans, holds the British expeditions in such high regard that twice, when he crossed the pole, he dropped not only the American flag but that of the British commonwealth, too.

Against this background of international interest, it would hardly be possible for the United States to prove a claim on the entire continent before any international body. It would not, moreover, serve any useful purpose at present.

Air Bases Necessary

THE most valuable information the Antarctic has to yield is the secret of her weather. In peace, the data which could be compiled from Antarctic observatories would be valuable in maritime commerce and southern hemisphere agriculture. In war, it would be invaluable to America and her allies.

Many of Antarctica's geological mysteries cannot be solved without the use of heavy, long-range aircraft to explore the interior. These planes cannot reach the Antarctic without the cooperation of either New Zealand or Argentina.

There has been some talk of using the Antarctic perimeter adjacent to the tip of South America for a patrolling area, to guard the sea passage around the Horn. Some strategists point out that projected new aircraft carriers could not pass through the Panama Canal, and that if an enemy should gain control of the Antarctic adjoining the Magellan, the national defense would be greatly jeopardized.

Actually, the Antarctic in the vicinity of Cape Horn has the most capricious weather, making regular aircraft operations hazardous at best.

The timing of the State Department's proposal, nevertheless, encourages speculation. The answer to "Why now?" remains with our diplomatic and military leaders.

Churchill Regime at Stake In Tories' Plans for 1950

By Alex H. Singleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, SEPT. 25.—Down but not out, Britain's Conservative Party—truly, the Tory die-hards—is ready to bet its last thrupence it will be returned to power in 1950.

Stateside, thrupence is the equivalent of a nickel. Seriously, the Conservatives are prepared for higher stakes. Within a couple of months recently they raised a million pounds for a campaign two years away. In dollars, that's roughly four million bucks.

Just as in the United States, a minority party has its headaches. Lots of them.

Should the Conservatives string along under the old high command, with Winston Churchill as their generalissimo? Should they seek an entirely different leadership in the hope of winning the millions of independents who make the difference between victory and defeat? Or should they fall back upon ailing Anthony Eden, personal choice of Churchill as a successor, as a compromise candidate who would hew close to the Anglo-American policy of close cooperation?

The question may be decided at the Conservatives' annual conference October 7. It may prove Churchill's toughest fight to retain the mantle which he won the hard way in the early years of the war.

Differences Are Domestic

THERE'S A BIG faction in the party that believes the Conservatives need new blood at the top, that they should be preparing now to bring up young men and women to the council hierarchy.

It's not only a question of leadership. The Conservative Party has been challenged both by Labor spokesmen and by prominent members of its own ranks to produce a program of its own.

This probably will be the major task of the conference. It will be concerned primarily with domestic affairs—controls, labor, wages, taxes, socialized medicine and nationalization. There's little difference between the Laborites and the Conservatives on foreign policy except in the personnel administering it.

First of all, of course, is the problem of getting the votes. Right now, the Conservatives think they have those in their pocket. They cite poll after poll purporting to show that if the general elections were held tomorrow they would be back in Downing Street in force.

It's perhaps true that the Conservatives have enough of an edge to guarantee victory "if the elections were held tomorrow." But before election day in 1950 a lot of things can happen. That's what the Laborites are gambling on.

An end of shortages, for example. That alone would make a huge difference. A big chunk of the current opposition to Britain's Labor government can be set down as a have-not vote.

It could operate, of course, in the other direction.

A tough winter this year and next, a poor harvest or two, a continuance of unsettled international conditions conceivably could produce an electoral demand for a new deal.

That's what the Conservatives are counting on.

Steel Issue Complex

A NUMBER of other issues, far less obvious except to those in close touch with Britain's internal affairs, will have an important part in deciding the election. Among them, for example, is the question of steel nationalization.

That means state ownership of the steel industry. But the problem itself is not nearly as simple as listing the objective.

First of all, it means a decision on whether steel nationalization should be undertaken in the face of stiff opposition from the industry and probable political repercussions. Then it raises the question of how far the government should go—whether nationalization should end with the pouring of the hot steel itself or include the processing into finished products.

In juggling the election figures—and results—since the 1945 elections, both Laborites and Conservatives can show statistics to prove they are presently the people's choice.

The Laborites cite the fact that since their landslide the Conservatives have picked up only one seat in Commons in by-elections to fill vacancies. The Conservatives, however, argue that the elections generally have shown better than a 7 per cent shift of votes in their favor; enough, they claim, to give them control in a general election.

From here, right now, that thrupence looks like an even money bet.

Europe Harvest Fattest Since Prewar

By Alvin Steinkopf
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Most of Europe's harvest is in, and it's the biggest since before the war.

In almost every country reporting in an Associated Press survey, there were heavy yields of grains and vegetables—heavy enough, probably, to permit relaxation of at least some food rationing.

Last year, when Europe was in direst need, drought ruined many crops. This year rainfall has been ample and increased acreages were under cultivation.

In the opinion of some diplomats and nutrition experts, the big crops came in the nick of time and should help to ease political and social tensions.

"Without this fat harvest, nothing could have prevented our going over the rapids," said Sir John Boyd Orr, former director general of the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization. "Had this harvest been as bad as last year's in Europe, no power that man can mobilize could have prevented upheavals."

Virtually all reports stressed, however, that yields of the principal crops are still under prewar levels. On the favorable side, there was considerable harvesting of crops new to many regions—notably rice, which was introduced on a considerable scale in Italy, Hungary and some Balkan countries.

Among unfavorable aspects of the crop review were a steady loss of the fertility of the soil because of shortages of fertilizer, and a widespread shortage of adequate farm machinery.

"The shortage of fertilizers is acute, with much land reaching a depth of exhaustion not known for a century," said James Dillon, Eire's Minister of Agriculture, and his concern was echoed from other parts of Europe.

Despite a somewhat easier position, there was little prospect that any considerable areas of Europe would abolish ration tickets. The most favored country in this respect appeared to be Hungary, where, after a bumper crop, rationing is a formality. In numerous other countries there will be some increase in rations, especially of the vital cereal foods.

Russian Harvest Good

REPORTS from the Soviet zone of Germany were incomplete, and some information trickling out to the west indicated there were food shortages in some quarters.

No overall statistics on the Russian harvest were available, but everything indicated it was good. The Ukraine, Moldavia, Crimea and the northern Caucasus areas, Moscow dispatches said, already have turned in to the state 126 million more bushels of bread grains than they did last year. They said there will be 40 million bushels more before the end of December. Harvesting is still going on in Siberia.

Britain's wheat crop was one of the most encouraging aspects of the harvest in the United Kingdom. Cross-section reports indicated the yield will be 18.7 hundredweight per acre, compared to 15.2 last year. Oats, potatoes and sugar beets all topped average yields.

Barley, somewhat damaged by storms, just about held its own. Some pasturage was burned out late in August. Bread rationing has been discontinued and there will almost certainly be more food of other types.

American experts said the harvest of the British and American zones of Germany is the best since 1944. Improvement in the food position permitted a boost in daily rations from 1550 calories to 1735 and there were prospects of another increase to 1845. A goal of 2000 may be reached if imports are maintained at the present level. In the 41-day period from August 1 to September 9, about 880,000 tons of bread grains were imported from the United States.

Bread Ration Up

WHEAT was a bright spot in France, and other crops, with the exception of olives and wine, were proportionately higher. Farmers were short of just about everything—fertilizers, seeds, machinery and manpower. But the wheat crops permitted an increase in the bread ration from 10 to 20 ounces daily. Butter, coffee, milk, tea, candy, sugar and fats remained on ration.

Poland raised just about enough food for its normal needs, and Jan Dab-Kociol, Minister of Agriculture, announced that the "battle of bread has been won." Wheat, rye, barley and oats crops were nearly double those of 1947, and Poland expected to be able to export potatoes, rye flour, barley, bacon, eggs and poultry.

Czechoslovakia made a remarkable recovery from last year's disastrous drought. The 1948 wheat crop was estimated at 52,700,000 bushels, compared with 36 million bushels last year. Sugar beet production was almost doubled, with an estimated yield of 600,000 metric tons.

The country will still need to import wheat, and Premier Zapotocky said rationing will be continued but that more food will be available for heavy workers.

There was a general substantial improvement in Rumania, the wheat yield being up to two million tons, compared with 1,200,000 last year. Bread is rationed, but not very strictly.

Hungary had its best postwar harvest, but production was still below prewar averages. There will be substantial quantities of corn to export. Milk, sugar, fats and bread are rationed, but supplies are liberal.

The harvest was "just a little bit better than average" in Switzerland and most rationing was discontinued July 1.

Belgium and Holland did well this year, but will import some food and continue rationing. Belgium rations only sugar and bread.

Spaghetti-eating Italy expected better grain crops, with an estimated wheat yield of 6,200,000 tons approaching a prewar average of 7,500,000. Orange and olive crops are good and there is more barley, forage, hemp, sugar beets and rice. There was a decline in oil seed crops and potatoes.

A cold spring retarded cereals and olive oil production in Spain and Portugal. Other crops were "average or encouraging" and there were some moves to liberalize rationing.

Southeast Asia's Nationalists Turn Against 'White Father'

By Harris Jackson
Associated Press Staff Writer

SINGAPORE, Sept. 25.—Two of southeast Asia's most energetic nationalist movements—in Indo-China and Indonesia—are waging a vigorous sniping campaign at the United States.

Perhaps this is due to the Communist leadership of the militant Indo-Chinese nationalists and of one segment of the Indonesian freedom seekers who are following the Moscow line. But such a line finds fertile ground in the discontent of ardent Annamite and Indonesian nationalists who once looked on Uncle Sam as their white hope—the great white father who was going to boot out the French and Dutch and restore these rich Asian territories to their own people.

This pro-Americanism (and expectations of American aid) was fostered by wartime Office of Strategic Services underground workers sympathetic to the leftist nationalists who formed most of these OSS forces. This was particularly so in Indo-China, where so many Vichy-tainted French put up not even a token resistance to the Japanese.

Aid to Dutch Suspect

BUT United States stock with the nationalists started going down when the Dutch launched their police action against the Indonesian republic in July, 1947. The United States made no all-out official move to stop the Dutch.

Later the United States helped to block proposals to have the United Nations arbitrate the Dutch-Indonesian dispute.

United States arguments and United States-proposed "political principles" were largely responsible for selling the Indonesians the Renville truce agreement. By this pact the Indonesian republic recognized, at least temporarily, Dutch military gains in the 1947 fighting.

At first this brought no serious criticism of the United States in the Indonesian press. Then the conviction grew that Marshall Plan aid to the Netherlands meant the United States was anxious to see the Dutch retain economic and political control of the Indies to safeguard Holland's future.

Now the Indonesian press is roundly critical of Americans and suspicious of American motives.

'Passed' by French

IN INDO-CHINA the Annamite press all along had been quick to criticize the United States for her role in the Indonesian negotiations. Within a month after the Renville signing, both underground publications and Annamite papers licensed by the French wrote widely that the United States, motivated by economic interests in the Indies and Europe, had sold out the Indonesians.

This summer underground organs of the Communist-led nationalist guerillas have laid a new charge at the United States' door. These widely circulated clandestine sheets and tracts charge that America is underwriting the French-sponsored Annamite provisional government and the proposed return of the former Annamite emperor, Bao Dai.

Dewey's Rocking Chair Technique Counts on 'Farley's Law'

With Voters' Minds Made Up, He Just Went Along for Ride

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

ABOARD DEWEY SPECIAL, Sept. 25. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey has talked his way eloquently through six States without saying any more than he might have said to any friendly company on his front porch in Albany.

In fact, the view persists on this train that so far as wrapping up this election is concerned, he need never have left his porch.

Advisors thought he ought to come along for the ride. He's glad he came. He likes the country, likes the people, and doesn't hate anything or anybody. He says so in his speeches. He even turns the other cheek to Mr. Truman, but not without a knowing grin.

There's always the unspoken implication: "It hurts you worse than me."

This seeming Pollyanna strategy has its Machiavellian moments. It makes Mr. Truman sound like a common scold. Besides, the President's fight with Congress and the bitter Democratic schism make the best of all possible pegs for Dewey's national unity plea.

The Ides of September

THE DETACHED and comfortable rocking chair Dewey is still speaking from on this trip was borrowed from another Governor of New York—Franklin D. Roosevelt. It's easy to relax when the pollers say there's no contest.

Dewey's refusal to make any brash pledges, or to stray far from that chair, comes from the log-book of another Democratic political maestro—Jim Farley.

You might call it "Farley's Law." It is this: In a national election, voters invariably make up their minds before the end of September. Nothing that happens subsequently changes the result.

"Farley's Law," properly accredited, is setting the whole pace of this trip. Before the Governor ever left the porch, Dewey strategists figured his election was in the bag, decided to play it safe.

Dewey sees as many people as possible, spreads sweetness and light, and tries to build confidence in himself and his "team." But he never sticks out his neck or stirs up the animals.

Kayo Once Boomeranged

IT'S A HARD ROSE to maintain in a long campaign, particularly for a trained prosecutor. As the campaign goes on, it's going to be a tougher struggle to keep from returning every Truman blow.

But the kid gloves are on for the duration. If they ever come off, you will know the Dewey "lead" has slipped.

Chafing under the restrictions, he has devised a nice, gentlemanly way of throwing the hooks into Truman. Like when he says the Administration isn't responsible for all the Nation's ills—some were just due to bad judgment.

The crowds all want him to say more—to "pour it on" Truman style. He gets his best hands when he talks about "little supreme," "bloated bureaucracy" and giving Washington its biggest "unsnarling."

It's a temptation to give them more, but his referees remember a night in Oklahoma City four years ago when he mopped up the floor with Roosevelt and lost the election.

They are even willing to swallow some of the good-natured razzing they get from the press. After Dewey in Denver extolled the riches of the West and came out flat-footed for more conservation, one wiseacre cracked:

"He's promised a fish in every stream and a bird in every tree."

Agree It's a Cinch

YET THE CROWDS eat it up. They don't work up to hysteria, as they once did over Roosevelt. But then Dewey, even when he swept New York in 1946, never played to highly demonstrative audiences.

What impresses newsmen is this: All of the trackside and auditorium audiences he has talked to to date, even those his motorcade sails by on the street, are friendly, intensely interested, and almost as certain he will be the next President as he is.

The contrast between the tense 1944 Dewey and the relaxed, informal, affable Dewey of today is more marked at every stop. His ease of manner has improved even on this trip. Second day out he made a few bobbles, like, "It's good to be in Denver" to a Julesburg, Colo., audience.

Instead of driving him back to following text, as he does on all major speeches, that started him to ad-libbing with more assurance at each succeeding water tower.

The natives like him best when he improvises. As when he laughs off a rainstorm as proof of his "rainmaking" powers, or accuses the Administration of "playing footie" sometimes with the Communists.

Starting at Albuquerque, reporters haven't been able to count on his following text even in advance release major speeches. There he got his first really boisterous cheers. Dewey promptly made a better speech off the cuff.

A Stassen Heritage?

THERE'S ANOTHER new note on this tour. Cheers from the bobbysox section are louder than any of the others. Harold Stassen used to get his biggest hand from the teen-agers. Did the bobbysoxers swing to Dewey when Stassen backed him?

The Indians seem to go for him, too, and no kidding. Down in Santa Fe the Navajos talked a lot about "Dogi Cligin." Newsmen looked into it, found it was Navajo for "Black Mustache."

Ordinarily it wouldn't count, but the courts have ruled that Indians can vote. McKinley County's first day's Indian registration divided thus: 25 independents, 53 Democrats and 204 Republicans.

Dewey might have sat on his front porch and won the election handily, as some of his staff men still argue, but this swing has helped humanize "Black Mustache," and the easy smile that now goes with it, to thousands who couldn't quite call him "Tom."

At one of his first stops, a local dignitary even introduced him as "Thomas." Now "Tom" sounds a lot more natural.

Some Senate Insurance

AND WHEN ALL is said and done about the wisdom of a "front-porch campaign," Governor Dewey still had to make this trip. To redeem even the least of his pledges, he must have a Republican Senate and House.

It isn't news any more that the mathematical odds, at least, are against a Republican Senate. The lariat curve of this swing was designed to lasso one, two or at the outside three of the Senate seats now held by Democrats. In addition, it was drawn taut around some of the shaky seats now held by Republicans.

Dewey flung loose his coattails and all Senate Republican candidates, regardless of political shading or previous condition of isolationism, firmly caught hold. When Senator C. Wayland Brooks, of the Chicago Tribune school, climbed aboard, there no longer remained much doubt that Dewey would support all regularly nominated Republicans.

THE SENATE accent of this presidential tour rook on an official note when former Senator John E. Townsend of Delaware, chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee, was assigned train space with the Dewey staff.

Townsend still refuses to make any flat forecasts of a GOP Senate but allows as how Brooks' prospects in Illinois and Senator George Wilson's chances in Iowa are looking much brighter since Dewey passed through. He thinks both will be elected.

As for the Democratic-held Senate seats, Townsend thinks Republican prospects are brightest in Montana, so-so in New Mexico and not quite so good in Colorado.

Townsend will be back for another look after the swing.

Said Townsend: "I'm not as worried as I was. The people are beginning to realize that Dewey's in."

Truman, Minus Ghost Writers, Delights the Whistle Stops

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL Special, Sept. 25.—President Truman is like a game-fish swimming upstream on this trip, and and it's fight, fight all the way.

Hardly a reporter aboard the 17-car special believes that Mr. Truman can reach his goal of a full, four-year term in the White House. The Republican tide is running strong after 16 New Deal years, and it looks at this time as if Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, one of Mr. Truman's three opponents for the Presidency, can afford to drift with it to victory.

If the decision were left to those who turn out for Mr. Truman at the "whistle stops," however, and if it were a case of personal popularity and not electoral votes—well, the outcome might be different.

They like "Harry," these people who have been gathering along the railroad tracks all across the continent and down the Pacific Coast. They like him a lot. You can see it in their faces as they look up at him there on the rear platform of the Ferdinand Magellan, smiling and waiting for the high school band to finish with "Hail to the Chief" and "Missouri Waltz."

A leather-lunged fellow in Topeka, Kans., spoke for many of them one night when he yelled:

"You're all right, Harry, even if you are a Democrat."

Some Blame Advisers

SOME OF THE editorial writers along the way—perhaps most of them—have found fault with the President's "give 'em hell" technique. They have accused him of trying to array class against class in Henry Wallace fashion, and they have cracked down on him for trying to "scare" the voters with warnings about the country "going to the dogs" or being taken over by Wall st. "gluttons of privilege" if the Republicans win in November.

Occasionally, an editorial writer will excuse Mr. Truman, taking the tack that, after all, it is his advisers who have put him up to saying these things in a campaign of desperation.

This is almost certainly wrong.

It is true that the President is an amiable man, a man of good will. It is true, also, that he is one of the most bullish of men where the future of the United States is concerned.

But it also happens that he is a political feudist, one who came up in a rough-and-tough school in the border State of Missouri. Gov. Earl Warren can talk about a "wholesome" campaign in this fateful political year. So far as Mr. Truman is concerned, that word applies only to foreign policy.

On the domestic front, Mr. Truman is embarked on a campaign which he has promised will be "a record" for a Chief Executive, and there is no indication that it is going to be lofty or polite. He doesn't see any good reason why it ought to be, which explains his taunting of Governor Dewey for indulging in "double talk."

What he is trying to do, basically, is to get people to go to the polls November 2—to get them to go in such numbers as the country has never seen before.

He is convinced that a majority of Americans are big-D Democrats at heart, and that they can save the day for him if they will only bestir themselves.

At almost every stop he has reproached voters for their laziness, politically speaking. He has called them "shirkers" right to their faces.

"I'm asking you and urging you, with everything I have, to exercise that God-given right, which in this country is sacred, to go to the polls on the second of November and cast your ballot for the Democratic ticket," he says.

"If you will do that, I won't have any real estate problem—I can stay in the White House for another four years."

Assist From Grandpa

IT MUST BE apparent now, even from a distance, that there are two Trumans. One is the Truman who reads his "major address" from a prepared text, and more often than not leaves his audience cold; the other is the Truman who wows them with his off-the-cuff remarks at the whistle stops.

More and more now, the Chief Executive is getting interpolations into his manuscript orations. These help a lot, relieving the yawn-producing monotone in which he reads. The first example of this came in Salt Lake City, where he brought grandpa into the picture.

Grandpa was quite a fellow back in the last century, and it may be that he is getting his grandson some votes today.

At any rate, Mr. Truman completely captivated the Mormons and others when he told a story about his ancestor. He recalled how grandpa, driving an ox-drawn covered wagon loaded with merchandise, arrived in Salt Lake City and was befriended by Brigham Young, the Mormon leader of that day.

Then he pointed out that George Albert Smith, the present Mormon leader, had greeted him and was now on the platform. "Oh, how I wish my old grandfather could see me now," he exclaimed, and the audience was his from there on.

Mr. Truman's talks from the rear platform of his special train are all off the cuff. They are delivered in straight-from-the-shoulder fashion, and are full of punch, laughs and fire. True, his remarks are not always models of rhetoric as, for example, when he said in Des Moines:

"I understand the thinking of the people in this part of the world because I think as you do and you think as I do—I think."

It is noticeable, however, that nobody ever yawns or gets restless when Mr. Truman is being himself and is free from his ghost writers.

Our War Stockpile Is Mostly Mirage

By Clarke Beach
Associated Press Staff Writer

DON'T feel too cozy about that national stockpile of critical and strategic materials you've heard so much about.

If a new war should begin in the next year or so, we'd be caught short, just as we were in the past two wars.

The stockpiling project never was conceived on a very ambitious scale. Even at that, it is far behind schedule and off balance. Until recently, the pile contained no supply whatever of half the 60-odd materials on the critical list.

Today only about 20 per cent of the total projected pile has been accumulated.

These facts were freely presented by Munitions Board members in testimony before congressional committees last session and in the board's recent publications.

The board has the job of acquiring materials for the stockpile. But Congress and the Administration set the goals and provide the funds.

Some members of Congress feel that the operation is badly conceived, that it depends too much on buying in foreign countries and too little on developing supplies here.

Six bills were introduced last session to provide Government subsidy to expand American mining enterprises. None got far, but it is expected they'll come up again next session.

Sights Set Low

OFFICIALS here began talking about stockpiling in 1944. Congress asked the Munitions Board to propose objectives, which it did in January, 1945.

It presented two plans, one with minimum and the other with maximum objectives.

The board says the larger plan would have laid aside an ample supply of essential materials of which we produce relatively little or none in this country. With the pile, it says we would have to depend very little on foreign sources during a war, and we would never have to use extreme measures, as we did in the last war, to furnish essential industries with materials.

Instead of that, the minimum plan was chosen. The board says it provides just enough to skimp by in case we get in a war that lasts five years—that we'd have to depend heavily on foreign sources and exert great pressure on the civilian economy to preserve and increase domestic supplies.

It is costing $3,403,000,000. Some officials have privately estimated that the maximum plan would have cost about 12 billion dollars.

The buying of materials was started in 1946, on a small scale so as not to drive up prices and not to deprive industry of the supplies needed for reconversion.

Last spring the operation was put into high gear. For the fiscal year ending next June Congress has provided about twice as much money and contracting authority as in the entire first two years of the program.

7-Year Prospect

OF THE 20 per cent of the stockpile accumulated, most came from Government surplus property. Contracts have been signed for about 7 per cent more.

If the Munitions Board uses all its buying and contracting power, by the end of June, 1949, it will have deliveries or contracts for about 40 per cent of the total projected pile.

The original plan was to get the pile assembled within five years. Now Rear Admiral Roger W. Paine, former Navy member of the board, sees no way the goal can be reached in less than seven years.

"We are in a bad condition as far as our stockpiling operations are concerned," the admiral told a House Public Lands Subcommittee last session.

He cited particularly the pile's lack of balance—some materials lagging far behind others.

Thomas J. Hargrave, former chairman of the board, told a House Appropriations Subcommittee last January that the board had purchased practically no tin, lead or zinc. Industry needed the entire available supply.

A board official says, however, that the pile now contains at least a little of everything on the critical list except certain oils. Their perishable nature makes them difficult to handle.

ECA Spurs Output

THE BASIC reason for the lag in stockpiling is the relative scarcity of supplies in world markets. The Economic Cooperation Administration is seeking to increase foreign production by using Marshall Plan funds to build up certain industries.

The Munitions Board is trying to stimulate raw material production in this country and abroad by the use of long-term contracts, providing delivery within three to five years. This assures the producer a market and helps him finance new equipment.

Some mining-State Congressmen and Senators, assisted by a few farm bloc legislators, contend that the safest procedure would be to develop American production in fields in which we are now deficient. They propose a premium price plan, such as the Government provided for copper, lead and zinc during the war, to guarantee the producer a profit.

Agriculture is subsidized, they argue, and the mining of critical materials is as vital as farm production.

But the experts disagree as to whether some materials could ever be satisfactorily produced here. There are deposits of practically every mineral on earth in the American soil, but many are so scattered and of such poor quality that they have seemed unworkable.

Interior Secretary Krug says that to do all the exploring and testing necessary to find out just what lies beneath our land would cost about a billion dollars and would take 20 years.

4-Motor Plane Just Yo-Yo to A Hurricane

By Wilbur Jennings
Associated Press Staff Writer

MIAMI, Sept. 25.—Bucking broncos and hurricanes have something in common, say the Navy fellows who fly in the big four-engine Privateers on hurricane-hunting trips.

Ensign R. G. Killian of Blacksburg, S. C., aerologist, who has been in 18 typhoons in the Pacific and seven hurricanes, says:

"The plane goes up and down like a yo-yo. Or a rubber ball smacked against the pavement."

These crews, usually eight to a plane, take their hurricane work as an adventure. Danger enters into it sometimes, but not often.

Flying below and into the hurricanes, these planes with their weather instruments and radar have enabled storm forecasters to give many hours of advance warning and to have information on every change in a storm's path or intensity.

It wasn't long ago that the weather bureaus depended entirely on ships at sea and obscure weather stations. Those are still playing a big role, for it's the ships that usually discover the storms. But for watching the progress of a hurricane, the plane is important.

Patuxent River Base

THE Navy has nine planes equipped for weather observation. Six are based at Miami and others at Patuxent River, Md., and San Juan, Puerto Rico. When the hurricane season ends—about November 15—they return to combat training.

The Army also charts the storms with planes, flying from Tampa and Bermuda.

The Army and Navy have weather centrals in Miami to which planes relay their information while flying into the storms.

Hurricane crews are briefed before leaving for a storm. Observations are taken every 15 minutes or half hour for wind direction, velocity, surface pressure, flight conditions, state of sea and cloud formations.

Storm clouds extend from a few feet above the ocean to 35,000 or 40,000 feet in the air. The planes usually fly beneath the clouds, close to the boiling sea.

The planes, thanks to radar, do not go into the more turbulent parts of a storm if it can be avoided. But frequently the 55,000-pound ships are sucked in and have to fight their way out.

The crews fear most the isolated thunderheads which radiate from the center like wheel spokes. Here are the deadliest winds and torrential rain which seems like a solid mass.

Only the two pilots are strapped in. They work the controls as a team. It's too much of a job for one man. The other crewmen grab for anything—sometimes thin air—when the plane suddenly drops a few hundred feet or is pushed up just as far. No one ever has been badly hurt in the bouncing around, but most of the crew later complain of soreness when they sit down.

Jettisoned Equipment

LIEUT. (j.g.) A. B. CARLSON and his crew had a narrow and dramatic escape recently off the North Carolina coast while scouting an Atlantic hurricane.

They left Miami to fly around the storm with information that it had halted. To the contrary, they found it moving along at a fast clip and spreading out. The more they flew, the broader the storm and the emptier their gas tanks.

Night came over the ocean and they radioed their plight. Aboard, an emergency was declared.

Fire axes were brought out and 2000 pounds of excess equipment was chopped away and thrown overboard. Clothes, food, dishes and Killian's billfold went along.

Airfields along the entire Atlantic Coast were lighted. Ships at sea stood by.

The plane crossed the North Carolina coast and the Elizabeth City Coast Guard base "talked them in."

"When we landed, there was hardly enough gas to wet the bottom of the tank," said Carlson.

"Why didn't you abandon plane?" he was asked.

"In that wind?" he said.

Scientists on Atlantis Take Prize Ocean Core

OUTRUNNING the Atlantic hurricane, the research ship Atlantis berthed at Woods Hole, Mass., this month with a scientific expedition that had secured the largest core ever obtained from the ocean floor by American oceanographers.

It has also brought back color film of undersea life taken at depths as great as 3 miles. Submarine color has heretofore been limited to very shallow waters.

The prize core, measuring 30 feet 10 inches, is more than three times the length of cores taken before by United States scientists, according to Dr. Maurice Ewing, the expedition leader. The samples of ocean bottom were captured with a new coring tube 40 feet long and weighing 800 pounds.

Estimating that sediment is deposited on the ocean floor at the rate of an inch in 2000 years, the scientists conclude that the 30-foot-10-inch core provides a cross-section of marine geology representing no less than 740,000 years.

The expedition, sponsored jointly by the National Geographic Society, the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution and Columbia University, reported that the specimens and data were obtained despite persistently adverse weather. Because of the hurricane, it was necessary to abandon the final days of research and run for the home port.

Plane Plant Going Inland

Bill's Job Is Moving Away

By Don Ross

STRATFORD, Conn., Sept. 25.—Bill Kovacs loves his job, his wife and his little house here, but he is in a dilemma. He will soon lose either his job or his house.

His job—making Navy fighter planes at the vast Chance Vought plant here—is about to leave for Texas. But his five-room house, with its trim lawns, its flowers and the open-air fireplace which he built, is the first house that Bill and his wife, Judy, ever owned, and they love every inch of it.

The company has invited Bill, who is 31, to be one of the 1500 key employes it is transplanting to Grand Prairie, Texas, where the concern will be relocated. Besides moving all these workers, their families and belongings, the transfer involves taking 60 million pounds of machinery to the new site—about 1700 miles from here and 12 miles from Dallas.

The mass movement, which will cost an estimated six million dollars, began this spring and is expected to be completed early next summer. It is being undertaken to lessen the plant's vulnerability to possible bombing attacks, to cut costs and to improve production. The company loses many valuable hours of test flying time here, it was pointed out, because of unfavorable weather.

Called upon to choose between his house and his job, Bill said at first he'd go to Texas. But when the company set a definite departure date for the Kovacs and their two daughters, Barbara, 7, and Karen, 3, Bill suddenly said he couldn't go. The company pays all moving expenses and will pay the same wages in Texas as here.

Bill's boss, understanding his problem, has told him he may have a little more time—two or three weeks—to make up his mind definitely. Bill knows he can sell the house at a handsome profit.

The plight of the Kovacs is not unique—most of the other key employes have faced the same difficult decision. Already 216 workers and their families have been moved to Texas.

The "vast majority" of the others have accepted the invitation to move, the company said. But some, like Thomas A. Bragdon, 34, a structural design engineer, have refused to leave. He and his wife, Marjorie, are natives of Middletown, Conn., and they are sure that Texas will provide nothing to equal the swimming and clamming in this vicinity.

Production here will be gradually curtailed and at the same time stepped up at Grand Prairie in an air-conditioned plant that was occupied during the war by North American Aviation. By next summer about 5000 persons will be made idle here.

Denver Thinks Its Youthful Mayor 'Sticks His Neck Out'

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

THE revelation that Denver is a very fine metropolis, besides being the Capital of Colorado and the twenty-fourth largest city in the country, may not find favor with some Washingtonians who remember what happened to the Redskins there recently.

Washington's professional gridiron favorites were badly drubbed, but through no fault of Denver's. Mark that up as the doings of the Chicago Cardinals and a different story altogether.

The Redskins liked Denver. And among the sports writers who covered the Redskin loss, this reporter found Denver little short of wonderful.

It isn't just the surface things about Denver that you like. But such items as its cleanliness (which reminds you of Washington), its weather (which doesn't), and the friendliness of its people can't be overlooked for the excellent first impression they provide.

Digging deeper, you find that "Little Washington," as some newspapers refer to it because of the numerous Government offices there, is a city in the throes of progress. Underneath its pretty exterior a growth is taking place, and sometimes the city writhes with the pain it causes.

An Accessible Sort

IN THE middle of the progressive movement is Quigg Newton, a youthful mayor with youthful enthusiasm, a democratic outlook and a purpose in life: to make Denver the Nation's best city in which to live.

You'd like to talk to Newton? His name's in the phone book; no foolishness about unlisted numbers. Find "Newton, J. Quigg, jr., —Freemont 1020," and a nickel gets you through to the Newton residence, where Socialite Mrs. Virginia Newton may have to call her husband in from raking the leaves in the front yard, or playing with their three daughters on the swings.

Newton, a Navy veteran, is just turned 36. He has a lot of progressive ideas—some say he's always "sticking his neck out." But a short time around Newton, watching him administer his mile-high city, and you decide the chunky mayor's neck may suffer but Denver won't.

Traffic, health, the budget, housing, taxes, schools, official salaries, the Denver airport, taxi rates and recreation have all come under the eye of Newton during his year and a half at the helm. His city is now the kind of place where a Supreme Court justice, as gleefully reported by Time Magazine, is not above being fined for a traffic infraction.

Bubbles for Britain

NOTHING is too inconsequential to escape the attention of young Quigg. On one occasion he shipped a case of bubble gum to children in England when they wrote that they'd heard of the stuff but never had any. Another time he personally led a campaign to provide Denver with 75,000 garbage pails.

On a larger scale, it was his eagle eye which was first to detect a flaw in the city auditor's recent estimate of the treasury surplus. It was a mere 2-million-dollar mistake.

With all its improvements, and old-timers tell you Denver wasn't always such a "dream city," Newton's domain of half a million souls right now is a little dubious about the regime that began in May, 1947, when the 20-year reign of "Old Ben" Stapleton came to an end. That was when the Denver Post, most powerful organ in the Rockies, backed the youthful son of a wealthy Western family and saw him come off with a vote margin of something like 79,000 to 17,000 over the well-entrenched Stapleton machine.

A recent newspaper poll of Denver voters found 40 per cent of them disapproving of Quigg Newton's policies. That was an enormous increase in disfavor over a few months before, when only 7 per cent of the citizens had objections to Newton's regime.

Can Yield a Point

THAT does not necessarily indicate that Newton will be ousted at the next election, however.

Newton, a Yale law graduate who once worked in Washington as legal assistant to

Mayor Quigg Newton at the Redskin-Cardinal game. His face fell when the Washington club lost

Justice William O. Douglas, then chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, admits his administration hasn't been a path of roses.

"We have sometimes run, sometimes walked, sometimes stumbled," he says. "But we think it has always been in the right direction."

The mayor's power is not used without discretion. When he thought that a trailer camp on the outskirts of the city was a menace to health, he gave it just so long to close. But a delegation from those trailers, marching on city hall, convinced him he would leave thousands homeless, and he rescinded his order until adequate housing could be provided.

He's a publicity-wise gent. Every week he speaks over Station KLZ, informing his city of its progress on the "Mayor's Mailbag" program. He answers questions, outlines new plans and defends legislation already put through.

At the recent Redskin-Cardinal game, Newton sat down front and howled his disappointment that Washington lost.

But, as we said before, that loss certainly wasn't Denver's fault.

Internees Caused Official Wrangle

"Promptly after Pearl Harbor, the foreign ministers of all the American republics met at Rio de Janeiro and they agreed upon a comprehensive series of measures against Axis aggression, among which Resolution XVIII set forth many security measures to be taken against Axis espionage, sabotage and other forms of Axis political, or nonmilitary, warfare. In a conformity with these agreements, and with specific recommendations regarding detention of dangerous enemy nationals thereafter formulated for all the republics by the Emergency Advisory Committee for Political Defense, an inter-American security agency created at the Rio conference, certain republics instituted their own programs for internment of dangerous Axis nationals, and this Government agreed with certain others to make available its detention facilities for such resident enemy aliens as those republics deemed a menace to the security of the hemisphere in collaboration with their sister republics." It was this last arrangement that brought us the Peruvian Japanese.

Under the basic agreement on hemispheric security, main attention was directed to the German aliens in Latin America. In some countries Nazis controlled the heavy industries and communication and transportation facilities.

Most of the Nazis who were picked up slipped out of detention after a few days by bribing their jailers. It was then that the State Department suggested to the Latin American countries that we be allowed to intern their dangerous enemy aliens.

In addition, the State Department asked those countries to let the United States coordinate the exchange of Western Hemisphere citizens held by the Axis for Axis citizens held in the Western Hemisphere.

Unexpected Obligation

WE DID NOT plan on getting any Japanese, but to gain Peruvian cooperation in hemispheric security, the State Department agreed to take those Japanese that Peru labeled as dangerous enemy aliens.

A later justification for the decision came when the Red Cross reported that Americans and Europeans held by the Japanese might die if the war lasted more than two years. The program then became one to exchange the Peruvian Japanese for Occidentals in the Orient.

In all, Latin America sent 2118 Japanese to the United States. About 80 per cent of these were from Peru. Of the total, 1024 were involuntary internees and 1094 were their family members who came voluntarily. About 1700 Latin American Japanese eventually were sent to Japan.

Many of the early arrivals objected to going to Japan, and as our policy was to ship only those who wanted to go, the rest were interned. After the September, 1943, trip of the Gripsholm, no more internees were sent to Japan because Japan refused to guarantee safe passage to ships carrying repatriates from the transfer point in East Africa.

As the number of interned Japanese grew, the Justice Department urged the State Department to halt the influx from Latin America. And when Japan in effect halted repatriation, the Justice Department insisted on a larger role than than of jailer.

The Justice Department had become convinced, from examination of the Peruvian Japanese in this country, that Peru was not sending dangerous enemy aliens. Upon the insistence of Edward J. Ennis, then Justice Department director of alien enemy control, the State Department was notified that no more Peruvian Japanese would be interned unless there was conclusive proof that they were dangerous enemy aliens, or unless they were voluntary family internees.

The Peruvian Japanese children at Seabrook Farms. Those under 5 were born in this country and are United States citizens. Of the 150 such Peruvian Japanese children now in the United States, 25 are United States citizens. If their parents were deported to Japan, they would go with them as dependents

The State Department argued that it was dealing with a sovereign state, that the deal had been made at the government level and could not be abrogated merely because a government agency without authority in foreign affairs objected to it.

D. J. Won Its Point

WHILE THE argument continued between the two departments, several hundred more unscreened Peruvian Japanese arrived. Finally the Justice Department declared that Peru had every right to intern all her Japanese and the State Department could intern all the unscreened Peruvian Japanese it wanted to, but the Justice Department would not cooperate further.

The State Department, inexperienced in running internment camps, gave in. From that point, all proposed involuntary internees from Peru were screened, and no more involuntary internees of Japanese ancestry came to the United States.

When the war ended, most of the Peruvian Japanese were in the internment camp at Crystal City, Tex. Originally a small migratory labor center in the Texas spinach-growing area, the camp was greatly enlarged by the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service when the exchange program broke down.

Living conditions were adequate at Crystal City. Houses, hospitals, schools, clothing, food and entertainment were provided and canteen privileges could be earned by physical labor.

In November, 1945, 138 persons were shipped to Japan; in December, 1945, 677 went; and in February, 1946, 81 went. None went to Japan after that date. All who did go went voluntarily. They went because they felt Peru would not take them back and they did not think they would be welcome to remain in the United States. They knew their families in Peru would be able to go to Japan but not to the United States.

150-Year-Old Device

DURING THE WAR, the Peruvian Japanese in this country were held under the Alien Enemy Act passed by the Federalists in 1798 when the United States was threatened with a war with France. French aliens in the United States at that time were quite outspoken. The act gave the President the power in time of war to arrest, imprison and deport all enemy aliens whom he thought were dangerous.

The act was not enforced then because we never declared war against France. But in 1942, almost a century and a half later, it was used to justify the internment of Peruvian Japanese.

Many of the Peruvian internees, while of Japanese ancestry, were Peruvian citizens. Some were native-born; others were naturalized. In no way could they be called enemy aliens. About 25 children were born to these people in the United States. According to our laws, they are American citizens.

On April 9, 1946, Jonathan B. Bingham, chief of the alien enemy control section of the State Department, announced that the Peruvian Japanese were no longer considered dangerous enemy aliens. They had been checked and found innocent. The job now was to get them back to Peru and close their case.

One month later, Spruille Braden, then Assistant Secretary of State, informed the American Civil Liberties Union that the Peruvian government "has taken the position that only those Japanese who are considered to be Peruvian citizens may be permitted to reenter Peru."

Needling by the State Department resulted in Peru's acceptance of 79 Peruvian Japanese in 1946, two thirds of whom were voluntary internees. All subsequent efforts to return the rest to Peru have failed.

Given Special Status

FOLLOWING their release from the classification of dangerous enemy aliens, the Peruvian Japanese fitted into only one category under our immigration laws. Because they possessed no credentials showing legal entry, they were illegal entrants, although they were brought against their will.

The Justice Department fashioned a program of "relaxed internment" or "restricted parole" for the Peruvian Japanese. Until their future was settled, they could go anywhere in the United States, provided they went to a sponsor approved by the department, and if they promised to make themselves available at any time for whatever action the department took regarding them.

C. F. Seabrook, owner of the world's largest fruit and vegetable farm and biggest dehydrating, canning and freezing plant, heard of the Peruvian Japanese. He invited them to Seabrook Farms. About 300 went in the fall of 1946. About 150 are still there. The remaining 150 are scattered over the country, having found other sponsors, mainly in Western States.

At Seabrook Farms they are paid the going union wage rate and are provided with inexpensive housing, schools, a hospital and a fine child care center and community house. Outside of working hours, they are free to do what they like.

But even at Seabrook Farms the Peruvian Japanese are handicapped. For tax purposes, the Internal Revenue Bureau classifies them as nonresident aliens. Thirty per cent of their daily pay above $1.80 is withheld with no allowance for dependents. Hardships to large families under this policy are obvious.

Last Note Unanswered

WHILE THE Justice Department feels it has authority to deport these people to Japan, it has refrained from doing so until the State Department decides that its negotiations with Peru regarding them are hopeless.

The last strong note was sent to Peru in May. Peru said then that it would take those who could prove close family ties in Peru. The State Department made a careful check of all the Peruvian Americans in this country and sent its detailed findings to Lima. Peru has not answered.

If Peru remains adamant, these people could be given legal residence in the United States and their families could be brought to them by congressional action or by a change in the administrative procedure of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. If the Justice Department ever attempts to deport them to Japan, one of the most serious civil liberties cases in our history will come before our courts.

35,000-Year-Old Murder Will Out

BRIGHTON, ENGLAND (AP).

Ritual murder 35,000 years ago by English savages is believed to have been the fate of a woman whose spear-pierced skull has been found buried under hundreds of tons of rock in a cave near Whaley, in Derbyshire.

A. L. Armstrong, who calls the woman "The Mysterious Lady of Whaley," uncovered the remains. He announced his find in a lecture to the British Association meeting here.

"The woman lived before the last Ice Age and she may have been a chieftainess or a witch doctor," he said. "She had been beheaded and her skull was deliberately buried in a box formed by rock slabs."

Odd Omissions In New Edition Of 1473 Essay

THE PHILOBIBLON. Richard de Bury. Introduction by Archer Taylor. University of California Press. 110 pp. $3.50.

RICHARD de BURY, during a useful life that ended in 1345, had been tutor to Edward III when he was Prince of Wales, diplomat, Bishop of Durham and an ardent collector of books, employing members of the mendicant orders to increase the scope of his book-hunting.

Toward the end of his life he wrote the essay in Latin, the Philobiblon (Love of Books), that first circulated in manuscript and was among the first books to be printed, appearing in 1473. With its many quotable lines, such as, "No man can serve both books and Mammon," it has been an affectionately regarded classic ever since.

In the present handsome edition, neither the translator nor the seal (?) reproduced as a frontispiece is identified—curious omissions for a university press book. In his introduction, Archer Taylor says De Bury was born near Bury St. Edmunds in Surrey in 1287, but does not explain why Surrey instead of Suffolk, and why 1287 instead of 1281 as is usually given. # A Lyric Poet Persists in an Atomic Age

ROBERT NATHAN
. . . Clings to the simple

LONG AFTER SUMMER. By Robert Nathan. Knopf. 146 pp. $2.

THE art of Robert Nathan continues in this, his twenty-seventh volume, to reveal the mind of a man who has refused to accept many of the basic tenets of his time.

In the ugliest era of recent history he continues to find beauty.

In the most materialistic decade since the 1880s he has refused to burden his novels with materialism.

In year three of the atomic age he still continues to believe in the essential goodness of human kind.

In a period of overwhelming complexity he clings to the simple and the universal.

In a probably doomed world, frightened by the sense of onrushing time, he has found that even time is an abstraction.

Nathan's mental processes are not profound. He is essentially the lyric poet in an age that has little use for poets. He is in perpetual search of a remembered dawn, a half forgotten Eden. His scene may be New York City or Cape Cod, but in reality it is Lost Atlantis.

All of which is another way of saying that if the reader is momentarily annoyed with Nathan for playing the perennial emotional ingenue of fiction, it is more the fault of the world than the fault of the author.

"Long After Summer" is typical Nathan. It is a slight but haunting story of a writer who lives on Cape Cod, to whose cottage comes a 14-year-old orphan girl. Johanna, this lonely and undesired child, falls innocently in love with Jot, an inarticulate, shy but capable young lobsterman. When Jot is drowned, Johanna's mind is affected. She starts to live the summer backward—the only months of happiness she has ever known.

Even Nathan's genius is taxed to make this time-reversal believable. But once the reader has accepted the device, the story moves smoothly to its sad-happy Nathanish ending.

The author never offers whimsy for whimsy's sake. His whimsy is used to delete the confusing world of actuality, to create a dream world in which we can concentrate on platonic abstractions. Thus protected from the noise and bustle of postwar strife, we can once again remember that youth is fleeting, death is irrevocable and that only love can hope to heal the tortured mind.

For although Nathan never offers a great social message (as do so many of our angry propagandists), there is a message inherent in every segment of his 27-volume morality play. It is to be found in the First Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, Chapter 13, which advises us that "Love suffereth long and is kind . . . beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." Without it any writer becomes "as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal." S. N.

53 Scholars Analyze Bard Under Name of Folger Chief

JOSEPH QUINCY ADAMS MEMORIAL STUDIES. Edited by James G. McManaway, Giles E. Dawson, Edwin E. Willoughby. 808 pp. Ill. The Folger Shakespeare Library. $10.

FOLLOWING the fine custom honoring a scholar by publishing a collection of studies in his name, the Folger Shakespeare Library pays tribute to its late director, Joseph Quincy Adams, with a volume that is as physically handsome as its contributors are distinguished.

Dr. Adams, a native of Greenville, S. C., was already a recognized scholar, author and editor when he left the Cornell University faculty in the early 1930s to associate himself with the new Shakespeare Library, in whose planning he had been consulted by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Folger.

When Adams died, November 10, 1946, he had not only grown in stature himself, but through his ability as an administrator and book collector he had enhanced the library's reputation as a research institution.

The "Adams Memorial Studies" includes essays by 53 scholars of the United States, Canada and Great Britain. The subject matter is all in the general field of Shakespeareana and the English Renaissance, but the topics are infinitely diverse and of varying degrees of reconditeness.

In "Shakespeare's Ideal Man," Alfred Harbage of the Columbia University faculty examines the characters in the plays and comes to the conclusion that Shakespeare's ideal man was "scholarly, soldierly and honest." By "scholarly," Shakespeare meant intellectual; by "soldierly," he meant courageous and strong; and by "honest" he meant reliable, moral and virtuous—but not necessarily truthful. Lying depended on the circumstance.

In "The God of His Idolatry," George Winchester Stone, jr., of George Washington University describes David Garrick's worship of Shakespeare, and in "The Knocking at the Gate in Macbeth," John Webster Spargo of Northwestern University finds a meaning in the knocking not reckoned by De Quincy.

Oscar James Campbell of Columbia, in "Shakespeare and the 'New' Critics," administers a needed, commonsensical corrective to some far-fetched current efforts to deduce meanings behind the imagery.

Col. Thomas M. Spaulding, U. S. A. (ret.), in "Elizabethan Military Books," and Lawrence Babb of Michigan State College, in "On the Nature of Elizabethan Psychological Literature," give interesting reports on the literature in those fields, and Helen C. White of the University of Wisconsin does likewise for English devotional literature of the period.

Lack of space precludes mention of all the other essays of interest, but one other should be noted, "The Curious Marginalia of Charles, Second Lord Stanhope," by G. P. V. Akrigg of the University of British Columbia.

Lord Stanhope was given to emptying his mind on the fair white margins—thereby embalming himself as a curiosity of literature. Since his wits were not always stable and his doodle-writing has no relation to the text, his notations are wide open to speculation. Who was Diamond Violet, for instance, whom he bitterly describes in his last reference to her as "a city cheat"? LEE GROVE.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

FOR A YEAR Maxine Davis has been working on a cancer chart for Good Housekeeping. It appears this month with the approval of the American Medical Association and the American Cancer Society.

The chart itself stretches 2½ pages and is broken down into divisions, such as: The site of cancer, sex frequency, common age, early signs, doctor's examination, technical laboratory studies, treatment, chances for cure and preventive measures.

In her introduction, Miss Davis briefly, but comprehensively, sketches the present outlook in research. "For the first time in the history of medical science, there is reason to hope for some solutions to the tragic riddle of cancer," she reports. Only now has the Federal Government finally appropriated adequate funds for research. Indirectly, through the Atomic Energy Commission and other agencies, the Government is also helping in the fight. Private funds are pouring in.

Part of the money goes for education of the public and the medical profession, but the greater part is being spent for research, says Miss Davis. She reviews, in her limited space, only a few studies that appear to have some promise of results.

Betty MacDonald concludes "The Plague and I" with her cure and release from a tuberculosis sanitarium. Her problems of readjustment to the world outside a hospital should strike a sympathetic note in anyone who has spent so much as a week in one. At the end she meets Mr. MacDonald and all is well.

LIFE, too, reports on advances in cancer research. After 20 years of unsuccessful attempts, researchers at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda have discovered how to grow a colony of pure cancer cells from a single cell.

Three years after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Archibald MacLeish writes a progress report on atomic energy in the form of a dialogue with Commission Chairman David Lilienthal. It's a public service and must reading for everyone.

MacLeish centers the interview around three points. The first: What is this country doing, besides piling up bombs, to get effective international control, in view of the Russian rejection of the only kind of control which will work? Second, what is the present status of the operation, and, third, what are the future prospects?

In his turn, Lilienthal poses a few vital problems which must be resolved before the last point, the future prospects, can become clear. One of these is the problem of recruiting people and then holding them in government. The other is what Lilienthal refers to as the paradox, of secrecy in science and secrecy in democracy. He himself isn't able to give the answer, but he gives concrete examples of what we have to be thinking about.

A FLAT proposal is made by Dennis McEvoy, director of the Far Eastern Division of the Reader's Digest, in "Let's Get Out of Japan," condensed from Forum in that magazine. A bold and long-overdue step toward containing Soviet imperialism, is what McEvoy terms this suggestion.

The objectives of occupation have been achieved he reasons. "The political climate is stable, a representative government is in power, and the scars of war are healing fast," he adds. Communist political warfare is making hay of our continued occupation, which is becoming increasingly resented.

Geographically, Japan is to Asia what Britain is to Europe, an indispensable staging area for land, sea and air operations. A stable Japan could not be a threat to our security, McEvoy shows, and on the contrary is vital to it. The country will return to self-sufficiency far sooner if left to her own devices, he thinks.

Also in the Digest is "I Led a Double Life," by a man who for 10 years spied for the Government in the Communist Party, and "The World's Best Tires Are Here," condensed from Popular Science Monthly.

THE engrossing story of the Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research at Yonkers, N. Y., is told by Hubert A. Kenny in Coronet's "Masterminds of the War on Hunger." Founded by the fabulously wealthy mining engineer, Col. William Boyce Thompson, the institute has discovered such items as a spray that prevents apple trees from blooming until the danger of frost is past, and how to make chicken and plant growth complement each other. Animals, like human beings, inhale oxygen, exhale carbon dioxide. Plants do the reverse. At the institute, the chickens live and thrive in the greenhouse; the plants grow twice as fast.

HOLIDAY has hitched up its britches, taken a deep breath and gone to work on Texas. The thing got a bit out of hand, and instead of its customary one issue to one State, Holiday will devote three to Texas.

For its inaugural remarks, the magazine chose a Texan, but a reasonably objective one, Austin's J. Frank Dobie, who of all the State's colorful citizens has been declared the most colorful. Dobie relates how Bowie knife culture gave way to six-shooter culture, which in turn gave way to an oil culture. Hamilton Basso describes the running war among Dallas, Houston and Fort Worth.

A Recent Study Of Bellini Work

BELLINI'S FEAST OF THE GODS: A Study in Venetian Humanism, by Edgar Wind; (Harvard: $7.50).

The trouble with pictures is often that they are looked at but not seen, or as Wind might say, read, and Giovanni Bellini's "Feast of the Gods" in the National Gallery is a case in point.

The text of this book, which is amply illustrated with black and white reproductions, places the painting in the social and particularly the literary setting of Bellini's day. He was about 80 when it was consigned to Alfonso d'Este (Lucrezia Borgia's husband) in 1514, after Alfonso's sister Isabella had commissioned it in 1505-'06.

Unusual Tribute to an Editor

Mr. Smith Will Shame Film Notion of M. E.

A SLENDER, sarcastic, warm-hearted little managing editor who could quietly direct the coverage of the St. Valentine's Day Massacre, spot a future foreign correspondent among the copy boys, write French poetry to please his wife and attract to his staff such writers as Carl Sandburg, John Gunther and Ben Hecht, is about to be commemorated in an unusual volume.

The late Henry Justin Smith, for some three decades the spark plug of the Chicago Daily News, must have "discovered" at least 50 top journalists and writers in his day. He will be the central figure in a symposium edited by Hy Turner to be entitled, "A Man Named Smith." All of us who knew and worked for "H. J." are grateful.

Turner wrote his thesis on Smith. It was a case of understandable hero worship. Now, with the aid of a galaxy of Smith proteges, he hopes to reconstruct a great era of journalism which is passing.

It will try to explain to the uninitiated why Smith's two novels, "Deadlines" and "Josslyn," are considered the classics of the profession; why Ben Hecht said of them, "as poignant as Chopin played in the rain."

And the composite portrait will be about as unlike Hollywood's idea of a managing editor as can well be imagined.

Crusading Liberal

THE Tenth Anniversary issue of "Twice a Year," edited and published by Dorothy Norman, deserves a word of praise.

Mrs. Norman, columnist, crusader, poet, critic and expert on Alfred Stieglitz puts most of her earnings into the handsome semi-yearly volumes. She believes that art and action are inseparable; that no writer should try to claim as Thomas Mann once did that he is "a non-political man."

The present issue, devoted as usual to literature, the arts and civil liberties, boasts contributions from Malraux, Camus, Sartre, Richard Wright, Spender, Cummings and Viertel with a healthy sprinkling of new writers, some documents of importance to our era and some photographs of unusual merit.

Mrs. Norman tells me that she prints 2000 copies of each issue and loses several dollars on each copy she sells. The 583-page anthology sells for $4.75 and can be obtained from Twice a Year Press, 124 E. 70th st., New York City.

Irony Without Pity

WEASEL-MINDED Pierre Laval left behind him a diary which is published this week by Charles Scribner's Sons. If you would like to learn how a rat in a trap feels, thinks and tries to explain his career of political crime, read "The Diary of Pierre Laval."

Rave blurbs on the jacket of B. H. Liddell Hart's new book, "The German Generals Talk," include the startling claim that he (Liddell Hart) "has probably done more to promote and provide thought than any living individual." This is a trifle hard on Einstein and Toynbee. Just how chummy can "military thinkers" be when writing about the enemy's high brass?

Milton L. Farber, a member of the Ohio bar, has just published "Blackstone and White Rock" (Dutton), the most vitriolic picture of the legal profession in print. He says in part: "The fabulous notion that lawyers are ipso facto smarter than bartenders, truck drivers and the common variety of butcher, is enormously dear to the profession and is whooped up in law schools and bar association blowouts like Heaven at a Holy Roller jamboree."

Attorney Farber then proceeds to draw and quarter his associates, from the ambulance-chasing neophytes up to the "imperious Solomons" who sit in judgment on the highest benches. All of which is a little hard on men like the late Clarence Darrow and Chief Justice Holmes, but makes for fine and caustic reading.

Littlest Rebel

Charles Yale Harrison, author of "Generals Die in Bed" and currently "Nobody's Fool" (Holt), is quite a character.

He left the fifth grade after being whipped for his impassioned outburst against the anti-Semitism in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice." He thereupon refused ever again to attend school but spent six hours a day in his stepfather's library reading Fielding, Dickens, Thackeray, Scott, Flaubert, de Maupassant, Tolstoy and Dostoevski.

At the age of 12 he chose Clarence Darrow for his hero and began to collect what eventually became literally a trunk full of clippings on the great lawyer. Darrow, who had turned down all other biographers, including a Nobel prize winner, accepted Harrison in that role.

Young Harrison lied about his age to enlist in World War I, and out of his bitter disillusionment wrote "Generals Die in Bed."

He says he hates socialists, Communists, New Dealers, real estate men, publicity men, literary critics and a long list of other erstwhile cronies; he thinks the gentlest and most ethical people he knows are the philosophical anarchists. But he also thinks they are a little crazy.

Russia Appraised

TWENTY-FIVE men and women of the Overseas Press Club of America who have lived and worked in Russia, have collaborated on a fascinating book entitled, "As We See Russia" (Dutton). Here are a few of their observations:

Henry Cassidy, who thinks the Russians honestly do not want a fighting war at this time, admits their ideological struggle with the west is fierce, merciless, animallike.

Leland Stowe wonders whether America and Russia can each learn, evolve and find a common ground in time to avoid planetary catastrophe.

Richard C. Hottelet: "The character of the Soviet leaders and the nature of their ultimate aims has been quite clear for decades." They cannot possibly be "our blood brothers."

Craig Thompson lashes out at "liberals" still taken in by the religion of Moscow. He quotes Lenin: "Every god worship is copulation with death."

Eugene Lyons concludes: "Not all the fine words and theories in Marx and Lenin have any relevance except in reference to the dark, cruel, tortured reality of Communism-in-Action."

So must the Romans have viewed barbarians at their gates.

Books Odds and Ends

HARLAN WARE, author of "The Wonderful Mrs. Ingram," wrote his first successful stories in an abandoned chicken coop in Arcadia, Calif. Now that he can afford a pleasant office, he has reproduced as faithfully as possible that first, luck-attracting fowl shelter . . . Ludwig Lewisohn has completed the manuscript of his monumental biography of Goethe . . . Ruth Fischer's expose of Stalinism entitled, "Stalin and German Communism" (Harvard University Press), is a sizzler. The rule-or-ruin boys of the Communist Party are fit to be baptized . . . Former small-town Americans will appreciate Virgil Scott's characterization of Charles Felder, the town's leading merchant, in "The Hickory Stick" (Morrow). Felder's "prices were high, but teachers like Doug Harris bought at Felder's store because a debt to a member of the School Board assured next year's contract." . . . John W. Gates, subject of Lloyd Wendt's and Herman Kogan's new biography, "Bet a Million," would bet $1000 on where a fly would light or which rain drop would first traverse the windowpane of a Pullman car. He is also rumored to have bet one million dollars on a single turn of a card. Life must have been dull in those days.—STERLING NORTH.

'I Hate People'

Three Voices Recite Story Of Bad Girl

GEORGIANA, by Maude Phelps Hutchins. (New Directions, $2.50).

THE unusual heroine of this novel is shown to us first as an orphan child living with her grandparents; then in boarding school at 13; and finally grown up and indulging in a series of lovers. Or she is presented first in the author's words, with occasional digressions when the author drops authorship and speaks to us her readers as Mrs. Hutchins; then in extracts from Georgiana's diary; and back to the author again.

So it takes three to write the story, and maybe that explains why it's good. Georgiana isn't. She confesses on her first day in school: "Certainly I am not good. I have a wicked temper, and I hate people."

How she got that way is suggested in part one. Part two is an interlude; part three is Georgiana mature, or as mature as she can ever be. For she is always youthful, bold in experiment, admitting as the author says that woman has one principal purpose, which is biological, and shouldn't fritter away her time at anything else.

The influences which shape her are grandpere, and the father, and a boy cousin, whom she finds again in Eric and Michael; her Negro nurse; Mr. Moon, who taught her the warm soft feel of black skin; Aunt Seraphine, Velentina, grandmere (the author's spelling). "Punish," she says in a desperate moment, is a verb "with only an object, herself"; she blushes at the word "jockey" and looks with suspicion on "auspices" and "reciprocity."

Georgiana is not quite so individual a character as Mrs. Hutchins is a writer. One mannerism, a kind of Latin-built sentence, may serve to confuse you, but she can be very perceptive and, at times, entertaining.—W. G. ROGERS.

The Fallible and Endearing Herndon

Overdue Bow to Lincoln's Partner

By Sterling North

LINCOLN'S HERNDON. By David Donald. Knopf. 392 pp. $5.

IT IS A curious fact known to all students of Lincolniana that many of the richest myths, earthiest anecdotes and most improbable scandals relating to the martyred President originated in the fertile, romantic brain of his paradoxical law partner, Billy Herndon.

Herndon, son of a tavern keeper, read law in Lincoln's offices and became his law partner in the mid 1840s. The partnership was never dissolved while Lincoln lived.

It was not until after the assassination that Herndon began to collect his invaluable but often controversial material on Lincoln which has greatly influenced all subsequent biographers.

It was Herndon who first hinted that Lincoln's mother (and possibly Lincoln himself) was illegitimate.

It was Herndon who first disseminated the romantic Ann Rutledge legend, building upon the slimmest possible basis the story that her death nearly drove Lincoln insane.

It was Herndon who virtually fabricated the story that Lincoln left Mary Todd waiting at the altar in 1841 (though subsequently marrying her), adding the probable fact that she proceeded to make his life hell on earth till the day Booth's bullet ended his matrimonial misery.

Much of the above has been entirely or partially exploded by more careful biographers and historians. And yet, as David Donald points out, Herndon's diligent spade work, his interviews with hundreds of those who knew Lincoln intimately, and his own colorful reminiscences more than counterbalance any half-truths or myths he may have propagated.

Herndon is himself a rich subject for biography. It is probable that he was a much more ardent abolitionist than Lincoln (though it would be hard to prove that he influenced Lincoln's thinking and his career as deeply as he imagined).

Billy was a prohibitionist, but also in later life a drunkard. He had an enormous library at a time when much of Springfield, Ill., was virtually illiterate. He made the town a fine reform mayor, was in correspondence with important thinkers and writers all over America, and despite his spotty education was sometimes called a "frontier Emerson." He went in for botany, transcendentalism and psychology and prided himself as an agnostic.

David Donald finds no evidence that he was embittered by Lincoln's success, and little evidence that he sought an office through Lincoln's favor. But there is much evidence that his interpretation of Lincoln's life was in part twisted by his dislike for Mary Lincoln, who once left him in the middle of the dance floor and snubbed him on his only trip to Washington.

Donald (a Southerner by strange coincidence) has made a warm, human fallible, engaging and endearing character out of Herndon without once deviating from the evidence to be found in his original source material.

Old, poor, sick, and frustrated, Herndon labored to produce "Herndon's Lincoln" only to have the publication so madly mismanaged that its author died in poverty and neglect.

Such was the end of Lincoln's law partner, a man who loved and admired Abe but believed that the great man was very human and certainly no saint. The modern reader can understand and sympathize with Herndon. His own generation in the North persecuted him because he did not tell them what they wanted to hear about their wartime leader.

David Donald has performed a valuable service in writing the only really balanced account of Herndon's life in print save that to be found on the pages of Randall. It is an overdue memorial.

THE MAN WITH MY FACE. By Samuel W. Taylor. A. A. Wyn. (254 pp. $2.50).

SUPPOSE you stepped off the 5:29 some evening and your wife wasn't at the station to meet you? You wouldn't be surprised? Well, let's admit it, it does happen occasionally in the best regulated suburban families.

But suppose you stood around for half an hour holding a pound of butter and a package of pork chops and no car showed up to meet the 6:18 or even the 6:33.

And then when you phoned your home your wife said, "Who is this speaking, please? You must have the wrong number!"

By this time you might be baffled, maybe a bit hot under the collar.

But all this would be trifling compared to your emotions when, hungry and weary, you walked into your own living room to find a man with your face, your build, your voice, your clothes and your bridge hand sitting across the table from your wife and playing a rubber or two with your business partner and his wife.

And, finally, just to top it all off, your dog begins to growl at you.

When this deft thriller ran as a serial in one of the popular magazines, the office was deluged with phone calls, letters and telegrams asking, "What happens next?"

And although we thought ourselves immune to new plot twists (known as twisteroos in Hollywood story conferences), we were just as eager as Mairy Doats to discover what had happened in the life of Chick Graham and who his alter ego might be.

Several murders, a big bank robbery and some of the toughest men and meanest dogs in recent fiction help to make this a breathless but surprisingly believable tale.

If you want to take your mind off your troubles, sit down for an evening to enjoy the fantastic dilemma of Chick Graham, who came home one evening and found something really to worry about.

First rate entertainment.

INTRUDER IN THE DUST. By William Faulkner. Random House. 247 pp. $3.

IT IS eight years since William Faulkner last emerged from behind the white pillars of his mansion at Oxford, Miss., to lambast humanity with one of his admittedly powerful (though murky) novels.

He seems to have lost none of his diabolical magic in those eight years, none of his poetic sound and fury, and only a little of his cynical contempt for most human motives.

He still can evoke a mood of terror, capture in circuitous ways (but with brooding certainty) his dour, unhappy characters. And he still has a story to tell, although he might have told it in half as many words to more effect.

"Intruder in the Dust" concerns the relationship between a proud white boy and Lucas Beauchamp, a proud old Negro. The boy, the "I" character who tells the story, was once given a meal by Beauchamp, who refused to be paid for the courtesy but instead threw the coins on the floor of his cabin.

Incensed by what he considered an insult, the boy tries for years to make the Negro beholden "to teach him his place." Faulkner agonizes over this situation at great length.

In the end the boy saves Beauchamp from lynching by digging up the grave of the victim and soliciting the aid of his lawyer uncle to defend the Negro. But Beauchamp pays $2 for these services and the score is still unsettled at the end of the book.

Double murder, an exchange of corpses and many other twists of plot enter into the concentric loops of this tortuous and tortured tale. But its real raison d'etre is social and political.

Faulkner is saying in effect that only Southerners can "settle" the Negro-white problem; that damyankees had better mind their own business and finally that another War Between the States is a lively possibility.

He even suggests that in such a war Southerners of every hue would join together to teach meddling Northerners a lesson.

While it is obvious from the race riots in Detroit, tension in Harlem and friction between races elsewhere in the North that Northerners have little reason for pride on this score, having proved as inept as Southerners in "solving" one of the great social problems of our time, it is unlikely that most enlightened Southerners will approve of Faulkner's violent call to battle. Faced with a new enemy abroad at least as dangerous as Hitler or Hirohito, the Faulkner cry havoc would, of course, mean national suicide.

To say that this novel is irresponsible in theme would be stating it very mildly. Clear thinkers in all sections of the country will resent it for the demagoguery it is.

Letters Limn A Personality

LETTERS OF ERIC GILL. Edited by Walter Shewring. Devin-Adair. 480 pp. Ill. $5.

THE English artist Eric Gill (1882-1940) will be remembered for many things: his inscriptional lettering; his stone carving; his book illustration, particularly in wood engraving; his type faces, including Perpetua, and his stimulating essay on a variety of subjects.

At whatever value posterity may assess his work, and it may be felt that somewhere in his life as an artist he missed the train, posterity cannot fail to say, "Here was a personality."

If there was any doubt about his vital approach to life the publication of his letters, with able editing, will dispel it. His conversion to Catholicism, his own opinion of capitalism, his ideas on esthetics, his blindness to the implications of Hitler all appear in the letters and reveal him as one of the most provocative personalities of our time.—L. G.

WASHINGTON AREA AFFAIRS

40% of 1948's Paralysis Victims Are Apparently Well Again

Marion (Jerry Lou) Gaskins, 5, of 6806 Shepherd st., Landover, Md., practices answering the school bell, which she will be doing in earnest October 1. She stays up most of the day now, but keeps off her feet and takes a 2-hour nap. She grew 3 inches this summer

The dots show the approximate locations of this year's infantile paralysis cases in Washington and its immediate environs. In all of Greater Washington, about 170 persons have been stricken in 1948, more than 90 of them in the District, more than 30 in nearby Maryland and more than 40 in nearby Virginia. Persons who died were Robert Warren, 8, of 1416 R st. nw.; Barbara Scruggs, 17, of 8905 Seneca lane, Bethesda, Md.; William D. Shisler, 20, of 3407 Commonwealth ave., Alexandria, Va., and Mrs. Joyce Ayers, 25, of 1508 Tyler ave., near Falls Church, Va.

The Washington Post—By Charles Del Vecchio.

Danny Caton, who is 4-going-on-5 and who lives at 817 30th st. se., looks fit and ready to pedal his girl friend, Sandy Loughton, around the block. But Danny is permitted only a 20-minute exercise period each day until he grows stronger

By Judith Spivak
Post Reporter

GREATER WASHINGTON has had approximately 170 polio cases this year, and doctors estimate that 40 per cent of them have apparently recovered without after-effects.

Definite figures have not yet been compiled, but the doctors say that another 30 per cent of this year's patients show some "residual weakness," and that 30 per cent have varying degrees of actual paralysis.

Doctors emphasize, however, that amazing recoveries have been made by weak and paralyzed patients as much as two years after the onset of the disease.

In most of this year's cases which show "residual weakness," proper care and exercise will restore normal use of the affected muscles or develop compensating strength in others. In a very few cases, chiefly those which do not receive proper checkups and after-care, deformities may result later on from uncorrected weaknesses.

It takes from two to three months after the acute stage of polio has passed before doctors can even estimate how much paralysis will finally remain in a given case. However, once a patient passes the first acute two-week period of the disease, he will not suffer any further paralysis.

Dr. James G. Cumming, head of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases in the District Health Department points out a further fact which should comfort the families of those who come down with polio.

"We are diagnosing far more nonparalytic cases than have ever been diagnosed before," Dr. Cumming says. "About 60 to 70 per cent of cases now show no actual paralysis. Up to a few years ago, practically all diagnosed cases were paralytic."

"People are more polio conscious now," Dr. Cumming believes. Parents and doctors both suspect the disease more readily and send such cases to the hospital for a complete spinal test, he says.

'Marble' in His Leg

DANNY Caton, husky 4-year-old of 817 30th st. se., is one of the stricken children whose continuing recovery has made his family very happy. About 145 children came down with polio, compared to about 25 adults over 20.

"You don't know the feeling when they told me it was polio," says Danny's mother, Mrs. Henry Caton, wife of the property officer in the District Sanitation Department.

Danny was admitted to Children's Hospital July 6, after he complained of an upset stomach and a "marble" in his leg. A spinal tap proved he had polio, and Danny spent seven weeks in the hospital, with both limbs and his lower back partially paralyzed.

"They don't think he'll have any residual effects, though it'll be six months before they're sure," says his mother. "His back has improved remarkably and now the chief trouble is in his right leg."

Danny still has to spend about half the day in bed and most of the other half sitting on the living room couch "reading" his favorite books.

Bike-riding is a daily 20-minute treat, which also helps strengthen his weak leg muscles. It usually involves Sandy Loughton, 5, Dan's favorite playmate of two years' standing, who hitches rides on the back of his tricycle.

"They're going to get married, and Danny's going to be a farmer," Mrs. Caton says, mock seriously.

If things go well, Dan will be starting kindergarten in February. In the meantime, two treatments a week at the Children's Hospital clinic, special exercises at home and a careful regimen are helping him back to a normal life.

Grown Three Inches

MARION "Jerry Lou" Gaskins, 5 of 6806 Shepherd st., Landover, Md., is another of this year's polio victims whose story has a happy ending.

Jerry Lou, who looks like Alice-in-Wonderland, will be starting first grade at Landover Hills School October 1, despite an attack of infantile paralysis which landed her in Children's Hospital August 12.

"The physiotherapist told us Wednesday she could go back to school now, but we've got to get some clothes. She's grown about 3 inches this summer, and only has three dresses that fit her," sighs Jerry Lou's mother.

Mrs. Gaskins, whose husband is a serviceman for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., has taken her daughter to the Children's Hospital clinic for three follow-up examinations so far. Jerry Lou is still "a little nervous," her mother says, but has no paralysis and doesn't have to do any special exercises. Up to last Wednesday she was allowed out of bed for only a half hour a day, but now she's up most of the time and just has to get in a two-hour nap daily.

It looked like Jerry Lou had the flu when she first got sick, her mother says. Then the child's movements became jerky, her hands shook when she reached for a glass of water, and she complained of a pain in the back of her neck.

"I was scared to death," Mrs. Gaskins admits was her reaction when she learned from Children's Hospital that Jerry Lou had polio. "I never had such a lost feeling in all my life."

But the scare is over now, and the only difference in Jerry Lou, aside from a tendency to tire easily, is those three extra inches.

Harry Friendlander, 11, of 214 W. Jefferson st., Falls Church, Va., is another student who's back in school in spite of a siege of poliomyelitis this summer.

Harry can't lift or punch with his right arm yet, but then he's left-handed anyway, his mother, Mrs. Mark P. Friedlander, points out. Mr. Friedlander is a lawyer.

Harry, who spent two weeks in Children's Hospital after he came down with polio while away at camp in July, still isn't allowed to take gym or exercise.

He gets a ride every day to and from his sixth grade classes at Madison Elementary School in Falls Church, and will continue to be treated each week by a physiotherapist for from six months to two years.

"He feels a little sorry for himself," Mrs. Friedlander admits. "He can't ride a bike or do sports like skating or swimming. But he's really developed his hobby of stamps."

"He really came out very well," Mrs. Friedlander thinks. "The doctor tells me that when he's finished with his treatments, he may even be better off than he was before, they can do so much to develop weak muscles."

Like most parents, the Friedlanders were pretty upset when they learned their son had polio.

"Just the mention of it frightens any parents," Mrs. Friedlander says. "If they would only realize that doctors can do so much with it now."

Kathleen Herbert, who is a saucy 3½ years old, is one of this year's polio victims who have suffered some paralysis. She wears a brace on her partially paralyzed right arm.

Kathleen, a daughter of Mrs. Ray Herbert, 1422 Van Buren st. nw., is a pretty resourceful young lady, however. Although she was right handed, she has already learned to feed herself with her left hand.

Kathleen's right hand also was paralyzed at first, but she has had the use of her right fingers for the last three weeks, her mother says.

"It took a couple of weeks of treatment and a lot of practice," according to Mrs. Herbert. "Now she holds her paper dolls in her right hand, and cuts with the other."

Kathleen also has a slight weakness in her left leg, "but you can't tell unless she gets very tired," Mrs. Herbert says.

Kathleen, who came down with infantile paralysis at Colonial Beach, Va., was admitted to Children's Hospital August 7. Now her schedule includes treatments three times a week at the clinic, daily exercises at home, 12 hours sleep at night and a two-hour nap in the afternoon.

Four Successive Knockdowns

CAROLYN CULP, 7 years old and a third-grader at West School, is a healthy looking girl. So healthy, in fact, that it's hard to believe the story her mother, Mrs. John Culp, tells about Carolyn's polio siege back in 1943.

"In March she had measles, in May she got chicken pox, in July it was scarlet fever and in August she came down with polio," says Mrs. Culp, of 5401 13th st. nw.

Carolyn spent two weeks in Children's Hospital, stayed home a month and was back in nursery school by December, 1943.

"She had a little twitch in her mouth at first, but now that's gone," says Mrs. Culp, wife of a construction foreman.

Carolyn, whose favorite sport is climbing the cherry tree in the family's back yard, still goes back to Children's Hospital for an annual just-to-be-safe checkup.

128 Persons Aided Here

POLIO can be a heavy financial burden, if it requires 24-hour nursing in the acute stage, or follow-up physiotherapy treatments or braces later on.

Standing ready "to do all that's needed to help" for sufferers and their families is the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, financed by the annual March of Dimes drive.

Last year the District chapter of the foundation spent $53,685 to help 128 area victims of polio, including 23 new cases and 105 from former years.

In 1944, the worst polio year Washington has had, the foundation spent $81,208 here to help 196 old and new polio sufferers.

Chapters of the foundation in nearby counties of Virginia and Maryland aid polio cases there, most of which are treated at District hospitals until they have passed the acute stage.

The District Foundation spent the largest chunk of money last year for hospitalization, which came to $15,646 for 58 persons. It paid out $10,239 for nursing service and $8637 for the salaries of physiotherapists who work under doctors at the Children's Hospital Crippled Children's Clinic. Since last February, the District Foundation has also paid the salary of a physical therapist in the new adult clinic at Providence Hospital.

Other items in the District chapter's 1947 budget included: School transportation, $1081; clinic fees, $2311; 71 braces, $3665; transportation to and from clinic for 13 persons, $935; 56 pairs of special and orthopedic shoes, $890; 50 brace repairs, $455; correcting or repairing 35 pairs of shoes, $366.

City Has Enough Beds

THE great majority of Washington area polio cases are treated at Children's Hospital or at Gallinger, which is the only local hospital admitting acute adult polio cases.

According to the District Polio Foundation, there has never been a shortage of beds for polio cases, even in the 1944 "epidemic" when 194 cases were reported in the District alone.

District health rules require that polio patients be isolated for 14 days following diagnosis. However, parents may visit children listed as "critical" or on the danger list.

Convalescent polio patients at Children's Hospital show "an amazing morale," according to doctors there.

"It's one of the happiest wards in the house, and always has been," the doctors say. "After all, they're not sick in the sense of feeling physically ill. The really ill period last only a few days."

Carolyn Culp, 7, of 5401 13th st. nw., who came down with polio in 1943, gets her annual checkup from Dr. Frank M. Hand at Children's Hospital. She can "run like a deer now," says her grandfather, Capt. Frederick Hess

Harry Friedlander, 11, of 214 West Jefferson st., Falls Church, is actually back in school at Madison Elementary, although his right arm is still stiff from infantile paralysis contracted in West Virginia this summer

Tribe Raps 5 Hurlers For 14 Hits

By Joe Reichler

Detroit, Sept. 25 (AP).—Gene Bearden, the pitcher the New York Yankees gave up on two years ago, kept the Cleveland Indians in a tie with Boston for the American League lead today when he hurled the Tribe to a 9-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The triumph gave Cleveland 92 victories against 56 defeats, the same as the Red Sox who knocked the Yankees out of a three-way tie into third place, one full game behind when they whipped the Bronxites in their back yard, 7-2.

Bearden limited the Tigers to seven hits in registering his 17th victory against only seven defeats in his first full season in the major leagues. It was his third straight against Detroit without a setback.

Yankees Discard Him

A purple heart Navy veteran, Bearden was discarded by the Yankees because they felt he never would fully recover from his war injuries which nearly cost him his life. Gene spent two years in the hospital before he was able to walk. A miracle operation which necessita 1 aluminum plates in his head and right knee, saved his life.

A partisan Tiger crowd of 30,087 paid fans had visions of a no-hitter for awhile as the 28-year-old rookie southpaw retired the first 15 men in order. Lead off man Johnny Lipon worked Bearden for a pass to open the first inning for Detroit, but was erased by a double play.

Thereafter Bearden mowed the Tigers down like ten-pins in a bowling alley until George Vico opened the last half of the sixth with a whistlin- two-bagger off the rightfield screen.

The Indians supported Bearden with a 14-hit attack against five flingers starting with Virgil Trucks, the loser. Lou. Kretlow, Art Houtteman, Stubby Overmire

Kramer Wins 17th to Keep Boston in Tie For First

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Handsome Jack Kramer eased the first place traffic jam in the American League today when he elbowed New York out of a triple tie with a 7-2 victory that gave the Boston Red Sox half the leadership with Cleveland.

The 30-year-old righthander was in complete charge most of the way, not a ball was hit to the outfield until the sixth and only seven ventured into that foreign territory during an afternoon of heartbreak to 65,607 Yankee customers.

Kramer, an itinerant spaghetti salesman from New Orleans who, along with three other St. Louis Brownies, brought about $400,000 on the open market last winter, had his staff en route to his seventeenth win. Jack allowed only seven hits, struck out six and passed four as he picked his methodical way down the Yankee batting order.

A gray-haired old gaffer named Wally Moses, who celebrates his thirty seventh birthday in a couple of weeks, continued his chosen role of Yankee-baiter with two hits and three runs, one his second homer of the season. It came off Bob Porterfield shortly after he replaced starter and loser Allie Reynolds in the sixth.

Apparently the shock of reaching first place yesterday for the first time since opening day was too much for the home side. The Yanks quickly chilled the big crowd that helped set a new Yankee Stadium season record of 2,342,451 by yielding two gift runs in the first inning.

The folks hadn't stopped clapping for Charles Keller, whose day it was, when Boston upped with a couple of runs. Actually they never stopped, adding another in the third, two more in the fourth, Moses' homer in the sixth and another score in the eighth on a balk.

A walk to pesky Johnny Pesky got Reynolds in trouble and the Yank infield did the rest. Ted Williams' roller to first base was picked up and heaved low to second by Ton Henrich, who was trying for a force. That was error No. 1. Then Vern Stephens smashed to Third Baseman Bobby Brown, who forgot to catch the ball before he made his play. As the ball squirted to left, Pesky scored.

When Bobby Doerr bounced to George Stirnweiss, they elected to first make the play at first base, instead of the force at second. When they finally ran down Stephens between first and second to complete the double play, Williams had scored.

That Williams man did it in the third with a double to left field while the Yanks piled up six deep in right. It produced a run because Pesky was on with a fluke

Hoyas Lose To HolyCross

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 25.—Georgetown started its football season with a rush, but couldn't maintain the winning pace against stronger Holy Cross, bowing 18-7, at Fitton Field today before 20,000.

Touted as a suprise team, Georgetown lived up to advance billing for the first six minutes of the game, but gave way on a 43-yard run by Dave Cook and two touchdown passes by the cool, veteran Walt Brennan.

Thus the charges of Coach Bill Osmanski, a bad man for Georgetown to tangle with, made his debut a triumphant one.

Little Henry (Babe) Baronowski got the Hoyas off to a flying start when he took the first punt of the game on his own 30 and raced beautifully all the way into the end zone. However, the electrifying run was nullified by big Jim O'Keefe's over-enthusiastic use of hands at the 10.

This still enabled Georgetown to start its first drive from the Crusaders' 25. At the moment the Hoyas couldn't capitalize on their position. They did a few plays later.

On fourth down, Bill Mitchell's try for a field goal was 'way off, rolling out of bounds on the Holy

Luck of the Irish Still Holds, Purdue Beaten Out, 28-27

By Jerry Liska

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 25 (AP).—The Luck o' the Irish worked overtime today as desperately pressed Notre Dame outlasted Purdue's Boilermakers, 28-27

It was a classic football season opener which had a record 59,348 crowd hysterical from start to finish at Notre Dame Stadium.

The Boilermakers, rightfully boomed as the Big Nine's next Rose Bowl candidate, battled the Irish all over the turf and had the defending national champions behind, 13-12, in the third period. That was the first time Notre Dame had trailed anybody since their last defeat, 19 games ago, when they lost to Great Lakes, 39-7.

Irish Lead 12-0

The Irish dissipated a 12-0 lead which they fashioned early in the second period and it took some story-book antics to squelch a splendid Purdue team after that, including:

1—A bolt-out-of-the-blue 70-yard touchdown return of a punt by sturdy Johnny Panelli, Morristown, N. J., senior, in the third period when Notre Dame was trailing.

2—A 23-yard field goal from a difficult angle by Steve Oracko of Lansford, Pa.—whose place-kicking name was mud up until that moment—for a 21-13 Irish lead.

3—A seven-yard pay-off scamper by fighting Irishman named Al Zmijewski, an unknown reserve tackle from Newark, N. J., with an interception of a Bob DeMoss pass in the fourth quarter, after Purdue had slashed Notre Dame's lead to 21-20.

And 4—Oracko's upright-splitting placement try following Zmijewski's touchdown. Bottin' Steve had missed his point tries after Notre Dame's first three touchdowns.

Purdue's fourth and final touchdown came even as the closing gun sounded, on a 6-yard pass from DeMoss, a brilliant quarterback, to End Harley Jeffrey. This was a game the Boilermakers well could call a moral victory after their 22-7 defeat by Notre Dame last year.

The slashing, viciously blocking and tackling Purdues proved all that Stu Holcomb's fearful big nine coaching rivals feared this season.

DeMoss passed like a major league catcher pegging to second, setting up all but one of Purdue's four touchdowns with his sharpshooting.

The Irish took a 6-0 lead in the opening period with Emil Sitko smashing across from the one-yard line to cap a 40-yard drive.

In the second period, Sitko

Army Routs Villanova, 28-0

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 25 (AP).—Army started its comeback toward the gridiron heights today with a potent one-two punch that completely overpowered a rugged Villanova eleven, 28-0.

A crowd of 23,750 which enjoyed perfect weather at Michie Stadium watched the well-drilled Cadets score twice by land and twice by air while operating with separate units for offense and defense, a la Michigan.

It was a bitter disappointment for Villanova, whose teams now have gone down to defeat 14 times in 15 meetings with Army. The Wildcats had not won since 1915 and had not scored on this field since 1917.

Full of confidence after dropping Texas A. and M. a week ago, the Wildcat played their hosts on even terms for a few early minutes,

Texas Upset By Tar Heels

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 25.—There was Justice in all of North Carolina's five touchdowns here today as it turned on favored Texas and pounded out a stunning 34-7 victory in one of the day's top intersectional gridiron battles.

While a capacity gathering of 43,500 fans watched in perfect weather, Choo-Choo Charlie Justice, the Tar Heels' brilliant 167-pound wingback, personally attended to two of the winning touchdowns on line plays of 4 and 2 yards. He passed for 2 more, combining with Art Weiner on a 21-yard scoring play and with Bobby Cox on a 5-yard effort.

Finally, Justice figured in the game's last score as he picked up 9 of the last 15 yards and then sent Billy Hayes, sophomore from Arlington, Va., over the goal from a single yard out.

Tar Heels Score Early

It was all the revenge Carolina could ask for the 34-0 beating they took from the Longhorns to start their season last year. Carolina was again starting its season, this time on the short end of 7-point odds against a Southwest Conference power that had shellacked LSU last week. Sudden, jolting touchdowns in the first quarter accounted for it. The Tar Heels got

D. C. Freshman Sparks GW To 13-0 Victory Over VPI

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 25.—Powered by Handy Andy Davis, a Washington, D. C., product, George Washington University's Colonials whipped Virginia Tech, 13-0, before 7500 spectators here today.

The scrappy outweighed Colonials were in control of the game from the kick-off until the final gun. The Gobblers, making their debut under Coach Bob McNeish, were ineffective and penetrated as far as the GW 26 only once.

Davis, the 175-pound freshman fullback, outgained the entire Virginia Tech in passing and running, but left the scoring up to Jimmy Kline, who went over in the second period, and Joe Spangler, who cracked over in the third.

Davis picked up all 107 of GW's yards in the passing department with 6 completions in 10 tries. In 26 rushing attempts, he picked up 97 yards The Colonials outgained the Gobblers 309 yards to 123.

George Washington took the opening kick-off and stayed inside Gobbler territory throughout the first period. However, the Colonials couldn't advance past the 19. Then Davis took to the air early in the second quarter and in two plays propelled the Colonials 45-yards to the Tech four.

Hank Bartelloni took the first pass near the right sideline and fell outside after a 14-yard gain on the 35. Davis tossed again to Bartelloni, but the ball tipped the top of his fingers and fell into

Terps Set Back Richmond,19-0

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Sept. 25.—Maryland dazzled a surprisingly tenacious University of Richmond team with a spirited ground attack here tonight and emerged a 19-0 victor.

All of the Terps scores came on the ground with scores in each quarter except the second.

Jim Larue, not to be outdone by the fancy hustling of his companion halfback, John Idzik, stunned a crowd of 12,000 with an 80-yard punt return in the fourth quarter for a score.

It was Vern Seibert who appeared to be the logical stand-in for the great Gambino. He set up the first touchdown in the first quarter—with an assist from Idzik—after a 65-yard drive had bogged down at the Spider 20.

Idzik took a Spider punt on his own 35, feinted a handoff and sped down the right sideline to the Richmond 35. Seibert took a lateral from oJe Tucker and was dropped at the one. Werner fumbled, however, inches from the goal.

A hurried punt by Cotton Billingsley put the ball on the Richmond 30. Seibert made it first down on the 18, and then scored after Turyn missed a pass. Turyn fumbled the snap from center, and the try for extra point was smothered.

The second quarter was highlighted by Turyn's inability to strike his targets with passes. In all, the Terps tried 20 passes and completed only two.

Despite his failure in the air, Turyn sparked the drive with a series of short spurts, plus a reverse to Seibert for 27 yards.

The Terps scored again in the third quarter, when Turyn climaxed a 65-yard drive with a score on a quarterback sneak.

LaRue put the Terps overland attack into high gear when he took

California Grinds Out 21-7 Victory Over Middies

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Babe Ruth Stadium, Baltimore, Sept. 25.—California christened Navy's football season with a crushing ground attack which split the Middies amidships and produced a 21-7 victory before 30,000 onlookers here today.

The Middies launched the first offensive of the crisp afternoon by driving to a touchdown in the first five minutes of the play. After that, however, it was strictly a California show.

The Golden Bears tied the score in the second quarter, registered again in the third period and completed their scoring with another TD in the fourth period.

Behind a murderous line which restricted the Navy's running game to 95 yards were eight Cal backs, some swift, some powerful, but all effective. Centering their attack inside most of the time, but swinging outside whenever the Sailor defenses dictated, the Bear swifties rolled up 337 yards on the ground.

STATISTICS

| Navy | | California |

Fullback Jack Jensen, Halfback Staten Webster, a 170-pound Negro ball-of-fire, and Quarterback Bob Celeri were the trio responsible for George Sauer making his debut as Navy's coach in defeat.

Webster Scores Twice

Webster scored twice, once on a 26-yard sprint and again on a 1-yard plunge. Jensen was stopped only once all day. He broke off tackle with a bull-like charge to set up Cal's first touchdown. That was only an eight-yard sprint.

When Cal was driving for its second touchdown, they called on this 200-pound swiftie to advance them to within striking distance of the goal and he didn't fail 'em. He moved the ball 40 yards on two thrusts.

Celeri, a 165-pounder reserve, quarterbacked the Californians on all three of their scoring expeditions and helped the offense no little. Rushed on two passes, he eluded his tacklers for a 15-yard gain the first time and for 21 yards the second trip. He completed only four passes, but three came when the Bears were rolling for their third score.

Baysinger Stars Early

In the first quarter, when the Sailors really rolled, Reaves Baysinger led the parade of the Middies, completing six straight passes before missing.

The Sailors got help, too, from Al McCully, but only briefly, and Pete Williams, who gathered in four of Baysinger's first six tosses. McCully injured his leg in the first quarter shortly after his touchdown gave Navy the lead and was held out until the waning moments of the game.

Seven-point underdogs, the Middies made the odds look silly in the first period when they completely dominated play and threatened to sweep the Bears all the way back to Berkeley, Calif.

Redskins Open Season Today With Pittsburgh Steelers

Over 30,000 Washingtonians will be on hand today as the Washington Redskins open their twelfth league season in a 2 o'clock meeting with the Pittsburgh Steelers at Griffith Stadium.

Dressed in their Sunday best, and out for social as much as gridiron reasons, the same thousands will jostle each other black and blue, yell themselves hoarse, eat more hot dogs than they should, and have a high old time.

Just incidentally, for some, there'll be a pretty fair football game going on.

Out on the field in their burgundy and gold uniforms will be a Redskin team with a new look and facing it, from the Smokey City, will be a Steeler gang that was good enough to tie for the Eastern division, National Football League title last year.

The Redskins are so new and improved, in fact, that the smart boys are calling them 10-point favorites. After their worst season since coming to Washington in 1937, losing 8 of their 12 league outings and finishing a sorry fourth in the East last year, they're earning a lot of early respect because of their new material.

Harry Gilmer isn't the sum total of it. In all there are 12 first-year men on the team. But All-America Harry, the Alabaman who will see his first serious action with the 'Skins today, could be the most important a little later.

Today, just as it's been for 11

Civilian-Coached

Sauer Unveils Snappy, Quick Starting Model But It Stalls

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

BABE RUTH STADIUM, Baltimore, Sept. 25.—The Navy unveiled its new model of a civilian coached team today.

For the greater part of a peried, it was a brightly shining creation of the kind Navy has been wanting for years.

But it turned out to be built for quick starting, and not sturdy enough for the long, hard journey against a California team that simply had too much power

For the first five minutes, Coach George Sauer's boys were slightly wonderful. They took the opening kick-off and whipped down the field to a touchdown.

No Navy team in years has looked as good. Not even the hand-picked, big-name teams of the wartime period. The Middies played as if they knew what they were attempting to do. And they did it with precision.

This was Navy's first game of the season and California had no opportunity to scout the new Middie attack. California's defense was confused as the Middies opened up their T formation with flankers, laterals, fine passing and sharp running.

When Al McCully, an Atlantic City boy, went over for a Navy touchdown, the Middie rooters had visions of an upset victory over a California eleven that has been picked to play in the Rose Bowl next New Year's Day.

Before Lynn Waldorf and his California coaching staff figured

Doak Walker Stars, SMU Topples Pitt

Pittsburgh, Sept. 25 (AP).—The Mustangs of Southern Methodist University trampled the University of Pittsburgh, 33 to 14, in Pitt stadium today on solid running by Doak Walker and sharp passing by Gilbert Johnson.

Johnson threw nine passes, all completed, and accounted for a gain of 207 yards. Walker, the man the crowd of 31,400 wanted most to see, completed three out of four passes for 33 yards. He pitched one for SMU's first touchdown. Walker also caught a touchdown pass and ran 76 yards for a third score on a punt return.

Pitt Scores on Passes

Pitt, pushed across two touchdowns on passes in the final quarter.

Lou Cecconi and Jim Robinson emerged as Pitt backfield standouts while Bob Lee was unveiled as a better than average passer.

SMU scored at the end of the first quarter when Walker threw a 13-yard pass to Raleigh Blakely in the end zone. The next SMU score came in the second period, with Johnson standing on his own 40 and tossing to Walker, who ran from the Pitt 30 to the goal line. The half ended with SMU leading, 14 to 0.

Walker Scores on Kick Runback

In the third quarter, Walker caught a Pitt punt on his own 26-yard line, raced to the side of the field and tore across the goal line without being touched.

An SMU fumble led to a Pitt touchdown in the fourth quarter. After the fumble, Cecconi threw a pass from the SMU 20 to Back Bill Bruno in the end zone. SMU then marked up two touchdowns, one on Johnson's 40-yard pass to Blakely and one on Johnson's pass to Kyle Rote. Rote caught that pass on the Pitt 41, evaded one tackler and ran for a score. In the final two minutes, Pitt got its second tally on Lee's 13-yard pass to End Bill McPeak in the end zone.

again dived into pay-dirt from the one-yard line after a seven-yard Purdue punt had given the Irish the ball on the Boilermaker 36.

The Boilermakers spanned 35 yards to score with two minutes left in the half. The score came on an arrow-like pass from DeMoss to Norb Adams covering 19 yards. Sophomore Rudy Trbovich converted and Notre Dame led, 12-7, as the teams left for intermission.

In the third period, the Boilermakers took Notre Dame's kickoff and marched 74 yards to a touchdown with Adams plunging across from the 2.

In this 15-play sequence, Adams, Harry Szulborski and Bob Agnew chewed Notre Dame's line to bits with slashing darts through the middle. This time Trbovich's try was wide, but Purdue was ahead, 13-12.

Then came the break of the game. George Punzelt's kick in midfield was partially blocked by End Jim Martin of Notre Dame, the ball scudded a few yards and was grabbed by Panelli, who streaked 70 yards for a touchdown. Again Oracko's kick went awry and Notre Dame led 18-13, as the third period ended.

Notre Dame then called on Oachko to boot his 23-yards field goal for a 21-13 lead as the fourth period opened.

Purdue came right back to score after DeMoss hurled a 51-yard pass to Sophomore Neil Schmidt and then himself sneaked into pay-dirt from the one-yard line. Trbovich again added the point.

With little more than two minutes left, Zmijewski stole DeMoss' pass, a desperation toss, on Purdue's own seven. He bulled into the end zone. Oracko's successful try made it Notre Dame 28, Purdue 20.

Then came Purdue's final scoring thrust covering 70 yards in the closing seconds.

Sain Suffers 15th Defeat Of Season

Boston, Sept. 25 (AP).—The New York Giants today spoiled Boston's chances of clinching the National League flag by defeating the Braves, 3-2, before 15,377 fans.

However, the St. Louis Cardinals also lost so the Braves are better off than they were before the game. One more victory and the Tribe can win its first pennant since 1914. The Braves and Cards both have seven games left to play.

The Braves wasted scoring opportunities today and errors preceded the scoring of the second and third Giant runs. Johnny Sain, making his 10th start in 33 days, suffered his 15th defeat. He has won 22 games.

The Braves had three men on base with none out in the seventh and were able to score only one run. In the ninth they again loaded the bases with none out and were held scoreless.

Pro Grid Star's Death Laid To Heart Attack at Autopsy

Chicago, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—The death of Stan Mauldin, star tackle for the Chicago Cardinals who dropped dead after last night's game, was attributed today to a heart attack.

Mauldin died in the Chicago dressing room early today, less than two hours after he helped the Cardinals defeat the Philadelphia Eagles, 21 to 14.

Coroner A. L. Brodie announced that an autopsy had been performed by two physicians, who agreed that a heart attack was the probable cause of death.

Brodie said, however, that microscopic tests were being made to confirm the opinion. It was believed at first that Mauldin, a 27-year-old 221-pound giant, might have suffered a cerebral hemorrhage from a head blow during the game.

Marshall Goldberg, veteran Cardinal fullback, said Mauldin had complained of a slight headache before the game. Goldberg said he thought nothing of it at the time because headaches were common just before kick-off time.

Coach James Conzelman and Owner Ray Benningsen conferred with Brodie today. Brodie set the inquest for October 7.

There were bruises above Mauldin's left eye and on his cheek, but Drs. A. C. Webb and Sidney Portis, who performed the autopsy, said they apparently were not caused by a blow severe enough to have caused death.

"Everything points to a natural death, but we want to be sure," Brodie explained.

Dr. Portis testified death was caused by a "massive coronary occlusion," and there was no evidence of internal or external injury.

Bennigsen assured financial aid to Mauldin's widow and son. They will return to Amarillo.

"We will see that they will be taken care of, not only now, but in the future," Benningsen added.

At Philadelphia, Bert Bell, National Football League commissioner, said that Mauldin was one of the "best tackles in pro football.

'His death is indeed a tragedy," Bell said. "I am shocked."

He promised a thorough investigation to determine beyond doubt the cause of death.

A fire department pulmotor squad worked over the dying player for an hour and a half in the dressing room.

Mauldin is survived by his wife, who was present when he died, and a small son.

single on a bad hopper to Phil Rizzuto.

Moses' single to right, a two-bagger by Billy Goodman that dropped between the sore-legged Joe DiMaggio and Keller, and Kramer's surprising one-baser past Brown accounted for two in the fourth. Then came Moses' homer off Porterfield in the sixth.

The final Sox score came off Dick Starr, just recalled from Newark and apparently awed by the situation. Starr walked two and hit one and then balked while pitching to Kramer, of all people.

Kramer lost his shutout in the sixth on Henrich's double to the right field corner. It was the first ball hit to the outfield by the Yanks, who were rolling out all day on Kramer's sinking stuff and twisting low curves.

Henrich rode home on Brown's single, a smash that hopped over Goodman's head. Only a great stop by Shortstop Stephens saved Kramer more trouble. Stephens went deep to his left, almost back of third to knock down Joe DiMaggio's base hit. He had no play but saved an extra baser.

Again in the eighth, when the Yanks threatened for the second time, there was a fine play by Dom DiMaggio who raced in for a running gloved-hand stab of Brown's sinking liner. However, he threw wild, trying to double off Henrich who had singled, and the ball went into the dugout. Henrich went to third and scored on Joe DiMaggio's single.

Tar Heels Upset Texas By 34 to 7

three of 'em, two before the game was 5 minutes old and on exactly five offensive plays.

They made it 21-0 before Texas calmed itself enough to click on a pair of passes, Paul Campbell to Ends Peppy Blount and Ben Proctor, good for a total of 64 yards. The Campbell-to-Proctor toss covered 35 yards and along with Frank Guess' placement saved the Steers from being shut out. The count remained 21-7 throughout the second and third periods until Carolina began a drive to start the final quarter.

There were all sorts of pass interceptions, fumbles, penalties and freak plays as the Tar Heels moved from their own 22 down to the Texas two, from which point Justice tallied his second six points. It was indicative of play throughout the second half that Carolina lost the ball three times during that drive, each time getting it back somehow. The big break came when Bill Flamisch intercepted Billy Allen's toss and carried it to the 15.

Ill feeling between the teams erupted in the final stanza when Ed Kelley, a 220-pound tackle of the Longhorns, pushed his fist into the face of Guard Bill Wardle of Carolina and got himself waved out of the game for his pains.

Georgia Tech Passes Beat Vandy, 13-0

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 25 (AP).—Georgia Tech's aerial offensive clicked in the second and fourth quarters to give the Yellow Jackets a 13-0 victory over Vanderbilt's Commodores today before 22,000.

Georgia Tech's first score came early in the second quarter when Joe E. Brown hurled a long pass to Sophomore Dick Harvin in the end zone. The touchdown was Harvin's first play in college football. Dinky Bowen's placement was good.

As the final quarter opened, Brown again pitched a touchdown pass. This one to Jimmy Jordan was good for 22 yards. Bowen's placement was wide.

Vanderbilt missed a chance to get off in front in the opening quarter when Frank Viegler's behind-the-goal punt went out of bounds on the Tech nine. Three tries gained 5 yards. The threat ended when a fumble cost the Commodores 17 yards.

Georgia Rally Tops Chattanooga, 14-7

Athens, Ga., Sept. 25 (U.P.).—A lack-luster, dyspeptic Georgia team twiddled its thumbs for three quarters and finally mustered a two-touchdown scoring punch in the final period today to beat Chattanooga, 14 to 7, before 12,000 disgruntled fans.

For 45 minutes, Georgia was the most miserable eleven to appear under Coach Wally Butts since he took over 10 years ago. Only some sharp late running and several key pass interceptions produced the victory.

A minute and a half after the fourth quarter opened, Halfback Joe Geir took a lateral from Quarterback Johnny Rauch at the Chattanooga 6, dodged Ralph Hutchinson and barreled through Jack Hoover for the tally.

Just nine plays later, Rauch passed to Flankman Bob Walston in the clear at the 15-yard line and Walston proceeded untouched. The play was good for 44 yards.

Coach Scrappy Moore's determined line, outcharging Georgia on every play, recovered a pair of Georgia fumbles in the first half and once marched to the Georgia 24 before losing the ball on a fumble.

It was left to the visitors to furnish the game's biggest thrill. In the waning moments, Rauch fired a pass straight into the hands of Chattanooga Line-backer Gordon Atchley, who burst through the entire Georgia team and raced 80 yards to score.

Virginia Held To 14-14 Tie By Miami

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 25 (AP). A fleet-footed, vastly underrated Miami of Ohio football team held Virginia's favored Cavaliers to a 14-14 draw here today in a violent offensive battle whose outcome was in doubt until the final seconds.

A desperate, last-minute rush goalward by the Cavaliers fell short of success as time ran out, leaving the visting Redskins a wide margin statistically if not in the scoring column.

Virginia, boasting a lightning punch which nearly offset spotty line play, started out like a fire alarm. The Cavaliers took the opening kickoff and four minutes later, without losing the ball, had powered 62 yards to a touchdown. Barney Gill, a flashy sophomore from Norfolk, Va., whizzed over from the 26 after taking a lateral from Quarterback Joe McCary.

Joe Leonard's kick split the uprights, and it looked as if the rout was on.

But that wasn't the way it worked out. Miami, after an exchange of kicks, took over on its own 38 and zoomed 62 yards downfield for the tying marker shortly after the second period opened. Mel Olix, Redskin quarterback, punched over from the one for the score and Wid Miller kicked the extra point.

Guard Leads Nebraska Win

Lincoln, Nebr., Sept. 25 (AP).—Nebraska and Iowa State, ranked the dark horses of the Big Seven Conference, waged a whale of a battle here today with the Nebraskans winning, 19 to 15.

An overflow crowd of around 36,000, largest ever to see Iowa State play here, sat under a burning sun for the game, first conference contest of the season.

Heads-up play by a substitute guard in the second quarter provided the margin of Nebraska's victory. The score was 6 to 2 for Nebraska when Sub Guard Fred Hawkins scored his touchdown.

Nebraska was on the Iowa State 43 when Cletus Fischer passed wide to End Bob Schneider, who ran about 10 yards, then fumbled. The ball bounced toward the Iowa State goal and Hawkins, traveling full speed ahead, gobbled it up to go 25 yards for the touchdown and a 12-to-2 lead.

N. C. State, Duke Battle To 0-0 Tie

Raligh, N. C., Sept. 25 (AP).—Duke and North Carolina State took turns marching up and down Riddick Stadium today, but neither was able to summon enough punch to cross the goal.

A capacity crowd of 20,000 turned out to see the old Southern Conference rivals fight to a scoreless tie.

Both teams had golden scoring opportunities, but stout line play kept Duke from going beyond the State 8—a drive that was staged in the first half. A fourth-down pass, however, fell incomplete.

The Wolfpack staged its biggest threat in the third period and drove to Duke's 6 on second down. A run and an attempted pass, however, threw them back to the 10.

State's fine line was led by its All-America guard candidate, Bernie Watts. Playing much of the game in the Duke backfield, he blocked one Duke punt and threw Duke's Roland Hodges for a 7-yard loss to halt the Duke second period threat.

Duke gained 132 yards on the ground for 10 first downs and the Wolfpack drove 104 yards for nine first downs. The Wolfpack completed 6 out of 14 passes for 73 yards and 2 Duke completions out of 10 tries were good for 46 yards.

46-Yd. Pass, Run Top Bruins, 19-0

Los Angeles, Sept. 25 (AP).—Northwestern sank the Bruins of UCLA, 19-0, today with two spectacular long-range scoring explosions and a rockwall defense.

A crowd of 55,156 fans—far below the expected 75,000—saw UCLA absorb its second loss in two years at the hands of the Wildcats.

Quarterback Don Burson dropped back and fired an arching pass some 46 yards to his left end, Joe Zuravleff, who stepped across the goal line for the first touchdown in the second quarter.

Midway in the third quarter Gasper Perricone, a 200-pound reserve fullback, got loose for 50 yards and a touchdown.

The third score, just before the game ended, was anti-climatic. The alert Wildcat secondary intercepted a Bruin pass and in seven plays crunched out 29 yards, with Fullback Art Murakowski going over tackle for the last six.

UCLA, hot a week ago in swamping Washington State, was ice cold today. Little Ernie Johnson, the Bruins' chief scatback, never could be sprung loose and the two passers, Ray Nagel and Cliff Schroeder, harrassed by the Wildcat wingmen, gained only 33 yards all afternoon. Meanwhile, Northwestern ranged up and down the field, rolling up 348 yards.

Cornell Drubs N. Y. U., 47-6

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. (AP).—Cornell University's football team scored in every period to win easily over New York University today, 47-6, to open its sixty-first season.

The Big Red tallied twice in the first quarter, one each in the second and third and added two more in the fourth.

Left Halfback Hillary Chollet of New Orleans, who was sidelined all of last year with a pre-season injury, went over for two scores in the first period on a buck through the line from 12 yards out and on a pass from Quarterback Pete Dorset of Fairfield, Conn.

Jeff Fleischmann, the sophomore fullback from Plainfield, N. J., plunged over from the two yard stripe in the second quarter. Frank (Moose) Miller of Atlanta, Ga., galloped through tackle in the third quarter from the 12 and Bernie Babula of Green Ridge, Pa., scored from the 8 in the third period.

End Harvey Sampson of Baldwin, N. Y., took a 12-yard pass from Dorset and scampered 30 yards for the first score in the fourth quarter. Bob Dunston of Connellsville, Pa., tallied another when he took a lateral from Babula on the 46-yard line and traveled the distance.

N Y U. scored in the first period when Quarterback Jerry Eisenmann of the Bronx passed 18 yards to End Irv Mondschein of Brooklyn. Mondschein traveled 68 yards for the marker.

Oregon Finally Wakes Up; Beats Stanford, 20-12

Stanford Stadium, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Favored Oregon finally came from behind today to overpower a battling Stanford eleven, 20 to 12, before 20,000 sunbaked fans.

Trailing 6-12 midway in the third quarter, Coach Jim Aiken's Webfoots finally came to life as their fine quarterback, Norman Van Brocklin, began hitting his receivers and brilliant young Johnny McKay started romping around the ends.

Up to that time it was a dull battle, with both sides putting on a sloppy tackling exhibition. Only the surprising defensive work of a Stanford team that had figured to lose by 20 points kept the fans awake.

Baltimore J. C. Wins

Patuxent, Md., Sept. 25 (AP).—Baltimore Junior College gridders today used a field goal to defeat the Patuxent Naval Air Station football team, 3 to 0. Carroll Deems, a back, kicked the goal from the 30-yard line in the last period.

OSU Drops T, Single-Wings Missouri, 21-7

By the United Press

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Ohio State used good old-fashioned rock-em-sock-em single-wing football to defeat a tricky Missouri outfit, 21 to 7, at Ohio Stadium today before 57,000 fans.

Serving notice on coming opponents that last year's T-formation tactics and six losing games were a thing of the past, Ohio State marched to three touchdowns in precision fashion, with hard running and blocking substituting for so-called T-formation magic.

Missouri, with Quarterback Bus Entsminger as the ringmaster, found its trickery of little avail as a hard charging Ohio State line rushed him continuously.

Ohio State's first touchdown was hammered out over a 91-yard stretch with Jimmy Clark carrying to the outside and Joe Whisler bulling through the middle. Whisler carried two Missouri men over the last chalk stripe from 14 yards out.

The rest of the scoring for Ohio State, two touchdowns and a last period safety, was done in pretty much the same way, with Curly Morrison substituting for Whisler, who never recovered from dizziness incurred in scoring the first touchdown.

The most thrilling play of the day was made by Missouri Halfback Dick Braznell, who took a punt on his own 9 early in the first period and carried it 70 yards to the Ohio State 12. Ohio State held for downs, however.

The line-ups:

OHIO STATE

Bitterly Fought Contest

Gophers Break Loose in Last Period to Beat Huskies, 20-0

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Minnesota's Golden Gophers burst loose savagely in the final period today to score a 20-to-0 victory over the Washington Huskies, who were surprisingly tenacious against the apparent heirs to the Big Nine championship.

More than 40,000 excited fans saw the bitterly fought game between the intersectional rivals.

Flashy Halfback Everett Faunce was the whole show for Minnesota after scatback Bill Bye left the game in the early minutes with a twisted ankle. Faunce broke through for long runs, one of them for a touchdown, and shot deadly passes to End Bud Grant that kept the Huskies guessing most of the way.

After three scoreless periods Faunce and his boys took over on their own 38-yard line. The 172-pound back broke through right tackle and tight-roped down the south sideline 62 yards for a touchdown. Twice it appeared he would be forced out of bounds, but his interference cleared the way and Faunce scored standing up. Gordon Soltau kicked the extra point against a slight breeze.

Minnesota scored again with two minutes remaining in the game. Faunce brought the ball to the four-yard stripe but was injured on the play and forced from the game. Fullback Kuzma plunged over for the second tounchdown. Soltau's placement attempt was wide.

With less than 30 seconds left Soltau went over for what seemed to be the third Minnesota score but the play was called back on a Minnesota holding penalty. The aroused Minnesotans banged back on the next play with substitute Frank Lawrence heaving a 25-yard pass to Dick Anonsen who skidded into the end zone. Soltau kicked the extra point.

It was Coach Bernie Bierman's sixth win in as many clashes with the Huskies. Bierman paced the sidelines today while Husky Coach Howie Odell, bed-ridden with a kidney ailment, listened to the game on a radio in his hospital

TCU Winner In 21-14 Game

Stillwater, Okla., Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Texas Christian, getting busy all at once, scored three touchdowns in three minutes of the second quarter today to defeat Oklahoma A. and M., 21 to 14.

A crowd of 22,000 saw TCU clasp onto a series of first-half breaks and cash them in for three rapid-fire touchdowns, sparked by scooting Lindy Berry and husky Pet Stout, a fullback who passed as well as he smashed the line.

Oklahoma A. and M. scored after four minutes of the first quarter on a 46-yard pass from Quarterback Bob Cook to Right Halfback Bill Grimes. Jack Hartman converted.

But TCU came back in the next period to capitalize on two A. and M. fumbles and score in three lightning stabs.

Stout set up a touchdown with a leaping pass to End George Boal that took the bal lto the A. and M. 9. Berry scored on the next play. Center Homer Ludiker made the extra point.

Less than a minute later, TCU Halfback Jimmy Hickey intercepted a pass by Cook and ran 48 yards down the south sideline to score. Ludiker converted again.

On the first play after the next kickoff Stout hit End Morris Bailey with another leaping pass for the score. Ludiker made it three extra points without a miss.

Iowa City, Iowa, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Al di Marco's passing and Ron Headington's conversion kicking gave Iowa a 14 to 12 victory over Marquette today before 30,208.

Iowa counted first on a 27-yard throw by Di Marco. Headington added the point. Marquette came back to score in the same quarter after Bob Novick intercepted a Di Marco pass. Bill Hickey circled end for the score.

Marquette went ahead in the fourth period after recovering an Iowa fumble. Art Felker scored with a fourth-down pass from Hickey.

Late in the game Ralph Doran brought a Marquette kick back to the 22. Jerry Faske circled end to score with less than four minutes remaining after going to the three on a Di Marco pass.

A crowd of 29,593 cheered the Illini as they overcame stubborn K-State with three touchdowns in the third period and two more in the fourth after holding a slim 7-0 halftime margin.

Jackson Flashes '46 Form, Yale Bowls Over Brown, 28-13

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 25 (AP).—Yale, paced by Levi Jackson, surprised a record opening day crowd of 31,000 with an exciting 28 to 13 triumph over Brown in the bowl today.

The Blue's ebony express, flashing his 1946 form, tallied twice and zoomed an aerial for another score.

The Ivy League rivals, off in a swirl of fumbles, settled down to hard fought football fracas with Jackson's zig-zagging and pitching proving the deciding factor. He carried the ball 21 times and ripped off 174 yards, which compares with the 155 yards he registered during the entire 1947 campaign when he was hobbled by injuries.

All of which made herculean Herman Hickman's debut as Yale's football boss a big success.

Yale Outweighed

The Blue piled up a 14 to 0 lead in the opening period and was never headed, although Brown challenged nearly throughout. The Bruins had an advantage in weight and experience, but Yale had Jackson and a few other lads who promise to improve as the campaign proceeds.

Brown's best operators were Ed Finn, a smart field general, Charley Nelson, Francis Mahoney, Arny Green and Roger Young.

The game hardly had begun when Jackson pitched 17 yards to Ferd Nadherny for the opening score. Then, with the first period closing, Jackson personally raced across from the 6, shaking off about five tacklers.

Brown rallied on Finn's long toss to Nelson, a pass and run of 53 yards, to open the second quarter. And in the third, the rivals matched scores, Green bulling over from the 2 to spark an 80-yard sortie and Dan Wagster registering from the 4 after Jackson's 47-yard run.

Jackson closed the scoring early in the final quarter when he dashed over from the 8.

Tulane Pins 21-14 Defeat On Alabama

New Orleans, Sept. 25 (AP).—Tulane's Green Wave upset Alabama's Crimson Tide, 21-14, today, thanks mainly to the passing of Quarterback Joe Ernst and to most of the breaks.

An estimated 60,000 spectators watched the old Southeastern Conference rivals open their campaigns in hot, clear weather.

Ernst, seldom used in two previous seasons on the squad, pitched for one Tulane touchdown and most of the yardage needed for the other two.

A fumble recovery on the Alabama 32 gave Tulane its second chance in the third period. Ed Price circled left end for the last 4 yards. A few minutes later Tulane got the ball on Bama's 37 through a bad punt, and Ernst tossed 20 yards to End Dick Sheffield on the goal line.

Alabama came back with a 68-yard scoring march, sparked by Ed White's passes and climaxed by Tom Calvin's 4-yard touchdown plunge through the middle.

Minutes later Alabama recovered a fumble on Tulane's 26. Ed Salem passed to Charley Davis on the 9 and then went off right tackle for a touchdown.

Kusserow, Rossides Team Up To Whip Rutgers for Lions

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Columbia's gold dust twins, Lou Kusserow and Gene Rossides, aided by four pass interceptions, drove the Lions to a 27-6 football victory over Rutgers at Baker Field today.

A crowd of 28,000—largest in history for a Columbia opener—watched the contest in perfect weather.

Columbia packed three of its touchdowns into a six-minute spree midway of the first half. Rutgers scored six plays after the second half opened and Columbia closed out the point-making with a 72-yard drive late in the third period.

A lateral pass to John Nork, tacked on to a Kusserow gallop, covered 43 yards and set up the first touchdown. Rossides and Kusserow worked the ball to the two and Kusserow played over left guard for the tally.

Bill Olson stole the first of three Rutgers passes moments later and returned it 29 yards to the two. This time Rossides sneaked over from his quarterback post.

Kusserow worked his running lateral again for 26 yards, with Leon Van Bellingham on the other end. Then the big fullback sloshed through left tackle, cut for the sidelines and we t 35 yards for the score.

Kusserow rested much of the second half but he came in just in time to score from the two with the final touchdown after a beautiful pass from Nork to Adam Rakowski had covered 42 yards.

Indiana Routs Badgers, 35-7, For New Coach

Madison, Wis., Sept. 25 (AP).—George Taliaferro ran, passed and punted Indiana to a crushing 35 to 7 victory over Wisconsin in the Big Nine conference grid opener today.

The Hoosiers' giant Negro halfback made Coach Clyde Smith's debut a happy occasion as he scored three times, pitched passes when they were needed and occasionally punted his club out of trouble.

Smith succeeded Coach Bo McMillin who moved to the Detroit Lions. The new mentor came from La Cross (Wis.) State Teachers College. The Hoosiers produced touchdowns in every quarter. They struck in a hurry when Taliaferro took a Badger punt and romped 68 yards behind slashing blocking. George Parker then added the first of five extra points.

A 24-yard pass, Nick Zebek to Frank Hoppe, brought another first period score.

The Badgers traveled 55 yards and counted on the first play of the second quarter when Wally Dreyer cut over for two yards. Lisle Blackbourn converted.

Taliaferro scored again in the second period on a one-yard jolt over guard following Joe Polce's recovery of a Wisconsin fumble on the five. The half ended 21-7.

In the third quarter, Taliaferro plowed over from the four for his third touchdown after Indiana recovered a fumble on the 16.

Keeping the game in Badger territory, the Hoosiers registered their last touchdown in the final quarter when Ernie Kovatch, reserve end, snatched a Badger pass on the Wisconsin 35 and ran into the end zone.

Furman Rally Beats W. & L., 10-7

Lexington, Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—Furman turned apparent defeat into a 10-7 Southern Conference football victory over Washington and Lee in the closing minutes of play today.

Trailing 7-3, from midway in the first quarter, Furman won when Quarterback George Pruitt, back to pass, found his receivers covered and ran to his left to score from the 10-yard line. John Little, who had booted a Furman field goal in the first period, converted.

Final Period Score Downs Spartans

East Lansing, Mich., Sept. 25 (AP).—Upstart Michigan State scared the daylights out of mighty Michigan in an epic grid opener here today but finally fell, 13 to 7, when the Wolverines marched 73 yards to a fourth-period touchdown.

A throng of 51,511, overflowing the newly enlarged MSC stadium in its dedication game, saw the supercharged Spartans fight the successor to Michigan's unbeaten powerhouse of last year on even terms for 48 minutes before losing their first home opener in 28 years.

Michigan, making its debut under Head Coach Bennie Oosterbaan, successor to Fritz Crisler, scored on the fourth play after it got the ball. A 41-yard arching pass from Fullback Tom Peterson to End Dick Rifenburg did it less than four minutes after the start. Peterson booted the point.

The Spartans turned two brilliant breaks, both engineered by End Warren Huey, into the tying touchdown four minutes and three seconds after the intermission.

Late in the third period Michigan opened a sustained drive that ate up 73 yards before Peterson dived into the end zone from the 3-yard line to give Michigan the decision. It made no ultmate difference that Peterson's conversion attempt sailed way wide to the left.

TRIBE—From P. C1

Indians Whip Tigers, 9-3, to Stay on Top

and Paul (Dizzy) Trout followed in that order. None escaped punishment.

Three of them, Kretlow, Houtteman and Overmire, were on the receiving end when the Tribe wrapped up the game in the fifth inning with a five-run barrage on four hits, three bases on balls and two Detroit errors.

Trucks had not started against Cleveland all season, and it soon became apparent why. He gave up a run in the first inning, escaped unscathed in the second, but was shelled from the mound in the third when the Indians put together singles by Lou Boudreau and Ken Keltner and a walk to Joe Gordon to put them ahead 2-0. It was Trucks thirteenth defeat against as many victories.

Kretlow was on the mound when the Indians put the game on ice. The young righ hander got off on the wrong foot, walking Larry Doby and Boudreau to open the fifth.

After Gordon flied out, Keltner singled in Doby and Broudreau scored when Vico fumbled Wally Judnich's grounder. Robinson's single chased in Keltner and Thurman Tucker, running for Judnich, also crossed the plate when Vic Wertz's throw sailed past the plate.

Cadets Rout Villanova

but it was all Army the rest of the way.

The Cadets fielded a squad reminiscent of their wartime outfits, featured by the hard running of Winfield Scott and Bobby Stuart, slick passing by Arnold Galiffa and some fancy stepping by two newcomers, Gil Stephenson and Jim Cain.

They missed two other touchdowns by a matter of 3 yards and had numerous other scoring opportunities which they won't be muffing once they gain a little more experience.

Army drove 60 yards for its first touchdown. A 17-yard gallop by Stuart featured the march, started late in the first period, and Scott ended it by skirting left end for 4 yards and the counter.

After being turned back twice at the 3-yard line, Army got a break in the third period when Al Schmid's attempted quick kick went out on the 18. After Stephenson picked up 11 yards, Galiffa passed four to Dan Foldberg in the end zone.

It took the Cadets only seven plays to score from their own 36 in the fourth quarter. Runs by Scott and Stephenson and a 15-yard Galiffa to Foldberg pass carried to the 19, from where Stuart circled right end to go over standing up.

With Villanova passing desperately, the Army defenders hauled the ball down regularly. A 34-yard return by GU's Dielens on one of these interceptions set up the final marker, scored from a yard out when Bill Gustafson tossed a flat pass to Cain.

Such Crust Easy Victor Over LaHaLa

California's Danny Arena piloted Jack Schafer's crimson streak, Such Crust to victory yesterday in the first heat of the President's Cup powerboat classic.

More than 50,000 people surrounded the course, landlubbers watching from East Potomac Park and seamen in their boats tied up outside the course markers.

Observers considered the racing conditions ideal—just enough chop to give the boats a lift.

Arena coasted home in front of the largest powerboat field ever entered in the President's Cup in the near-record time of 70.203 miles per hour for the 15-mile course. It was less than a mile an hour slower than the 71-18 mark set here two years ago by Danny Foster in Miss Great Lakes.

In second place, several hundred yards behind Such Crust, was Harry Lynn's La Ha La, out of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., driven by its owner. La Ha La kept a steady pace throughout, starting from fifth place at the gun and edging determinedly past all the pace-setters except the winner.

Boat Capsizes

Ten boats started, seven finished. Warren E. Avis capsized in Robert Frost's Miss Frostie in the fourth lap, the first of the three casualties. Avis was picked up uninjured by an alert Coast Guard crew.

Henry Kaiser's big aluminum rectangle, the Fleur Du Lac, was the next to pull out, jinxed with engine trouble. Miss Pepsi, the Dossin Brothers' defending champion, from Detroit which had settled into second place for the last two laps, stalled a half-mile from the finish.

Wild Bill Cantrell, gunning Ed Gregory's My Sweetie at exactly the right moment, got the jump on the other drivers at the start. Cantrell and his followers apparently misjudged the first turn, and all headed inside the marker buoy, causing a great deal of threshing and squirming before they got straightened out and around the turn.

Such Crust Lags Back

Such Crust let My Sweetie set the pace until the stretch turn on the second lap, then set out after her. Cantrell wouldn't relinquish the pole at the turn and Arena had to wait for the straightaway where he skimmed into the lead just forward of the officials boat.

My Sweetie also from Detroit, held on respectably for a lap before letting Miss Pepsi and La Ha La pass her, ending up third when Miss Pepsi pulled up lame.

The speeds for the six laps picked up along the way despite the fact that Arena was in no danger for the last two laps. The first was covered at 67 miles per hour, progressing to 73.831 miles per hour for the final lap.

The other finishers were Miss Canada, owned by Ernest Wilson of Ingersoll, Ontario; Betty V, owned by Mel Crook of Upper Montclair, N. J.; Sister Syn, owned by Horace Dodge of Detroit, and Tommy Keane's Tomadge IV. Tomadge IV was the only Washington craft entered.

Program Resumes Today

For Jack Schafer, a Detroit bakery magnate, the victory came during his honeymoon. He married three days ago. Shaffer has been a powerboat sportsman for only one year.

Such Crust, named after its owner's wares, is a brand-new boat, having been built last June. It had a couple of minor triumphs and a crackup in the Detroit Gold Cup races last month in its log before yesterday's smashing win.

Two more 15-mile heats are scheduled for the powerboats in today's events.

Massachusetts Edges Bates in 4th Period, 7-6

Amherst, Mass., Sept. 25 (U.P.)—The University of Massachusetts staved off a last-period rally by Bates to edge the Bobcats, 7 to 6, at Alumni Field today before 4000 fans.

Massachusetts scored in the first period on a hidden ball play and then converted for the extra point. Bates tally came in the fourth on a 20-yard pass from Art Blanchard to George Reale.

SUCH CRUST—Such Crust wins the first heat yesterday in the President's Cup regatta for power boats off Hains Point. The big red boat is owned by Jack Schafer, a Detroit baker. It was driven by Danny Arena, Kent, Ohio. It averaged 70.203 miles per hour. The final two heats in this event will be run today. Over 100,000 are expected to watch the program out Navy's pattern of attack, Reeves Baysinger completed seven consecutive Middie passes.

Coach Sauer's Quick Starting Model Stalls

It wasn't long however, until it became apparent that the Golden Bears were too stout for Middies to handle.

California had so many good backs that even an injury to their All-American candidate, Fullback Jackie Jensen, did not slow them down.

And in the final minutes, with Navy trying desperately for a second touchdown, California had the satisfaction of seeing a reserve eleven stack the Middies up in an old-fashioned goal-line stand.

You might put it down that Navy showed enough improvement today to beat some of its later opponents who lack California's overwhelming power. And that California is not an overrated club.

IF YOU LIKE to pick out a single situation that surpasses all others, I thought a defensive decision by Navy was little short of inspirational.

With the score still tied at 7-7, the Middies were back near their own goal. California was ripping off gains in big chunks, but two 5-yard penalties stayed their attack.

On third down, one of these penalties was called on California with the ball resting on the Navy 3-yard line. Navy had the choice of accepting the penalty, moving the ball out to the 8 but giving California two downs in which to score.

The Navy boys put their heads together and decided to leave the ball on the 3, defying California to smash it over from that point in one down.

California's charges ended up 1 foot short of the goal line. In the press box the experts, who had quickly second-guessed Navy's generalship a moment before, said:

"Brother, that took guts."

In the dressing room after the game, young Baysinger was being complimented on his seven straight pass completions.

"Yes, but the first one I missed hurt us more than anything else in the game," he said.

He had in mind a low thrown ball shortly after Navy scored its touchdown.

Navy had intercepted a California pass near midfield and pushed down to California's 6-yard line. At that juncture, it seemed that Navy would make it 14-0.

But Baysinger threw into the flat to the right. The ball, intended for Pistol Pete Williams, struck the ground. Officials ruled it a lateral. The ball went to California because a Bear recovered it.

Had it been ruled an incomplete forward pass, Navy would have retained possession of the ball with a good chance to score again.

"That was the turning point for us," Sauer remarked. "We might have scored again because we were still fresh at that point.

"But I'm mighty happy with the way the boys went out and scored right off the bat. I thought we would break loose for a score or two, but the boys surprised even me in the way they clicked the first time they got their hands on the ball."

Over to one side a little later, Baysinger revealed how most of the Middies probably feel after today's game.

"We'll beat Cornell, Duke and Missouri in our next three games before we run into Penn, Notre Dame, Army and the rest of that crowd," he said

Rampart Victor At Atlantic City

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 25 (AP). Mrs. Helene K. Haggerty's Rampart won her third stakes victory of the season today when she easily accounted for the All-American handicap and its purse of $11,375 at the Atlantic City Racetrack.

The 6-year-old mare had little opposition for her three opponents, including Petrol Point, a stablemate. Silas B. Mason 2d's First Nighter trailed Rampart at the end of the mile and three sixteenths by 2½ lengths. Joe W. Brown's Brown Mogul was another four lengths back with Petrol Point bringing up the rear.

Middies Bow to California's Power-Laden Running Attack

ing and Pete Williams and Al McCully running, the Sailors marched 82 yards after receiving the opening kickoff. McCully climaxed the uninterrupted advance by hurdling over from the 2-yard line and Jimmy Wills split the uprights to make it 7-0 after five minutes of play had elapsed.

Middies Fumble on Bears' 10

Three minutes after the first score, the Middies appeared headed for a second touchdown when Pete Williams intercepted a Don Erickson pass and returned it nine yards to the Cal 39. Baysinger, pitching with unerring accuracy, completed his fifth straight pass and the Sailors found themselves on the Bear 15. Bill Hawkins tore through the middle for 10 yards.

Baysinger then lateralled to Williams on the Cal 10, but the pass was short and Billy Main recovered the fumble to stem the Navy advance and start the Bears on their victory march.

With Fullback Jack Jensen and Halfback Staten Webster tearing huge holes through the middle of the Navy line, the Bears drove to the Navy 20 where their first full-scale offensive was halted early in the second quarter.

Minutes later, however, the Bears were prowling again. They got their chance when Quarterback Celeri intercepted a Baysinger pass on the Navy 44 and legged it back 9 yards.

Two Celeri passes, one to Jensen and the second to End Norm Pressley and an 8-yard jaunt by Jensen carried to the Navy 1-yard line. At that point Webster, a 170-pound senior playing his first year of varsity ball, rammed through for Cal's first touchdown. Jimmy Cullom's kick tied it.

The Bears threatened to rub out the tie three minutes later when Center Bob Hilman intercepted another Baysinger pass on the Bear 44. Two Celeri runs, both coming when he was unable to get off passes, featured an advance to the Navy three, but time ran out on the Bears and they had to postpone their next touchdown until the third period.

It didn't take Coach Lynn Waldorf's crew long to make it, either. Starting from their own 12, where Jensen returned the kickoff, they needed only eight plays to ground out the required 88 yards. Halfback Webster covered the last 26 yards, slipping through a hole between tackle and guard and bowling over Jimmy Green at the two-yard line to put the Bears in front. Cullom, who kicked all three points, made it 14-7.

Cal Marches 67 Yards

Starting from the Navy 33, where Don Schultz flagged a Baysinger pass, the Bears completed their scoring in the opening seconds of the final period. Jim Monachino and Charley Sarver had driven to the four-yard line as the third quarter ended and Sarver dived over for the score on the second play of the final period.

Navy, never able to make any headway against the Bears after their first period drives, got their final shoring dhanre late in the fourth period, too late as it turned out, as the gun sounded with the Sailors on the Bear three.

Cross seven. Big Veto Kissell, thoroughly bottled up all day, then fumbled and Guard Fred Sternberg pounced on it for Georgetown.

Given this lift, the Hoyas went on to score. They did drag it out a little, Baranowski waiting until fourth down before he completed a 4-yard pass that end George Benigni picked off his shoe top in the end zone. Dick Haesler converted and Georgetown took a 7-0 lead it held until 8:20 of the second period.

Holy Cross, using the T-formation for the first time under Osmanski, started slowly but gained enough momentum to eventually pile up a statistical edge from scrimmage of 249 yards to 122,

Dave Cook's 43-yard touchdown dash was registered late in the first period and ended an 80-yard drive by the Crusaders. Georgetown still had hopes when Tackle Tom Dolan blocked the extra point attempt by Quarterback Jim Murphy.

But the Crusaders went ahead for keeps in the second period when Brennan faded far back and tossed a 38-yard scoring pass to Leo Troy, receiving specialist, who sprinted madly until the ball met his finger tip just as he was gliding into the end zone.

That ended an 88-yard scoring march that began when Georgetown blew a chance to score its second touchdown. The Hoyas were down to the Holy Cross 13 when Baranowski slipped and threw an unwise pass that Don Davis intercepted on his own 12.

Next time, midway in the third period, the Crusaders covered 55 yards. The last 15 were taken care of when Brennan again demonstrated a nice throwing arm. This one was taken care of in the end zone by End Jim Dieckelman.

Georgetown never stopped trying, it should be said, but lacked scoring punch. Early in the fourth period, Vic Banonis recovered a Crusader fumble on the host's 34. After Billy Conn, who displayed enough to make it look like he's all they say he is, went 10 yards to the 15, an Elmer Raba to Fran Desmond pass went askew.

Desmond hit it up in the air and John Reader grabbed it for Holy Cross, falling into the end zone for a touchback.

Right before that Elmer Raba sparked a 42-yard drive that failed again at the Holy Cross 15. On the kickoff after the Crusaders' third touchdown, Johnny Hughes handed it off to Conn who came back to his 35.

Raba completed a pass to Desmond, then three successive tosses to Billy Rose that took the ball down to the Holy Cross 17. On Raba's last try, after he got the Hoyas that close, Rose couldn't hold a difficult toss on the Holy Cross three.

Potentially, it looked like Georgetown had a lot more offensive punch that last year's club. The Hoyas will have to bring it out quickly if they hope to cope with powerful Boston College next Friday night at Griffith Stadium.

—Jarboe, 18, Oldest—

Young Team at G. U. Prep Averages 16 Years Per Man

At 18, Jack Jarboe, Georgetown Prep's regular left guard, is the oldest member of the 34-man squad which averages just under 16 years per player.

Jack is also one of the smallest at 145, but he's rugged, and Coach Orrel Mitchell will use him regularly.

Don't sell the Little Hoyas short because of their youth. They knocked off Woodrow Wilson, 12-0, and Sidwell Friends, in their first two games. They figure to improve on their 4-4-1 record of last season, and may even dispute the Catholic High title with St. John's and Gonzaga.

Youngest member of the varsity, and also one of its most promising is 13-year-old Paulie O'Donnell. Despite his tender years, Paulie is pressing John Awalt for the regular right guard position.

One of three O'Donnell brothers on the squad, Paulie is a giant for his age. He stands a shade under 6 feet, and scales 170. He's very fast, knows how to use his hands, and has excellent coordination.

Eldest of the O'Donnell's is 16-year-old Judie, converted from one of the prize prep centers of last year to end this season. The other O'Donnell brother is 15-year-old Hugh, second string tackle.

Tommy Crowley, one of the city's better halfbacks for two years, has been moved to the end opposite Judie O'Donnell. Coach Mitchell's '48 team will emphasize passing, and Mitchell hopes Crowley and O'Donnell's basketball experience will help them catch touchdown passes.

On the pitching end will be Quarterback Ed Claxton, general of the Little Hoyas' T attack, and one of the cleverest handoff specialists in the prep ranks.

Grabbing the handoffs will be Billy Bidwill, son of Charlie Bidwill, late owner of the Chicago Cardinals, Pete Corcoran and Bob O'Donnell, no relation to the other O'Donnells. These three backs, at 185 pounds each, are the biggest men on the squad, and hit the line like pile drivers.

Well-Balanced Grid Team To Take Field at St. Albans

Coach Al Wagner of St. Albans has a refreshing outlook for the 1948 football season.

While most of his colleagues are peering pessimistically toward the future, Wagner lets it be known that "I'm very pleased with my team; it's in fine shape and should win most of its games."

Behind Wagner's enthusiastic hopes are a versatile seasoned backfield and a fast, moderately heavy line deep in reserve strength.

Shorb Back in Action

One of the most important figures on the St. Albans team is Bob Shorb, a 155-pound tailback, who does everything well, but who missed last season because of a bone infection in his leg. Bob's an exceptionally good passer and runner.

He has an exceptionally capable understudy, too, in Voris Conrad, who is playing his first year of football. Voris is a triple threat, who will put in lots of playing time.

Wagner's breakaway runner is Walter Leach, veteran halfback, and he has a pair of strong plunging fullbacks in Frank Lee and Phil Bodest,

Lee, a regular last year, also takes care of the most of punting. Bodest, a 193-pounder, is showing no effects of a broken leg and fractured ankle suffered last season.

At quarterback, the blocking back position in Wanger's single wing offense, is Tom Bradley, a newcomer, who's catching on fast.

Well Fixed at Ends

Holding down center is Bill Hobby, a 165-pounder, whose mother, Col. Oveta Hobby, commanded the WACs during the recent war. Bill is a fine line backer.

At the ends are rangy Roger Kingsbury and Tom Sisson, who are being pushed by speedy 5-foot 10-inch Nate Shelton.

The 6-foot 4-inch Kingsbury, who was Washington's leading scorer during basketball season, is a handy target on short passes. Shelton moves fast under the long passes. Sisson, 6 feet, 3 inches, does well on all assignments.

Regular tackles are Buddy van den Berg, 180, and Geoff Eckles, 175, with Guy Stewart, 175, slated to see a lot of service. Guards are Capt. Ricky Elwell and Bill Boger with Bob Critlow, the No. 1 reserve.

G. W. Defeats VPI, 13-0, for First Win

Kline's mitts on the 4. Kline slipped inside his right tackle on the next play to score. Frank Cavallos' placement was wide.

Tech launched its strongest offensive near the end of the first half with Chip Collum and Ray Beasley carrying the Gobblers' 43-yards to the GW 26. But there the GW line, which sparkled throughout the game, threw Bud Fisher, Tech passer, for two successive losses and the drive fizzled on the Colonial 44.

Sterling Wingo, speedy Tech back who was the pacemaker in the 42-6 rout of GW last season, was finally inserted in the second half, as Bud Fisher stepped up the Gobblers' aerial attack.

However, George Washington Guards Jim Regan and Charlie Gunner, End Bartelloni and Tackle Harvey Shipman stemmed the attack by crashing through time after time, an dburying the passer before he could get the ball away.

George Washington scraped up its second touchdown late in the third stanza with Davis again Spangler once as the Colonials He carried the ball five times, Frank Cavallo carried twice and spangler once as the Colonials drove to a first down on the Tech 3.

The Tech line held gallantly for three downs, but on fourth down, Spangler squeezed over from the 1-inch line. Cavallo converted.

Spangler twice punted out of bounds inside the Tech 5 in the last quarter but Tech managed to summon one more threat. With 2 minutes left, Fisher connected with one pass to Roger Neal and another to Otie Meriwether and moved to the George Washington 36.

'Skins Launch Season Today With Steelers

previous years, the main cog in Washington's machine is Slingin' Sammy Baugh, the 34-year-old wizard for whose benefit the passing record books are printed. Assisting him will be 12 burly young men seeing their second season with the Redskins, four in their third year and six players besides Baugh with lengthier experience. These are Halfback Dick Todd (seven years), End Doug Turley (five years), and four-year men Dick Poillon, halfback; John Adams, tackle; Al Demao, center, and Howie Livingston, halfback. Livingston played with the New York Giants before joining Washington this year.

Today's argument starts the second year as head coach for the Redskins' Turk Edwards. For Pittsburgh's John Michelosen it will be the first, the former Pitt quarterback having replaced the late Jock Sutherland after 10 years as the Silent Scot's assistant.

On the strength of pre-season games neither of today's opponents have much to brag about. Washington won a single game in four outings, that one over the Los Angeles Rams, but the Tribe looked good for one half against the champion Chicago Cardinals and played the Chicago Bears to a standstill before losing, 17-14, in the final minutes.

Pittsburgh lost all four of its exhibitions. There was a two-touchdown setback at the hands of the Bears, followed by a 9-7 loss to Green Bay (which kicked the daylights out of the Redskins), and thoroughly convincing beatings by Detroit and the Cardinals. The last two drubbings were absorbed while the Steelers lacked the services of both their star left halfbacks.

Rookie Ray Evans of Kansas is still out of commission and won't play today. But back in the line-up is Johnny (Zero) Clement, a passing and running ace who has been a thorn in the side of the Redskins for three years.

The line-ups:

Blue Peter Wins $113,110 Futurity at Belmont

Bel Air Race Feature Won By Teardrop

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Sept. 25.—Maryland's minor track season—Laurel opens the big time next Thursday—came to a close with a banner crowd of 10,000 watching the sport here under ideal conditions.

The featured Elray Farm Purse went to Mrs. O. L. Nyberg's Teardrop by three parts of a length with Jimmy Rankin, leading jockey at the meeting, sitting pretty in the saddle. In a photo for second position J. K. Wynkoop's Gal Royal took the camera measure of S. H. Rogers' Gunner. The latter, Washington owned, was the favorite in the field of eight.

Returns $7 Mutuel

In the role of second choice, Teardrop won her second straight at the local session and returned a $7 mutuel. Rankin made her his sixteenth winner and guided the mare the 6½ furlongs in 1.20 2/5 over a fast oval, incidentally the only condition of the racing strip throughout the meeting.

A speed jam at the first turn eliminated J. J. Ring's Westover Lady and bothered C. B. Gribbin's Wee Singer. Mrs. M. E. Murphy's Alport showed a dull effort after stumbling leaving the gate.

Teardrop was in front throughout Gunner attempted to get to the lead on the inside, but was faltering at the end. Gal Royal had to go wide when Wee Singer swung out entering the stretch and then closed willingly to nip Gunner for the place.

Liberty Gold Wins

Perhaps the tightest finish of the 10 days of the sport here came in the second race. Six horses were within a length at the finish of the test of 6½ furlongs. The camera voted Mrs. Jewell Farrell's Liberty Gold the winner, but could not separate Mary Parge's Kuduwrack and D. S. Schoch's head or tails and the judges were forced to make it a dead heat for the place.

Liberty Gold, saddled by A. J. La Coste, the top winner at the meeting, paid $10.20 and put the finishing touches on a $29 payoff on the daily double. P. A. Rothfuss' Flickafoot won the first race at a $3.40 favorite while handled by Apprentice Charle Meyerhoffer.

Favorite Is Beaten In Stretch

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Blue Peter won the $113,110 Futurity, racing's richest and most important 2-year-old classic, before a crowd estimated at 38,000 persons today at Belmont Park.

Joseph M. Roebling's New Jersey champion defeated the favored filly Myrtle Charm by a neck in a blistering stretch duel down the Widener straightaway.

The bay son of War Admiral, in winning his seventh straight race, covered the 6½ furlongs in 1:14 3/5 seconds, just one fifth of a second off the world's track record for a straight course set in 1938 by Porter's Mite. The winner paid $6.80, $2.70 and $2.80. Third, eight lengths away, was Woodvale Farm's Sport Page.

Blue Peter engaged in an early battle with Fred Hooper's Olympia for the lead, with Myrtle Charm running third. As Jockey Eric Guerin sent Blue Peter after the big first money of $88,410, Olympia began dropping back and Ted Atkinson shot Myrtle Charm in the contending position.

The pair battled down to the wire, but Blue Peter held on in the drive and took the photo verdict.

Blue Peters' earnings now total $129,185, with eight victories in 10 starts and his triumph will earn him many votes as the 1948 juvenile champion. It was Myrtle Charm's first defeat in four starts.

Mill River Stable's Miss Grillo won the $28,650 New York handicap two mile and one quarter secondary feature on the program. The Argentine route runner beat Deering Howe's Donor by five lengths, and the latter was six panels ahead of King Ranch's Fire Point.

Clocked in 3:53 3/5, the winner paid $4.90, $2.80 and $2.40 and earned first money of $19,600.

Vols Lose; McWilliams Runs Wild

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 25 (AP).—Tom (Shorty) McWilliams, a brilliant passing, kicking and running halfback, performed all three masterly today to lead Mississippi State to a smashing 21-to-6 victory over Tennessee.

A crowd of 35,000 persons saw the Maroons come from behind for touchdowns in the second, third and fourth quarters after Tennessee had marched 67 yards for its lone score in the first period.

The Maroons' first touchdown climaxed a 43-yard drive, Truitt Smith sneaking over from the 2-yard stripe.

McWilliams again passed and ran the Maroons to their second score, the payoff coming on a 1-yard heave to Alexander. Shorty started this drive, a 51-yarder, by flipping an 18-yard pass to Kenneth Davis, and then followed it up with an 11-yard gallop.

Mississippi State's final score game in the fading moments of the game. Harper Davis grabbed a desperation Tennessee pass and ran 30-yards untouched across the double stripes.

The Vols marched 67-yards midway the opening stanza for their score, which was made possible by a pass interference play on State's 2-yard stripe. Fullback George Balitsaris plunged over after an official ruled McWilliams interferred with end Jim Powell.

It was the second triumph in a row for Coach Dudley De Groot's Mountaineer machine.

Jimmy Walthall, who passed for three touchdowns in last week's triumph over Waynesburg, came up with two more scoring tosses today.

West Virginia was in command all the way although the battling Scots made it close in the second period when they scored their lone touchdown after the Mountaineers had taken a 14-point lead in the first quarter.

Congdon's 69 Wins Canadian Golf

Vancouver, British Columbia, Sept. 25 (AP).—Chuck Congdon, of Tacoma, Wash., today fired a 69 for a 280 total to win the $10,000 Canadian Open golf championship.

Congdon's 3-under-par in the final 18 holes of the 72-hole medal play tourney shattered the two-stroke lead Dick Metz carried into the final round.

Metz cracked on the last nine today and posted a 2-over-par 74 for a 283 total. Both pros finished the hot first nine all square.

Lexington, Va., Sept., 25 (AP).—Virginia Military Institute opened its 1948 football season here today with an impressive display of running power and passing accuracy in defeating the Indians of Catawba College, 28-6.

The Keydets handled a reputedly rugged Catawba team with relative ease. They scored in every quarter but the last. VMI might have snapped Catawba's national collegiate record of having scored in 78 straight games, but for a fourth-quarter fluke.

The Indians tallied when Donald Lambeth, senior guard from Lexington, N. C., grabbed an attempted pass that was partially blocked and scampered 24 yards for the lone Catawba touchdown. The 6-pointer ran their record to scoring in 79 consecutive games.

VMI's victory began when Jack Hutchinson intercepted Lee Spear's pass and went 75 yards for the Keydets' first period touchdown.

Bobby Thomason, one of the South's finest passers, opened up with his tosses in the second quarter and VMI scored twice to clinch it.

Two short kicks, a fumble and an interception set up the four scores.

Arkansas Romps Over East Texas

Fayetteville, Ark., Sept. 25 (AP).—Leon (Muscles) Campbell and a fleet of other fast backs drove an Arkansas Razorback steamroller over East Texas State College, 46-7, today.

Campbell, a 190-pound fullback, outshone even the sparkling Clyde Scott, his running mate, as he scored twice and netted 125 yards on 19 carries. One of Cambell's scores came on a 46-yard sprint. For the second straight week Scott ran brilliantly to set up touchdowns but didn't score them himself. And, also for the second straight week, he returned a punt all the way, this time for 80 yards, only to have his feat nullified by a penalty.

New Mexico Tops Colorado, 9-6

Boulder, Colo., Sept. 25 (AP).—A tough, swift-striking University of New Mexico football team today beat a path through the University of Colorado's line for a 9-6 victory.

A crowd of 16,000 spectators saw the Lobos explode scatback Bill Roche into the clear midway in the second quarter for a 53-yard gallop to pay dirt. Jerry McKown tacked on the extra point.

Late in the final period, New Mexico trapped sophomore Halfback Arlie Berry in the C. U. end zone for a two-point safety.

Colorado's lone tally came late in the second quarter on a sustained drive from their own 46.

Many Rookies to Play In Bears-Packers Tilt

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 25 (AP).—Veterans may take back seats to rookies tomorrow in the sixtieth renewal of the National Football League feud between the Chicago Bears and the Green Bay Packers before a full house of 25,500 fans at city stadium.

Highly-publicized first year Bears like Johnny Lujack of Notre Dame, and Bobby Layne of Texas, will be making their league debuts and both are expected to see considerable action behind Veteran Sid Luckman at quarterback.

Packer freshmen opening league play at home include Center Jay Rhodemyre of Kentucky and Backs Ed Smith of Texas Mines, Ralph Earhart of Texas Tech, Earl (Jug) Girard of Wisconsin and Perry Moss of Illinois.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1948

Juniors Confer on Benefit Show

Hessler

The show, a picture of fashions in the Nation's Capital, is being given under the auspices of the Washington Committee for Education on Alcoholism. Dresses, suits, coats and hats for the event are being presented by the Washington Fashion Designers Institute. Two identical performances, one at 11:30 a. m. and the other at 4 p. m., will take place in the hotel's ballroom.

By Marie McNair

YOU KNOW it's fall when the races open up at Laurel; when practically the whole town disports itself at Mr. and Mrs. Roy St. Lewis' annual party at their Maryland estate. There are other signs, too, of the autumn season, such as fashion shows and new hats, appearing on the scene and picnics around open fires.

A buffet luncheon in the clubhouse on Thursday with Henry A. Parr, 3d., president of the race course, as host, will start the day off at the track.

Breckinridge Long, former Assistant Secretary of State, will be there from Montpelier Manor, his Colonial estate near Laurel, and Governor and Mrs. William Preston Lane, jr., are also among those who've been asked.

MRS. McNAIR

Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, Secretary of the Air Force Stuart Symington and Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, assistant secretary of the Air Force, whose horses will be running at Laurel, will presumably turn up for the event.

The Jouett Shouses have a box again this year, so do Alfons Landa, Taylor Chewning, Marshall Marston, Mrs. George L. Harrison—she was Mrs. Cary Grayson, and Mr. and Mrs. George E. Allen.

Roy and Peggy St. Lewis' fun fest at Rancho Mio, out near Ednor, Md., began in mid-afternoon, went on into the night.

There were clowns and bareback riders, flea trainers, a bearded lady and the man on the flying trapeze, masking dignified members of the Diplomatic Corps, and other friends of the St. Lewis', all bent on having a good time.

The hostess, who has that Viennese type of beauty, had chosen an old-fashioned costume with a bonnet decked in waving plumes. Here from New York was Peggy's old friend, Anne Francine, who sang divinely and as the spirit moved them some of the guests performed before a more than enthusiastic audience.

CAROLIE WOODS, Mrs. Arthur Woods' pretty daughter, will wear her mother's wedding gown of white net embroidered in pearls, when she becomes the bride of Valentine Hollingsworth, jr. of Boston, next Saturday in Georgetown's Christ Church.

The daughter of the late Col. Arthur Woods, one time Police Commissioner, and the great granddaughter of the great J. Pierpont Morgan, will have her sister-in-law, Mrs. John P. Woods, as her matron of honor and Miss Alice Ripley of New York for maid of honor.

Carolie's new sister-in-law, Mrs. Leonard H. Woods, the former Anina Paepcke of Chicago, will be in the wedding party and other bridesmaids will be Miss Caroline Hollingsworth of Boston, sister of the prospective bridegroom; Miss Margaretta Fitler of Philadelphia and Mrs. James B. Kite of Oklahoma City.

Eight-year-old Mary Rhinelander of Boston, will be the flower girl.

Performing the duties of best man for his brother will be Mark Hollingsworth and the services of ushers are to be intrusted to Leonard H. Woods and Alexander H. Woods, the bride's brothers; Peter Miller of New York, and two cousins of Mr. Hollingsworth—Stephen Brooks of Baltimore and Melville Stone of New York.

Mrs. Morgan Hamilton will be here from New York to see her charming granddaughter as a bride and will stay with Mrs. Philip Rhinelander, Carolie's great aunt.

TOWN TOPICS: With the completion of Mrs. John W. Snyder's portrait by Greta Compton, the threesome is now temporarily hanging in the Secretary of the Treasury's private office. Drucie Snyder, in a soft blue frock, looks down from a spot over the fireplace, her father's portrait is on the north wall, and Mrs. Snyder's likeness stands on an easel, having just been finished and waiting for a frame. The painting is an excellent likeness and the technique of the filmy black lace gown studded with rhinestones is superb.

Party Series Will Honor World Bank, Fund Leaders

By Elizabeth Maguire

SOCIETY will focus attention on financial figures this week. Monetary mentors attending Bank and Fund parties will supersede all else on the social front.

For guests or hosts who wonder, there are two participants in the Monetary Conference: 1. The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (called World Bank); and 2. the International Monetary Fund. The Bank distributes money to countries in need. The Fund was set up to stabilize international exchange.

There are 47 member countries of both Bank and Fund, each country having a governor and alternate governor. The governor of the Bank is the minister of finance for his country. In the United States he is the Secretary of the Treasury. Usually, but not always, the governor of the Bank is also governor of the Fund.

There are also 14 executive directors and 14 alternate directors for the 47 countries in both Bank and Fund, several countries being represented by one director. Officers of Bank and Fund and delegates complete the list of the Bank-Fund personnel. John J. McCloy is president of the World Bank and Camille Gutt, as managing director, heads the Fund.

Dr. Yun-Wu Wang, Minister of Finance of China, has been elected chairman of the board of governors for both Bank and Fund this year, and as such he will be host tomorrow afternoon at a reception at the Shoreham Hotel. The party will be the

Home Hunters Stake Claims for Houses Of Losing Candidates

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

NOW THAT October 1st of an electoral year is fast upon us Communist machinations begin to pale compared to local real estate intrigues. Sure newcomers-to-be, those dissatisfied with their present housing, follow political news eagerly, figure which politicos with cozy homes are sure of defeat, which will leave earliest in shifting administrations. Then they nip around to an agent, stake out first claim. Often, anyone equipped with a few prominent addresses can, without wear and tear, check on political gossip.

MRS. THAYER

Take, for instance, Massachusett's Representative Christian Herter who is reputedly quivering on the brink of heftier jobs, perhaps Assistant Secretary of State. It's definite Mr. H's is in for the big time—why?—because the kitchen of his P street house is being handsomely enlarged. An enlarged kitchen means more entertaining, a bigger job.

Quite on the frivolous side, the agent has his or her peculiar problems, too. A dressy lady, one of the vanguard of new Washingtonians, inspected house after house disconsolately, finally breathed, "No, none of them will do. None fit the antiques I had specially made in Paris!"

Military Takes Over

MEANWHILE to prevent administrative collapse after November 1st, to keep Democrats in appointive positions from heading home once votes are counted, the military is taking quiet measures. Officers with plenty of brass rating and much specialized know-how will be installed unobtrusively in the various Assistant Secretaries' offices and dotted strategically through lower echelons. Everything manned by lesser fry will be kept running smoothly and big shots will be kept, just short of physical violence, nose-to-grindstone until January. Without this effort the terrific job turnover might seriously cripple our Government.

Juliana Exercises Prerogative

THE world's newest Queen, Juliana of the Netherlands, exercised her royal prerogative and inaugurated a number of purely sartorial innovations at her recent Investiture (equivalent to a Coronation in Holland) in Amsterdam.

Neither her mother, the former Queen Wilhelmina, nor her grandmother, Queen Emma, wore crowns but they did wear elaborate tiaras at the solemn ceremony. Juliana, who on grand occasions dons one of her many diadems, decided on something different, younger and decidedly becoming. It was a Juliet cap meshed with enormous pearls. studded with sapphires and rubies—all very real, of course.

New Book on Eisenhower

THE come-on blurb printed this week in a national magazine trumpeting WAC Capt. Kay Summersby's book, "The Inside Story of Ike Eisenhower at War," gives an erroneous impression of a very nice girl. The headline blares "A Woman Tells" but General Eisenhower's wartime driver-secretary is a genuinely self-effacing person who never boasts or "tells." If she's starting now, and in print, the chances are her telling is discreet, utterly without sting.

Tall, about 5-foot 9, slim, with reddish hair which, despite catty remarks to the contrary, never reached below her uniform collar, Irish-born Kay first came to American notice back in 1940. She was one in a pool of British girls who had volunteered as drivers.

Among her first assignments was chauffeuring American officers who were in London as military observers. She was so efficient, so well liked that when we entered the war American officers remembered and asked for her. The pool was eventually disbanded and Kay was given a commission as lieutenant in our WAC. As Eisenhower's chauffeur, she drove incredibly long hours and, when she was through, carried out other tasks, such as fixing accommodations for guests and those coming to see the general.

Even those who knew her intimately never heard Kay Summersby speak of her boss as anything except "The General" though, they themselves called him "Ike" as a matter of course. Though she never mentioned it, Kay's Army career was highlighted by such incidents as being shipwrecked off the coast of North Africa when her transport was torpedoed. She was engaged briefly to an American officer who was killed in North Africa. When the war was over she stayed in the WAC and for a time managed a guest house in Berlin for VIPs (Very Important Persons). Later, coming to this country she took out citizenship papers and at present is working for a broadcasting station. Perhaps the most interesting thing about Kay Summersby was that every woman who came in actual contact with her during the war liked and respected her.

Representative Kelley gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown was of candlelight satin made with tight bodice and net yoke embroidered in pearls. The long sleeves ended in points over the hands and her veil of illusion was held with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Therese Eleanor Kelley, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and another sister, Miss Kathleen Anne Kelley, was bridesmaid. Best man was Jay Hilary Kelley, brother of the bride. Ushers included Augustine Regis Kelley, Robert Vincent Kelley, Richard Bates Kelley and James Reeves Kelley, all brothers of the bride.

Capitol Hill to Have Young and New Faces For 81st Sessions

By Genevieve Reynolds

WHEN THE Eighty-first Congress swings into session in January, there'll be at least 100 new faces on the floor of the law-making body. South Carolina will have two freshmen in the House—27-year-old Hugo Sims of Orangeburg and 30-year-old James Hare of Saluda. Both were house hunting in the Capital last week.

If young Sims, the new baby of the House, employs the same "go-getter" technique in apartment seeking that he utilized in his campaign, he will end up with a choice of domiciles.

Five-feet-nine Hugo personally shook hands with every resident of his home town. In fact, he called at the home of each one, went in for a chat. As soon as he returned to his station wagon, parked at the front door in the driveways, he immediately recorded the conversation on dictaphones. That night his secretary mailed a personal message to each household he visited that day.

The exuberant, spirited Hugo also managed to shake hands with every store owner and clerk on the four-mile Main st. in Columbia, South Carolina's capital, where he served a term in the State Legislature.

Sims gave up his law practice for one year to concentrate on his campaign. Blond, wavy-haired, blue-eyed Hugo served with the Army Air Corps during World War II. He commanded Company 501-A Paratroopers.

His father is editor of the Times and Democrat in Orangeburg. Sims' uncle, Dr. Harry R. Sims, is president of Winthrop College, a well-known teachers' school in Rockhill, S. C.

Navy Veteran

YOUNG HARE is also a veteran of World War II. He did a stint of tough duty as a naval lieutenant. Quiet of manner, soft-spoken James entered the race at the last moment and had little opposition. He decided to run after 33-year-old William Jennings Bryan Dorn announced his candidacy for the Senate. Dorn served one term in the House of Representatives, but was defeated in his try for the Senate.

Handsome, dark, wavy-haired James will feel at home on Capitol Hill. He learned about Capitol lawmaking when his father served for 16 years in the House.

Both Sims and Hare graduated from the University of South Carolina law school, which often is dubbed the Harvard of the South.

New Honors for Romulo

ONE OF THE most decorated men who ever held a seat in the U. S. Congress is the former Philippine Delegate, Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, now minister plenipotentiary and permanent delegate to the United Nations from the Philippine Republic. A few days ago this department received an invitation in Greek to attend a ceremony in Athens. Occasion was a new honor for the hero of Bataan. The University of Athens invested General Romulo with the honorary degree of doctor of philosophy. In Greece an honorary Ph.D. is higher than the doctor of laws. King Paul of Greece also decorated General Romulo with the Order of the Phoenix for his outstanding work in the United Nations. Actual presentation of the order will take place at the Greek Embassy here after the Philippine Congress approves the acceptance.

Mrs. Romulo and her 9-year-old son, Bobby, accompanied the general to the Greek capital for the degree-bestowing ceremony. Following the finale, the Romulos returned to Paris for the U. N. meetings. Incidentally, Mrs. Romulo is the only foreign woman holding membership in the Congressional Club. She was initiated when her husband was the Filipino Delegate to the U. S. House of Representatives.

Wines Return

SCHOOL BELLS last week drew a sprinkling of congressional wives back to Washington. Mrs. Olin D. Johnston, wife of the South Carolina Senator, returned to put her two daughters, Sallie and Elizabeth, in the Kensington Elementary School. Representative and Mrs. Mike Mansfield of Montana are in town so their off-spring can start in the "knowledge factories" on time.

Representative and Mrs. John L. McMillan of Florence, S. C., enrolled their 6-year-old son, John, in the Garden School in Arlington. Little Johnnie already speaks romantic French, which he learned in nursery school last year. About the first French expression he mastered was "You're beautiful and I love you."

Rehoboth's Fall Calendar Has Parties, Benefits

By Virginia Cullen

REHOBOTH BEACH, DEL., Sept. 25.—The tinge of fall in the air and the end of summer's daylight time are proving no deterrent to autumn vacationists at Rehoboth Beach in partying and fashion shows.

Around 300 women of the whole coastal region are expected to attend the benefit fashion show sponsored by the guilds of historic St. Peter's Episcopal Church at Lewes Thursday night. A display of fall and winter apparel by clubwomen of the town will follow a luncheon, for which reservations are pouring in.

Two wives of Delaware River pilots, Mrs. William Teal, jr., and Mrs. Walter Leaming Bennett, sr., are steering the affair as general chairman and ticket captain, respectively. The money raised at the fashion show will be used for the restoration of the ancient church, one of the oldest in Delaware.

Washington people are taking advantage of the prevailing good weather. Mr. and Mrs. Jonkheer O. Reuchlin of the Netherlands Embassy, have leased the Silver Lake cottage of Mr. and Mrs. J. Thomas Robinson of Georgetown, Del., for the remainder of this month.

The battered old house still has its sturdy beams and general structure, including some fine examples of colonial fireplaces. The Browns will retain its quaint lines and other historic features.

These old dwellings around Sussex County are much in demand for restored modern homes hereabouts. Home-seekers may be seen every day this fall scouring the countryside for them. Once the first and largest for those attending the conference.

The Austrian Minister of Finance, George Zimmerman, governor of the Bank for his country, and Dr. H. Hans Rizzi, president of the Austrian National Bank and governor of the Fund, arrived in town Tuesday. They were accompanied by Dr. Franz Stoeger, director of the Austrian National Bank and delegate to the conference.

MRS. JEFFERSON DAVIS DONOHOE, who is known professionally in interior decorating circles as Elizabeth Stanley Wilcox, has just returned from Europe, where she spent five months traveling in England, Switzerland and Italy. In Switzerland she was the guest for three weeks of the American Minister to that country and Mrs. John Carter Vincent.

One party she recalls during her visit, was a small tea given at the legation for King Michael and Queen Helen. The latter told of her eviction from Bucharest. In usual fashion she was escorted to the border without luggage. Not even a toothbrush, she said, was she allowed to take from her palace.

King Michael said he liked Texas and Virginia best in America, and that he would like to live in Virginia.

Mrs. Donohoe found the Italians more apprehensive than any other people in Europe. Their food and hospitality, however, she said, were glorious. She was especially taken with a new luxury bus line in northern Italy. Buses there are driven by liveried chauffeurs, upholstery is done in fawn colored leather, at lunch time push-button tables spring out, and passing towns are described by a hostess.

In Rome, Mrs. Donohoe read posters saying "Learn Russian, get ready for the invasion."

THERE IS A NEW attache at the French Embassy, a young count named Gillies de Boisgelin. He is a bachelor and he arrived at his post about a week ago in a chic convertible, a dark blue Delahaye, with Paris license plates. Washington is the count's first assignment abroad.

The Ambassador of Greece and Mme. Dendramis left Thursday for Havana, Cuba, where the Ambassador will present his credentials as Minister to that country. From there they will go to Mexico, and the Ambassador will present his credentials as Minister to that country as well.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 27, of Fine Family, a Successful Careerist, Ponders New Approach to Life As She Reflects on Her Failure With Men

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am tall, 27 years old, have an excellent family background, a college degree and lots of other educational training; I like children, have a good sense of humor and a variety of interests, and have been called attractive.

However, in the past six years I've had a rough time in my so-called love life, all sorts of disappointments and disillusionment. Some have been my fault, due to ignorance or bad judgment; and since I am a rather good actress, perhaps I've been guilty of giving the wrong impression, feigning a sophistication that seemed useful in business and social life with certain kinds of people.

As I no longer care to make any impression whatsoever on people I don't care about, I am trying to unlearn some of the smart brittle talk I once thought necessary, and to minimize my careerist achievements (to which men react negatively, I find); and just be sweet and simple, as I probably am at heart, or I would have grasped all this ages ago.

Longs to Associate With Masterful Men

DATES, per se, don't interest me. I've been lots of places and seen all the theater-restaurant scenery I care to inspect. Also I have enough money of my own to buy such recreation as I choose; so it's really companionship I want, but it's much harder to find than I thought at first.

Being independent and friendly, it's difficult for me not to treat a date as a pal; but secretly I wish my escorts would be a bit more on the masterful side. By the way, what's become of the men who, legend says, used to drag a woman off to a lair?

The problem is, how to start over? I am making an effort to do just that; and I wonder if I am on the right track. My thought is to ignore the situation almost completely. I go to school evenings, belong to a theater group and mind my own business; no grandstanding, no big "act," just lots of avocational interests, a cheerful smile and a return to some of the romantic ideas I used to cherish. Is this sound policy? Please advise. C. D.

Girl Is Beating Retreat From Life

DEAR C. D.: You aren't launching a campaign. You are beating a retreat. After a six years' saga of disappointments and disillusionments in quest of mate-love, you've become so discouraged that you're ready to quit the whole shooting-match and retire into your shell with a sour-grapes attitude.

It seems to me that essentially your problem has to do with subjective self-rejection; that from earliest years you've embodied the conviction that intrinsically you aren't love-worthy; so that consequently, when of an age to grapple with society "on your own," you strained and strove, in all sorts of ways, to "make a hit" by outstanding achievements and actress-devices.

Thus you've become divorced from the roots of your natural appeal and would be at all times self conscious and a strain to be with, from a man's viewpoint, when trying to impress; not a relaxed companion, at peace with yourself, hence free to quietly focus attention on him, as persons are when nourished by a deep wellspring of wholesome self regard. Which, incidentally, is the secret of every degree of charm and social success.

Don't Turn Away From Opposite Sex

OBVIOUSLY you are quite intelligent and vaguely aware, in an intuitive way, of most of this; and now that you are renegotiating your address to life, I think it would be a mistake to turn your back on the opposite sex, figuratively speaking, a purpose that seems to be implicit in your idea of dismissing the quest for love "almost completely."

You are much too young for such defeatist surrender of heart's desire; and a return to "romantic" notions of adolescence won't help, either. To turn the tide toward victorious living, you need a bit of first hand psychoanalytic help in quickening valid self-regard, and since you write from a city where specialist services of that type abound, and have ample means for improving your time, my advice is to roll back despair and employ such counsel.

Veteran War Worker Directs Red Cross Volunteer Units

By Lucia Brown

"IT TOOK A WAR to get me started in volunteer work," says tall, slender Mrs. David Finley. "I only wish I hadn't waited so long."

Actually, the wife of the director of the National Gallery of Art began giving her time to Red Cross way back in 1939, months before the United States fired its first guns in World War II. And she has remained on the job long after many other volunteers have dropped out.

"After all, the work of caring for the disabled from the last war has just begun," Mrs. Finley says earnestly. "There are more hospitalized service men and women in this section than in any other country. And it's the volunteers who are largely responsible for the aid Red Cross can give them."

Part of every weekday—in fact, most of the day right now—finds Mrs. Finley at her desk at District Red Cross headquarters, working as chairman of the District Volunteer Services.

Returns From Europe

"I had a good rest this summer," she explains. "Mr. Finley and I spent six weeks in Italy, England and France, where he went to attend the International Conference of Museums. So now I'm full of energy and ready to go on this fall's work."

Her big job right now—and it is a big one—is recruiting 1186 new volunteer Red Cross workers. A drive for this purpose got under way September 16 and is now in full swing.

"We're really desperate for volunteers," she says. "We get calls we can't fill from the hospitals all the time. We need dependable people who can guarantee they'll be on the job at least one day each week. It's daytime volunteers we need worst of all."

A native Washingtonian, charming Mrs. Finley is the former Margaret Morton Eustis. She graduated from Virginia's Foxcroft School, married Mr. Finley in 1931, and has spent most of her life in the Nation's Capital. She and Mr. Finley lived one year in England, when he was honorary counsel of the United States Embassy in London, but they were in Washington when war broke out in Europe in 1939. She volunteered for work with a surgical-dressing unit almost immediately, and before Pearl Harbor became the first chairman of the District Red Cross Camp and Hospital Council Service.

Has Busy Schedule

Sharing her husband's artistic interests, Mrs. Finley finds many demands on her time in connection with his official duties. The Finleys have also reared two foster daughters and there has been much social life in their attractive Georgetown house since the end of the war. But none of these activities ever keep her from getting to her Red Cross desk when she is needed.

Nine different services are under her supervision—the Gray Ladies, nurses aide, staff aide, canteen, entertaining and instruction, social welfare aide, production, motor and arts and skills services. An excellent executive, she administers these varied groups with a quiet hard-working selflessness.

"A lot of our former workers have been coming back since this drive started," Mrs. Finley said the other day. "It's wonderful to see them, for the need is as great as ever and the shortage of volunteers is acute. There are civilian aid jobs to be done, too, as well as those for disabled veterans and servicemen. So you can understand how much it means when people who can drive cars, sew, cook, teach crafts, use a typewriter or serve in any other capacity, volunteer to help."

What to Do With Old Piano

My grandmother left me an old-type square piano made by Smith-Atherton of New York. It has mother of pearl keys and inlay. It is much too heavy (800 pounds), and large for our use and needs repair to be made playable. Who can I contact who might be interested in such a piano, either to buy or to accept as part payment on a new, smaller piano? The piano could also make a lovely desk. E. F. B.

I have discussed your problem with several piano and antique dealers. All have said that because of its size, there is no demand for such a piano. One piano dealer said it might have a small trade-in value on a new piano. If you are interested in this sort of proposition, I would suggest you visit several piano dealers and discuss it with them. Or, you might be able to sell it to some individual who had a special interest in such an item. To find such a person why don't you place an advertisement in The Washington Post?

To D. P., who inquired about a place where she could do "voluntary work for alleviating economic conditions abroad." If she, or any others, would be interested in coming to a most accessible location in the Northwest, 1800 Connecticut, she will find a great need for "voluntary services." The American Women's Voluntary Services is still carrying on its food packaging service and would welcome more volunteer help in the work. The small charge of $3.50 for the 11 items packed in each box is a minimum and all work connected with the purchasing, packing and posting of the boxes must be done by volunteers. Any person interested in this volunteer service should telephone Mrs. G. Howland Chase at Dupont 1481 or Michigan 2392.

Have any free afternoons, Ask Anne Readers?

Attention A. P. W. and W. L. T.: There is a shop on 17th st. which appraises coins and also has coin catalogues. To reach this firm call District 1272.

I wonder if this recipe, which was my great-grandmother's, is the one M. H. H. has in mind? My family is from Philadelphia but I have eaten this same type of baked beans in New York State a number of times.

BAKED BEANS

2 cups Marrow Fat beans (an extra large white bean)
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 ham rock or other ham bone
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 small onion
Salt and pepper
Water

Soak beans overnight in cold water. Drain and put in saucepan. Cover with cold water, adding the baking soda. Bring to boil and boil 5 minutes. Pour in colander and wash with cold water. (This is optional, but grandmother said it took the "indigestion" out.) Put in metal baking dish or other casserole, with the onion and ham hock, mustard, salt and pepper. Cover with cold water and bake for 2 hours. (I keep oven at 350 degrees Fahrenheit.) Add more water from time to time if needed.

We usually serve these beans with tomato sauce, made by mixing ¼ cup chili sauce, ¼ cup catsup, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon mustard, 2 tablespoons vinegar and a pinch of black pepper. Chill sauce thoroughly before serving.

I am most grateful to "Ask Anne" readers who supplied information about Clore chairs. I plan to drive up and visit their showrooms this fall. I. M. C.

Readers were certainly most cooperative in sending in information about the Clore furniture, made at Madison, Va. Incidentally, here are some additional facts which have reached us since your question was answered:

There are two Clore firms in Madison County: J. C. Clore & Son, which advertises the "Original Clore Chairs," and E. A. Clore Sons, which makes cupboards, beds and other furniture, as well as chairs. One firm is at Madison and the other nearer Brightwood, 6 miles north of Madison. Four generations of Clores have made furniture of solid Virginia black walnut, wild cherry, white oak and other native woods in Madison County. E. A. Clore advises store hours are 8 a. m. to 4 p. m., Monday through Friday.

I have issues for about five years of The New Yorker and three years of Reader's Digest (unbound). Is there any agency in the District of Columbia who would have use for these beyond selling for scrap? L. G. H.

The Salvation Army representatives tells me they would be pleased to have the magazines for their library. Call them at District 8023.

How can I remove coffee ring stain from the inside lower bowl of a vacuum coffee maker? I have tried soap, cleansing powder, vinegar and boiling with baking soda to no avail.

J A. L.

If you can get your hand into the bottom of the coffee maker, scouring it with fine steel wool soap pads should remove the ring easily If the maker has a small top, place cleansing powder on a long handled brush, such as is used in washing baby bottles. It would be wise to have such a brush for just this purpose, for frequent thorough cleanings will prevent the formation of a heavy ring. To make the brush more efficient, bend it in a curve to fit the inside curve of the glass bowl.

Has any reader a recipe for a dish called Chicken Camilla? J. J.

How about it, readers?

Give Cakes Some Air in Storage

The more liquid and eggs in a cake, the longer it will stay moist. But—and this goes for any cake, say home economists—it must be stored in a closed container with a little ventilation. Unless there is some circulation of air, cake will soon acquire a musty taste.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest O. Osborne

Tin-Can Stilts

If you don't mind the clatter—the children won't—tin-can stilts can be a lot of fun for the younger fry.

Use medium-sized cans—those that have fruit enough for the family supper. Fruit juice cans are even better for they are taller and also can be used without cutting out the whole top. Run a stout cord through the two holes, tie the loose ends together, leaving the loop long enough so the youngster can pull it and keep the can close to his foot as he lifts his legs and walks.

With such a piece of apparatus for each foot, a child can have a lot of fun stomping up and down the backyard or some other place where the noise won't bother grown-ups too much. And while he's having fun, his muscles and sense of balance are being improved as well.

Romantic Revival in Furs

Grandma's Little Capes Are Again High Style

By Peggy Preston

THIS season witnesses the romantic revival of brief, little fur capes—the kind that fascinated your great grandmother when she read the pages of Godey's fashion magazine.

One of the nicest features of this vogue is the fact that it makes furs available to more women. It is pocketbook-wise. You can still wrap yourself in mink to your shoe tops if you wish. But you'll be just as chic in a wisp of a cape; a diminutive stole; a snug little jacket; a flirt of a muff.

Moreover, these little furs can be as elegant or as inexpensive as you wish. The woman who makes a point of wearing only luxury furs can now put her money into quality and forget quantity. On the other hand, because of casual treatment and cut you can get away with low cost furs very nicely. Muskrat skins can be quite lovely in a stole, cape or shawl. Moleskin makes a precious muff or saucy ascot, tied high under the chin.

These shorter jackets and versatile stoles are especially good when worn over a full skirt, in the manner of 1830 and '40. But they are equally in taste with the slim silhouette. Best of all, the same wrap will go with every length of skirt—day, cocktail or evening.

In the accompanying sketches by fashion illustrator Jean Spadea, you see traced the most newsworthy features in fur fashions for 1948-49. In your favorite fur shop you will find similar garments in various grades and types of fur. Or you may prefer to have a single style made up to your own specifications and order. At any rate, here is a guide, for use in selecting your special bit of luxury adornment this winter.

The New Fur Shawl

IN SKETCH 1, upper left, is a triangular shawl with a deep point in back. Ends loop in front fichu fashion. When made of mink, soft and silky, it is called a "Minkerchief."

More and more women are discovering the versatility of the fur stole. Sketch 2 shows a handsome flat stole of Silverblu mutation mink, designed by Fredrica. We'd reserve this particular stole, with its shirred chiffon lining, for evening—all you need to own one is the money. But generally speaking, stoles are exceedingly practical. One made of less expensive skins can be slung around a stringbean suit, added to a wool dress or furless coat. It can go any place, any time.

A fur cape gives more coverage than a stole, is almost, although not quite, as generally useful. The model shown in sketch 3 is longer in back and falls in graceful folds. You may prefer a shorter cape, one that stops just above the waistline. Or if you are a tiny woman, you may fancy a little capelet, just long enough to cover the shoulders and upper arms. Whatever your choice of length, you'll find the cape a helpful fashion.

Hats, Tippets, Muffs

THE pert little sketches scattered around the page tell the story of how to wear a variety of fur pillboxes; of how to tie a tippet—demurely and snugly right under the chin. And you can see, upper right, how fetching a tiny barrel muff can be.

Esther Dorothy, New York designer who dotes on the unusual, comes up with the jolliest idea yet—dyed furs. These are the darlings of the young set.

Maximillian designed the jacket in Sketch 4. Note the slanting shoulder lines. Keep them in mind when having your coat remodeled. The Maximillian shoulders are advanced, it's true. But the giant football pads are dying a slow but sure death

Sketch 5 pictures a verdigreen moleskin jacket, with fur basket bag to match. The Mediterranean blue Hudson seal bolero, Sketch 6, is bound in navy blue grosgrain. It is a young and happy coat and comes from Esther Dorothy's Jeune Couture collection

Miss Cummins Is Bride of Mr. Baldridge

Miss Marion Taylor Cummins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Truman Cummins of Washington, and Reid Baldridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pressly Reid Baldridge, of Chevy Chase, Md., were married last evening at All Saints' Episcopal Church at Chevy Chase. Dr. Charles W. Lowry officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white slipper satin and Limerick lace and a veil of matching lace. She carried roses, gardenias and bouvardia. Mrs. David Pratt Bell was matron of honor and Miss Marguerite Darmour Williams was maid of honor. Julian Imbrie Richards was best man and the ushers were Ensign Douglas Taylor Cummins, USN, brother of the bride, Harold Clayton Hedges and Donald K. King.

A reception was held at Army-Navy Club after which the couple left for Virginia Beach, Va. They will make their home in Washington.

Both the bride and bridegroom were graduated from George Washington University. Mr. Baldridge is now attending law school.

Miss Amberg, Dr. Spence Wed in Chicago Ceremony

MISS FRANCES AMBERG and Dr. William Thornton Spence were married yesterday in Chicago, in fashionable St. Chrysostom's Church. The Rev. Dudley Stark officiated at the ceremony at 4:30 p. m. and a reception followed at the Racquet Club.

Mrs. Spence is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Vincent Amberg. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Spence of Altoona, Pa.

Mr. Amberg gave his daughter in marriage. She was gowned in white antique satin. Her veil was edged with rosepoint lace which had been worn by her grandmother, the late Mrs. Theodore J. Ambers. Her bridal bouquet was made of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. John F. West of New York City was matron of honor. Other attendants were Mrs. Harry Clow f Lake Bluff, Ill.; Mrs. Gordon Smith of Lake Forest, Ill., Mrs. Robert Buchbinder of Chicago and Miss Marie Merrill Hubbard of Middleburg, Va., formerly of Chicago.

James E. Spence, jr., of Altoona, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The ushers were Emery Thompson of New Rochelle, N. # The Service Set

By Norma Lanum

WASHINGTON'S service circles have seen an exodus of Navy and Air Force people this weekend. The reason: opening yesterday of the Naval Academy football season at Baltimore and the Air Force Association convention in New York that began Friday and lasts through today.

The second annual Air Force reunion, with headquarters at the Commodore, has drawn all of this city's top air executives and their wives. Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington headed the local contingent and there were also Chief of Staff and Mrs. Hoyt C. Vandenberg, Gen. and Mrs. Carl A. Spaatz, Assistant Secretary of Air and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney and many, many others.

And just as many Navy families trekked up to Baltimore yesterday to see the "Middies" open their pigskin season with a game against the University of California "Bears."

A great many of the Air and Navy people will be back in town some time this evening, however, for Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley's large reception at No. 1 quarters at Fort Myer. The Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. Bradley have invited several hundred members of service, diplomatic and residential society to drop in between the hours of 3:30 and 5:30 p. m.

OF INTEREST to the Navy set here is the announcement made by Capt. and Mrs. George Griffin Herring, jr., of Annapolis of the engagement of their daughter, Jane Miquel, to Midshipman Jay Raymond Wallace, son of Mrs. Astrid E. Wallace of Oakland, Calif.

The Navy junior attends George Washington University, where she is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority, Alpha Chapter. She is also a member of Beta Chapter of Tau Omicron Phi sorority at Annapolis.

MISS JANE M. HERRING

Mrs Clifton B. Cates is back in town after nearly a month and a half's vacation at Prouts Neck, Me. Her husband, Commandant of the Marine Corps, was there for short visits but his official schedule kept him in the Capital most of the summer.

Miss Nancy Anderson Hoffman, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Harry D. Hoffman, has left for her first year at Penn Hall School in Chambersburg, Pa. A graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School last June, she hopes to enter Sweet Briar College—her mother's alma mater—next year.

"FROM COMMISSARY to Military Ball" is the theme of the benefit luncheon and fashion show the Daughters of the Army have scheduled for 1 p. m. Thursday at the Officers' Club at Fort McNair.

TRANSPORTATION Corps officers' wives will meet for their regular fall luncheon at Fort McNair on Wednesday, September 29, at 12:15. A fashion show will follow the luncheon. Mrs. G. F. Bunting is general chairman and assisting her on the committee are Mrs. C. H. Davidson, Mrs E. M. Hamilton, Mrs. R. W. Van Orne, Mrs. N. C. Kerndt and Mrs. L. W. Doyle. The names of Princess Margaret, daughter of Britain's King and Queen, and the Marquess of Blandford, 22-year-old cousin of former Prime Minister Winston Churchill, are being linked in a rumored royal romance. The young marquess has been described at Buckingham Palace as a close friend of the royal family. This sketch of the Marquess of Blandford and Princess Margaret was drawn by A.P. Newsfeatures artist, H. E. Munhall.

Blandford Is a Little Dazed

Royal Suitor Is Abashed by His Role

By Russell Landstrom

London, Sept. 25 (AP).—Matchmakers are sure the rosy-cheeked Marquess of Blandford is going to marry Princess Margaret. He, in turn, is a little dazed and embarrassed by his sudden role of suitor in rumored royal romance.

Until a few months ago a subaltern no more distinguished than other fledglings with historic titles and a lot of money, he now is one of the main subjects of table talk in Britain. His family, his background, his prospects and what might be the significance of an alliance of the House of Marlborough with the House of Windsor, are highlights of current chitchat.

Outwardly this 22-year-old cousin of former Prime Minister Winston Churchill resembles a juvenile actor dressed up for a military part. Chubby-faced, somewhat petulant in expression, he is eager, big-eyed, rather self-conscious and naive.

But despite his downy boyishness, "Sonny" Blandford has fluttered the hearts of not a few of London society's teen-agers and that fringe of love-smitten bobby soxers who cast goon looks at Prince Philip, Sir Laurence Olivier, Crooner Tony Martin and the aging matinee idol, Ivor Novello.

In the News

Handsome, six feet tall and fair of hair and complexion, the Marquess first hit the news pages earlier this year. His name then was linked with that of pretty, flaxen-haired Sharman Douglas, daughter of U. S. Ambassador and Mrs. Lewis Douglas. He escorted her to the theater and to fashionable West End restaurants, and was always a welcome visitor at the ambassadorial residence.

There were other young callers at the Douglas home, too. Both the Ambassador and Mrs. Douglas liked to have them about the house. Mrs. Douglas mothered Blandford, found him charming, put up with that kind of corny humor which many such noblemen have before they fully grow up.

It was Blandford's habit, for example, to ride a horse right up the stone steps to the Douglas' door, creating a clatter of hooves and a din of bell-ringing. This was commonly done in the company of another guards officer, who delighted in the sport once he was persuaded that nobody would take offense.

"The first time they did it," said Mrs. Douglas, "we thought the house was coming down, it shook that much. We didn't know what to make of it when we looked out and saw the horses. But it was just Sonny Blandford's high spirits. He is a nice boy."

That's the usual verdict.

Like His Father

Folks say he's a great deal like his father, the 50-year-old Duke of Marlborough, whose imposing title he'll inherit one day. The tenth Duke—John Albert Edward William Spencer-Churchill is his full name—is known to his friends as Bert. Knights and lords and unimportant little people call him a real sport, a regular fellow.

Britons are still talking over newspaper accounts of a party the Duke gave a couple of months ago for his son, only recently back from military duty in the Middle East, and for Princess Margaret. There in Blenheim Palace, reputed the largest private home in England, the Duke, gayer than ever, entertained his guests by throwing raspberries high in the air and catching them in his mouth.

"He rarely misses," commented his admiring Duchess, who then confided: "He often entertains our guests in this fashion. He is most amusing."

At the same shindig—which was partly a belated birthday party for Blandford, who had turned 22 in April—the Duke tried his talents as swing crooner and drummer with the popular band which had been engaged for the occasion.

"A wonderful party," exclaimed the band leader. "So much zing to it, and so free and easy. Nobody could be less stiff and starchy than the Duke."

It is on responsible record that Princess Margaret enjoyed all this as much as did the 129 other guests.

The episode points up the sportive side—and the dominant side, in some good opinion—of the younger princess.

Blandford has had slight opportunity to show what is stirring under this crust of gaiety. Those who know him best say they have not yet discovered any special quality of seriousness. It is understood on qualified authority that his superiors consider him an adequate junior officer, but not a brilliant one.

Shy About Stories

Although too completely bred to high society to be bashful even in the presence of princesses, he has been known to blush, and it is no secret he is sensitive about the stories which have him wooing Margaret. He is said to have been almost equally bothered by the earlier reports that he was courting Sharman Douglas.

Should Margaret wed Blandford she'd marry into one of the nation's most picturesque noble families. For more than 200 years the Marlboroughs have been on decidedly close terms with British royalty, and have enjoyed on occasion virtually royal powers and privileges. A celebrated ancestor of the Marquess of Blandford, Sarah Jennings, who after Blenheim became Duchess of Marlborough, dominated Queen Anne, holding sway against keen rivalry at court and much hostility outside. In more recent times Edward VIII stayed at Blenheim, and the late Duke of Kent and his Duchess were frequent guests.

The young Marquess has been described at Buckingham Palace as a close friend of the royal family. This intimacy, in fact, has been cited as one of the chief reasons for discounting the rumors of romance. The argument: "Why shouldn't the Marquess of Blandford be invited to the royal homes? Why should it be assumed the Marquess—or anybody else—is there on approval?

It's still admitted, though, that Blandford is tops in Margaret's affections.

The Marquess of Blandford's grandmother was the famed Consuelo Vanderbilt, daughter of W. K. Vanderbilt, who divorced her husband soon after the first World War. The ninth Duke of Marlborough had two American wives; the first the former Miss Vanderbilt, divorced him. In 1921 he married Gladys, daughter of Edward Parke Deacon of Boston. Doubtless the bond best known to most people is that Winston Churchill's mother, too, was American.

It was a decision taken by Blandford's grandfather—Consuelo's husband—which gave rise to a suggestion in some quarters that the Marquess would never be able to marry Margaret—unless she gave up her right of succession to the throne.

The grandfather, who died several years before the last war broke out, had been converted to Catholicism and was renowed for zeal in his new faith. Authorities here point out, however, that so far as the records go the Duke was alone in his conversion, and that Blandford, like his father, is Protestant.

Thus John George Vanderbilt Henry Spencer-Churchill may be considered definitely in the running.

Adm. and Mrs. Holloway Return to Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 25.—Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., superintendent of the Naval Academy, and Mrs. Holloway, who have been enjoying a stay at Huntington Manor, in the Maryland mountains, have returned to the superintendent's quarters.

The Annapolis Chapter, U. S. Naval Academy Alumni, held the September meeting Wednesday night, at Alumni House. Associate Professor C. P. Lemieux, of the Academy Department of Foreign Languages, was the speaker, and George Sauer, head football coach of the varsity team, was introduced. Professor Lemieux's subject was "The Soviet Union." Following his address, coffee and doughnuts were served. Mr. Sauer was introduced by Capt. R. N. Norgaard, president of the Alumni Chapter

With Mrs. Daniel Ryan, Mrs. E. P. Huff and Mrs. James Wilson as hostesses, the Navy doctors' wives had a luncheon on Wednesday at North Severn Officers' Club. A special guest at the affair was Mrs. Glen Even, daughter of Captain and Mrs. Daniel Ryan, who has been visiting her parents. Mrs. Even and her two children will be leaving next week for Key West, Fla., where they will join Lieutenant Even.

Capt. Rice Joins Faculty

Capt. Robert H. Rice has joined the faculty of the Naval Academy as head of the Department of English, History and Government. A member of the academy class of 1927, he relieves Capt. George P. Hunter, who has already taken up his new duties as Commander Destroyer Flotilla Three in the Pacific.

Captain Rice's recent New London duty as commander of Submarine Squadron Two enabled him to become acquainted with many of the present midshipmen, for he commanded the flotilla of eight submarines which went to Guantanamo, Cuba, to conduct the submarine-antisubmarine warfare phase of the midshipmen's summer practice cruise.

Members of the Naval Academy class of 1942 had a gay reunion on Saturday, when 77 couples gathered for cocktails at Alumni House, followed by dinner and dancing at the North Severn Officers' Club. Many classmates and their families from Washington, Patuxent and Baltimore joined the Annapolis group for the occasion. Lieut. Comdr. Edward F. Gallagher and Lieut. Comdr. William D. Spiegel made the arrangements.

Wives Give Luncheon

On Tuesday the '42 wives held a get-together of their own when they met for their first luncheon at North Severn. Hostesses were Mrs. Gallagher, Mrs. Spiegel and Mrs. Raymond Wiggins. The group plans to meet for luncheons the third Tuesday of each month.

Capt. and Mrs. Frank T. Ward had as their weekend guests at the Commandant's Quarters of the Naval Academy, Capt. and Mrs. C. S. Cooper and their daughter, Laura, of Washington, D. C., for whom they entertained informally.

Capt. S. H. K. Spurgeon, Australian naval attache, and Mrs. Spurgeon came over from Washington last weekend to be guests of Capt. and Mrs. Charles L. Freeman at their quarters aboard the Reina Mercedes, station ship at the Naval Academy.

Mrs. Katherine Norris Willis, of Mount Washington, Baltimore, and Wimbledon Farms, Annapolis, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Sallie Elizabeth Willis, to Frederic Maxey Hewitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hewitt, of Roland Park.

The wedding will take place in Baltimore late in November.

During the current week, Miss Willis entertained Miss Sue Day, of Springfield, Ill., and Miss Barbara Vance, of South Bend, Ind., at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry O. Norris, on South River.

Miss Colton Will Be Bride

The engagement of their daughter, Miss Dolores Janet Colton, to Donald Lee Fresh has been announced by Mr. and Mrs. Homer C. Colton of Washington. Mr. Fresh is the son of Mrs. Samuel A. Weatherholt of Cumberland, Md., and John L. Fresh of Wheeling, W. Va.

Both Miss Colton and Mr. Fresh are students at the University of Maryland. Miss Colton is a member of Delta Gamma sorority, and Mr. Fresh is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa and Alpha Chi Sigma fraternities.

In addition, she is leader of United Aid to China, a British organization which has rendered valuable aid to China.

A leading Chinese said recently: "For 400 million Chinese, Isabel Cripps spells Britain."

The Women's Press Club's new president, Miss Dorothy Williams, announces that Lady Franks, wife of the British Ambassador, and other prominent guests of the Women's Press Club, which was organized in 1919 by six Washington newspaper and publicity women, now has more than 300 members. The reception will mark, almost to the day, the twenty-ninth anniversary of its founding.

Will Have Luncheon

Kappa Delta Alumnae Association of Washington has planned a "get acquainted" luncheon on Friday, October 1, at 1 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Harold Rowe.

abandoned dwellings could be bought for a song, but astute owners are now realizing their demand and slapping on prices that would have built a comfortable home back in prewar days.

Commander and Mrs. John P. Martin of the Marine Corps at Quantico, Va., entertained at a weekend house party at the summer home of Mrs. Martin's parents, former United States Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Davis of Washington, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Carl Phelps, Mr. and Mrs. S. Vesugar and other Quantico official families.

Mortimers Return

Miss Lucie Mortimer, who with her brother, Col. Charles G. Mortimer of Washington, have been summering at their Rehoboth cottage, have returned home, and this winter will occupy an apartment at the Argonne, having just sold their home at 1114 New Hampshire ave.

Miss Naon J. Craft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Craft of Dewey Beach, and Mrs. Betty Irwin Burdette of Washington, have returned to this country from Norway, and are now at the oceanfront cottage, Sandaway, of Miss Craft's parents. They spent the summer in Scandinavia, where they were American exchange students at the University of Norway at Oslo. On their travels in Sweden and Denmark they met the noted Danish journalist, Heidi Neilson, who will pay them a visit shortly at Dewey Beach. Miss Neilson is affiliated with the Socialist-Demokraten, official newspaper of Denmark, and is now in this country to cover the November elections, traveling with Governor Dewey's party and making weekly shortwave broadcasts to Denmark.

Miss Phoebe Grenoble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Scott Grenoble, is being feted at prenuptial showers. Invitations were received this week to her marriage to William V. Sipple, jr., of Milford, Del., in All Saints' Episcopal Church on October 9, at 4 p. m. A reception will follow at the Horizon Grill on the boardwalk. The most recent party for Miss Grenoble was a miscellaneous shower last Thursday at the Rehoboth Country Club, given by Mrs. James O. Marshall, jr., of Lewes; Mrs. Garrett L. Grier of Milford, and Mrs. John Q. Gelder of Princess Anne, Md. Mrs. Gelder and Mrs. Grier will be two of the bridesmaids.

They're Built for Modern Living!

'Homes of '48' Have Charm of a Cottage, Comfort of a Castle

WHO? You, your family and friends. That's who is invited to inspect the 13 exquisite dwellings in the "Homes of 48" exhibition.

WHAT? A grand housing tour of 13 beautifully decorated and furnished homes.

WHEN? Today through October 10. Sunday visiting hours start at 10 a. m., end at 9 p. m. Weekday visiting hours are from 2 until 9 p. m.

WHERE? The 13 homes are in all sections of the District, nearby Virginia and Maryland. Geographically, they are located as follows: District, three; Alexandria, Va., one; Fairfax County, Va., one; Arlington County, Va., one; Montgomery County, Md., four; Prince Georges County, Md., three. A map of the Metropolitan Washington Area showing the location, and traffic directions, to each of the "Homes of '48" is on page 3 of this section and is also available free at the front counter of The Washington Post. The directions also list the nearest bus or streetcar routes.

WHY: The idea behind this mass exhibition of new furnished residences is to give the public an opportunity to see for itself what is available in homes and furnishings in 1948. While each home is up-to-date in every respect and postwar architectural innovations are abundant, none of the "Homes of '48" fall into the category of Twenty-first Century, electronic dream houses. Just 13 highly attractive, well-planned and livable homes, furnished with the comfort and pocketbook of the prospective buyer in mind. Don't miss it!

Modern homes require plenty of storage space and that's what visitors find in the S. Weinberg-Hecht Co. home at Annandale, Va. This ceiling-to-floor storage closet is between the bathroom and bedrooms. It is conveniently compartmented for family use

*Jody Miller, "Miss Washington of 1948" sits on a swing bed in the Luria Bros. house in North Arlington, admiring the mahogany Duncan Phyfe suite used by House & Hermann in furnishing the master bedroom. Stairway entrances can be given a dramatic presentation, as witness this scene at the Paul P. Stone-Wm. E. Miller home at Hillcrest Gardens, in nearby Prince Georges County, Md. The architectural trellis effect provides the perfect place to show off potted plants while underneath is a built-in bookcase. Wallpaper on the stairway is a bamboo weave print. The comfortable lounge chair partly hides a glass block partition, separating the living room from the dining area

Ralph Ochsman, owner and builder of "Paradise Homes" in Wheaton Hills, Md., points out attractive window features to a visitor at his model "Home of '48." The windows come completely equipped with copper screens, metal Venetian blinds, and ornamental wooden shutters. National Furniture Co. furnished the Colonial style dwelling. The floor plan features six rooms, including three bedrooms on the second floor

This stately mansion was built by W. C. and A. N. Miller Development Co. at 3712 48th st. nw., in the Spring Valley area. Attractively furnished by Woodward & Lothrop, it features a 13x24 foot living room with picture window, dining room, kitchen, powder room and porch on the first floor, three bedrooms and two baths on the second floor. The third floor attic area can be used as a den, office, playroom, extra bedrooms or what-have-you

The fresh, clean fragrance of cedar greets you when you open the sliding door to this clothes closet in the Alta Victa Terrace house built by the Camzridge Construction Co. It opens off a powder room adjoining the master bedroom, decorated in pale blue and pinks by the P. J. Nee Co.

*A pine-paneled den is one of the attractive features of the red-brick house built by Cambridge Construction Co. in Alta Vista Terrace, Md. The P. J. Nee Co. has included among its furnishing a couch that can be converted into a double bed so that the room can be turned into a guest room at a moment's notice. Built-in bookshelves, a cushioned window seat, and bright leather lounge chairs add to the cozy effect. The kneehole desk has a leather top and hangings are in a warm, colorful hunting print. ## Magazine Plans Employe Village

Des Moines, Sept. 25 (AP).—The Meredith Publishing Co. has purchased a 100-acre tract in southwest Des Moines and is planning a $2,500,000 housing project for company employes.

Company officials said today plans call for construction of 280 homes with two, three and four bedrooms, within the next year. The homes will cost an estimated $7000 to $12,000 and be financtd by the individual owners.

The company, which produces the magazines Better Homes and Gardens and Successful Farming, plans to provide a modern shopping center and a park on the tract.

Sydney to Test Wood Prefabs From Sweden

Sydney, Sept. 25 (AP).—Two sample wooden houses prefabricated in Sweden will be erected here to test the practicability of largescale imports to help ease Australia's housing shortage.

One of the homes is a two-bedroom unit which cost £1031 ($3350) shipped to Sydney. The other has three bedrooms and cost £1063 ($3454).

An official spokesman told a reporter:

"The houses are of excellent quality, complete with roofs of asbestos-cement shingles. Walls are vertical boarded and lined with hardwood and paper.

"Besides the bedrooms, they include living room, dining area, kitchen, large porch, laundry, separate inside toilet and bathroom and front veranda.

"Costs of erection and fitting will be observed. If the total cost is reasonable, large orders will be placed by the government."

Four prefabricated houses from Finland also will be used as test premises.

Weekends Hazardous

Madison, Wis. (U.P.).—Your chances of getting killed in an auto accident are greatest on a weekend. The Wisconsin motor vehicle department says Sunday is the worst day for accidents. Its figures show that 50 per cent of the State's fatal traffic accidents last year occurred on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Tales of Manhattan

Gotham's Perched on Historical Bedrock

By Saul Pett

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP).—It all started one day because I was trying to listen to the ball game and the riveters and blasters working on a new building across the street were giving me a bad time, so I took direct action.

I should've stood in bed because before I got through complaining about the noise, I was involved in rock fissures, bubbling streams under skyscrapers and old sailing ships and cannon balls dating way back to the American Revolution.

The construction foreman says, before you complain about building in New York, you ought to investigate around about the difficulties of building in New York, so I did.

The building boys do have their problems. This city has enough stuff under its basements and subbasements to fill a small museum, and it makes you think maybe New York was built in layers. Every time they get tired of one town, they build another one on top without removing the first.

You see, building in upper Manhattan is one thing. It's expensive but not impossible. It's mostly rock, but even the rock takes some crazy turns like at 54th st. and 6th ave. where digging the foundation they had to go down only 1 foot on one side but 90 feet on the other side before they found bedrock.

Building downtown is something else because that's where New York ain't what it used to be. There used to be lots of streams and ponds and the island was much narrower, but a little after the Revolution they started filling in all those places, padding stuff around the edges to make the island wider.

So now they have to dig into the fill to lay concrete piles for foundations and as recently as last month, while working on an East Side housing project, they found wharves in the silt maybe 170 years old.

Once down on Wall st., some ancient bags full of Spanish wine were dug up only the wine had turned to vinegar. During the '30s, excavation workers found crockery bottles full of old English ale 100 years old.

On the lower East Side they were digging down only about 12 feet and found the hull of an old sailing ship in the mud, and in the financial district they found human skeletons and Indian arrowheads.

Further downtown, under a big hotel, there's a stream still gurgling and this hotel has a big, pretty fountain in the lobby which still uses the very same water from that stream. Once a goldfish wandered down into the underground pipes, clogged things up and almost flooded the lobby.

Diggers also have found cannon balls and an ancient, four-foot wide road made of criss-crossed timber about 14 feet under a downtown street; the remains of a flour mill, 20 feet under; Spanish coins, one wrought iron candlestick, several hand-blown liquor bottles, pieces of English saucers which somebody dated back to the seventeenth century.

Survey Shows Home Shortage Keeping Ahead of Builders

Average prices of new homes in U. S. cities

THE housing shortage is keeping ahead of home builders in the Nation's largest population centers.

A survey of key areas, including Washington, D. C., by the Associated Press shows increased marriages and births, population shifts and industrial expansion have more than offset the efforts of builders to catch up with demand in most sections.

At the same time building costs, still climbing, have reached a point where the average income family in most cities is unable to buy a new home or rent in new buildings.

Although representatives of the building industry say construction in general is going forward at top speed—with more than 600,000 homes started since the first of the year—high costs are blamed for many housing projects being canceled.

The survey shows:

1. It is definitely easier to find a home now in such sections as Indiana, New Jersey, northern California, Oklahoma, Vermont, and in the cities of Baltimore, Buffalo and Nashville. But—

2. Builders have not been able to meet the demand for homes in areas including Connecticut, Iowa, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and most of New York State, including New York City, nor in the metropolitan areas of Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Kansas City, Knoxville, Minneapolis, Omaha, Portland, Me.; Portland, Oreg., Richmond, Rochester, N. Y., and St. Louis.

3. Chances of finding a place to live are only slightly better in Arkansas, Florida, North Carolina, parts of Ohio, Rhode Island, parts of South Carolina, and in the cities of Albany, Albuquerque, Atlanta, Chattanooga, Denver, Los Angeles, Louisville, Memphis, Milwaukee, Montgomery, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Phoenix, St. Paul, Seattle, Tucson, and Washington, D. C.

The survey represents a consensus of State and municipal housing authorities, real estate boards, home builders, Federal Housing administrators, rent control directors, bankers, real estate editors, chambers of commerce, building commissioners and power company and tax officials.

Los Angeles Is Bulging

THOMAS F. FARRELL, chairman of the New York City Housing Authority, sums up the situation this way:

"For three years this country has been sparring with this tough problem. Right now the housing shortage is leading on points. Despite our best efforts, it has us on the ropes and staggering."

Spokesmen for other large cities echo a similar refrain. The Los Angeles Mayor's Emergency Housing Committee says the California city has 128,367 families waiting for a place to live.

The Los Angeles backlog is being swelled by 8334 persons moving into the city every month, the committee adds. In addition, some 38,000 marriages and 40,000 births every year add to the need for homes.

The building rate is not keeping pace with the need, explains the committee, which cites only 12,557 dwelling units completed in the first seven months of this year. At this rate, the committee adds, it will take seven years to catch up with the current need, even if city growth levels off—which isn't likely.

Chicago authorities do not expect the housing shortage to be eased for probably two more years. The Detroit City Housing Commission says the automobile city's home shortage is just as bad as ever, if not worse. Nashville, Tenn., and Camden, N. J., are the only cities in the country reporting housing shortages almost eliminated.

In Nashville, however, William A. Pitts, county building commissioner, reports many new houses standing vacant "because prices are so high many people cannot buy them."

In Camden, William E. Johnson, executive vice president of the Home Builders Association for Philadelphia and Suburbs, predicts overbuilding of apartment houses in that city may be evident in six or eight months.

The rare exception of Camden is underlined by reports from other sections. Housing relief in upper-price brackets only is noted in Milwaukee, Memphis, Montgomery and Denver. Memphis spokesmen add that their housing scarcity in the lower-price range is as bad as at any time since the war.

While Indiana observers consider the housing shortage appreciably reduced, the Hoosier State's home builders concede that thousands of buyers have been priced out of the market.

Building costs are commonly blamed for such conditions. New York State builders attribute slower home sales not only to costs of building materials and labor, but also to the costs of other commodities which consume buyers' resources.

Pittsburgh experts see an indication of buyer resistance in a sudden spurt in real estate advertising.

A downward trend in home buying above the $10,000 price range is reported from Philadelphia, where costs of new homes are figured up 8.6 per cent since May, and up 15 per cent since January.

Chicago, Memphis and Kansas City sources report home prices up about 10 per cent since January. Slower home buying is admitted by Kansas City real estate men.

But further increases are now anticipated. Louisville contractors expect new-house prices to continue upward by 15 per cent. Philadelphia expects the increase in the price fo' cement alone to add $50 to $100 to home prices.

Building Costs Up

THE Dow Service Building Reports, New York statistical organization, finds construction costs in 33 north central and eastern cities up from 1 to 20 per cent since last March.

In addition, the gray market is still shadowing home builders. An Indiana building supply official reports nails selling at $18 a keg on the gray market—twice the normal price.

These soaring costs have caused many rental projects and homes for sale to be canceled or deferred, in spite of the tremendous demand.

Detroit officials cite deferment of two projects, which would have provided homes for 2300 families, when the estimated construction cost per dwelling unit jumped from $4100 to around $10,000.

A Syracuse, N. Y., builder halted construction of 130 houses because labor costs exceeded estimates.

One developer in Dallas, Tex., where a definite slowdown in buying has been noted particularly above $12,000, tells of 110 out of 240 lot owners who have been waiting from seven to eight years to build when conditions become favorable.

A 600-family rental project has been hanging fire for two years in Cincinnati, not starting because of construction costs.

Local Market Risky

THE FHA office in Oklahoma City says several big housing projects are being held up because materials are increasing in cost and home sales are not as fast as they were.

Washington, with a chronic housing problem because of the extensive Government offices, reports scarcely any construction of large elevator apartment buildings under way because banks and insurance companies are reported not willing to risk loans of large sums for housing construction on the present inflated market.

Many builders lay the gathering stagnation at the doors of lending institutions for their conservative appraisals in making loans.

Realtors Warn Of Move to End Rent Controls

THE National Association of Real Estate Boards served notice this week that it would ask for removal of rent controls by the Eighty-first Congress and would continue to oppose Federally subsidized public housing and Federally aided slum elimination.

Calvin K. Snyder, secretary of tht Realtors' Washington Committee, a NAREB group, outlined the realtors' views at the convention of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards at Columbus.

"As long as we have Federal rent control, we will have a housing shortage. As long as we have a housing shortage, we will have demands for passage of Federally subsidized public housing," Snyder said.

"The public housers admit that Federally subsidized public housing cannot be constructed or operated at a lower cost than comparable housing provided by private enterprise, if private enterprise is given the same advantages locally and nationally accorded public housing.

"These advantages include tax exemption, both local and national, not only on the income of the properties but on the bonded indebtedness. Private rental housing pays local, State and Federal taxes," he added.

Snyder said that public housing groups were appealing to church, veteran and labor groups for funds to carry on lobbying activities in Washington at a time when the housing industry was using every bit of available building material and labor to construct a million houses in 1948.

$1,250,000 Home Program Takes Shape

Street scene of newly completed homes on 28th st. at N. Powhatan, Arlington. Builder is Milton G. Smith. Prices in the subdivision of 33 homes range from $16,750 to $23,250. Smith has an option on 32 more acres adjoining his present building site

A $1,250,000 62-home building program covering 14 acres in the Berkshire section of North Arlington was well under way this week as Milton G. Smith, builder and developer, announced 16 homes occupied, 17 nearing completion, and 29 lots rmaining for housing sites.

The subdivision covers approximately 8 square blocks lying on 28th st. N. and 29th st. N., bounded by N. Ohio and N. Sycamore streets. Smith has an option to buy the remaining 32 acres of an original 46-acre tract. He plans to continue construction as long as adequate financing is available to home purchasers. Prices range from $16,750 to $23,250.

Smith has used 14 different basic floor plans in construction of 33 homes, varying the exteriors with brick, stone and frame. He has concentrated on bungalows and a modified rambler.

A five-room bungalow with finished stairway to an expansion attic sells for $16,500. Some have been finished into four-bedroom, two-bath homes selling for $19,550. Prices also include venetian blinds, screens and screen doors. Buyers select their own color scheme to include all interior painting, linoleum and matching cabinet tops.

The Smith organization is also developing a project of large homes in Lacey Forest, off N. Washington blvd., Arlington. Homes will be in the $50,000 price range. Future plans call for construction of low-cost bungalows in Fairfax County, Va., according to O. L. Follin, sales manager.

Freight Car Output Still Below Demand

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP).—The peak fall freight loading season finds the railroads with a dwindling supply of cars.

Record crops must move to market; manufacturers' sales and construction activity, both requiring freight handling, continue above 1947 levels.

But the number of freight cars at work is lower, in spite of new car output near 10,000 monthly.

The American Railway Car Institute has compiled figures which show a net decline of 66,853 freight cars available for service, from VJ-Day three years ago, to August 1, 1948.

Even since last January 1, when the car-building program moved into high gear and deliveries started to run ahead of retirements of obsolete worn-out cars, the "cars-at-work" total has dwindled.

This because of a sharp upturn in the number of "bad order" cars withdrawn from service to await repair.

The institute quotes reports of the Association of American Railroads to show that, although production in the first seven months of 1948 exceeded retirements by 9219 cars, this was overbalanced by an increase of 16,062 in "bad order" cars. So the net loss in "cars-at-work" over the seven-month period was 6843 units.

Against the background of these figures and an uncertain international situation, some railroad men are expressing concern over the status of their freight carrying capacity. They urge a building program of at least 12,000 new cars a month.

Construction Shows Dollar Drop for July

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Building and construction contracts for 37 Eastern States in August showed a seasonal decline in dollar volume from July but remained ahead of the 1947 pace, F. W. Dodge Corp., reported today.

The August total of $854,091,000 was 4 per cent above the $823,216,000 reported in the like month a year ago, but was 11 per cent below July's $962,685,000.

The Dodge Corp., fact-finding organization for the construction industry, said its field reports from the States east of the Rockies indicated the dollar volume of contracts for the first eight months this year was 32 per cent ahead of the 1947 period.

For August, the totals in different classifications were: Residential $337,550,000, up 9 per cent over a year ago; non-residential $308,750,000, up 6 per cent, and public works and utilities $207,791,000, down 7 per cent.

Only areas reporting declines in the aggregate totals from August, 1947, were New England, metropolitan New York and northern New Jersey, the Southeastern States and southern Michigan.

Don't Forget Ping-Pong Table

Plan A Play Room In the Basement

By Robert Burchette—The Washington Post

In the basement recreation room of the Luria Bros.-built "Home of '48" in Arlington, Jody Miller, "Miss Washington of 1948," meets Terry, the Eli Luria's Irish terrier. The attractive recreation room furniture, provided by House and Herrmann furniture store, is of bent ash, with washable blue plastic pillows. The table top and corner table are of maple

THE VALUE of good, wholesome fun and recreation has long since been established. And what better place to find it than right at home?

Attractively yet simply furnished, a basement recreation room is always ready for fun and lots of it. A versatile room, it can also take care of extra guests at a moment's notice with the aid of a comfortable, modern sofa bed—two sofa beds are even better if a college son or daughter brings home several friends at a time.

Practical Furnishings

MANY sofa beds are not only suitable in design for a recreation room, but are also covered with fabrics which can take plenty of hard wear. No kin whatever to old-fashioned convertible monstrosities, modern sofa beds have profited from many construction improvements. Easily opened into full size double beds, they offer top sleeping comfort. Literally on the job day or night, they provide comfortable lounging space, too.

Other furnishings should be equally functional and appropriate. A good start is a floor covering which can take lots of punishment and is easily kept clean. This saves time for a busy homemaker and also makes light of the inevitable spilled refreshments which might ruin an expensive rug. A ping-pong table is practically an essential. Its value is more than just for a game for it makes a wonderful buffet table as well. Pin-up lamps are a safety measure for they leave the floor free of cords and lamps which might cause accidents.

The whole family can work together to make the room just the way they want it. Dad and the boys might build some bookcases and storage cabinets to line the walls. Old orange crates or plywood are inexpensive materials. Paint and decals will finish the job with colorful appeal.

Plenty of storage space is a "must" to hold all the games and recreation equipment which accumulates. The girls in the family can whip up draperies and pillow covers of sturdy, colorful material. Plan the arrangement of furnishings so there's plenty of free space in the center of the room—use every available bit of wall space to advantage.

Serves Many Purposes

A RECREATION room is a great relief for mothers. It's a safe spot for little children who must play indoors on cold or rainy days and mother needn't fear that a speeding tricycle will connect with precious furniiture.

The "rec" room also has what it takes to encourage teen-age youngsters and their friends to spend more time at home in a wholesome environment. Parents find it grand for entertaining their friends, too. The informal atmosphere lends to the fun of a party and more active games are possible than in the living room. And, of course, it's always grand for just the family when all are home together.

Aubinoe Gets Permit To Finish Apartment

A building permit for construction of five buildings with 260 apartments has been issued to Alvin L. Aubinoe, Inc. The project is the Washington and Lee Apartments at N. Wayne and N. 2nd st., Arlington.

The permit is for the second and third sections; the first is nearing completion. Buildings are three-story brick construction.

Brick Output Is Highest Since 1939

Brick production in August reached its highest level since 1939, the Structural Clay Products Institute has announced.

"Total production was 566 million brick, far exceeding any postwar month and indicating a new record post-war annual production rate for 1948.

"The August 1948 brick output was 100 million brick more than in August 1947 and 70 million brick more than July of this year.

"Production of structural clay tile also rose in August to 116,000 tons, the year's top monthly production."

"Sixteen per cent more brick have been produced so far this year than in 1947, and structural clay tile production nearly equals that of last year.

"While shipments of clay products maintain their high levels, inventories continue adequate to meet present building demands."

Exposition Plans Are Completed

THE 1948 National Capital Home Show Exposition, designed to glorify the American home, is all set to open October 16 with 150 exhibits and 10 educational displays, the Home Builders Association sponsors said yesterday.

The housing event, which will follow The Washington Post "Homes of '48" exhibition of new furnished houses by one week, will be held at the D. C. National Guard Armory, 19th and E. Capitol st. se. The eight-day show will close October 24.

The exposition's theme is "What's New In the Home?" Exhibitors will include national and local material dealers, home equipment firms, finance organizations and builders.

Attractive Mrs. Elizabeth Ankers, 28, 1811 H st. nw., is one of the first entrants in the Home Show "Queen Contest," to be staged at the National Guard Armory, October 16-24. A tall, slim, brunette, Mrs. Ankers is in partnership with her husband, Del, in operating a photo firm. Women of all ages, homemakers, professional and club women, are eligible to enter the contest. Rules can be obtained at 426 Investment Building

"Trends in actual home construction, as well as new equipment, have never offered more attractive appeal for the home maker," said Clarence W. Gosnell, president of the builders association.

Highlight of the Armory exposition will be a "home show queen contest," open to all local women. The association emphasized the contest was not a beauty contest. Judging will be based on general appearance, personality and achievements in homemaking, business, or in government. Further contest details may be secured from the Home Builders Association, Investment Building.

The queen will be awarded an aluminum vacation cottage, completely furnished. The winner must supply the lot on which to build the cottage and bear the cost of erection. She is free to sell the prizes, however.

The vacation cottage will be on permanent display at the Armory during the exposition. Other features of the event include a 60-foot electrical display, flower shows, and a "hall of homes" built by association members.

The $435,000 famous Colleen Moore Doll House, called the "most exquisite toy in the world," will occupy booths 99 and 83. It is a scale reproduction of a large English castle of 11 rooms, completely furnished with authentic miniature reproductions. It is sponsored by Acacia Mutual Insurance Co.

GENEVA (AP).—The Swiss are going to make it a little easier for unlucky mountain climbers. They are installing wireless telephones at stations on remote mountain crags and crevices where the climbers usually have their accidents.

Usually, when someone is injured in the mountains, another member of the party must make a long descent into a valley to summon assistance. The new apparatus will make it possible to dial any telephone in the valley for help and save valuable time.

The radio telephones will permit two-way conversations. Residents in the valley will be able to call the mountain stations at certain hours. Eight of the stations already are installed.

Georgians on Yankee Hunt For Better Farming Ideas

HAMILTON, Ga., Sept. 25 (AP).—A group of businessmen and farmers, engaged in bringing worn out Georgia land back to fertility, are heading North to get new ideas for better farming.

A special trainload of 175 Georgia business and farm operators will leave Atlanta October 3 for Eastern and Midwestern points.

All have put money into a land use program originated by Cason J. Callaway, one of Georgia's wealthiest men and a large farm operator. He is financing the trip to show the Georgia experimenters the profit in fertile land and the handicaps Georgia farmers work under, compared to other sections.

CALLAWAY SET up a novel "better farm" plan for Georgia four years ago. It was designed to show the practicability of starting with poor land and a small investment and building up a $20,000 farm.

He organized 100 corporations. Each corporation has seven community businessmen and farm leaders as shareholders who invested $1000 apiece. Each corporation bought a run-down Georgia farm of from 75 to 100 acres and selected a man with farming experience as manager. The "better farms" were set up in 65 widely distributed counties.

Callaway wanted to show that the average Georgia farm could be made profitable by systematic use of proven farm practices. Each farm was given plans for building up land by turning legumes back into the soil, adding fertilizer to correct mineral requirements and rotating crops to put more into the soil each year than is taken out.

MANY OF THE 100 farms have shown sizeable profits already, some are just paying expenses and a few are encountering tough problems.

On October 4 the group will visit the United States Experiment Station at Beltsville, Md. The next day the party will visit the famed Hershey farm in Hershey, Pa., and other agricultural developments in that area. The following day the Georgians will visit Ohio State University and the Ohio Experiment Station near Columbus.

Callaway said his better farm plan for Georgia shows four things need to be done: improve soil, have long-range commercial credit, mechanize the farms and have processing plants near them.

New Construction in Cheverly, Md.

Frank Calcara, builder, has completed a block of 10 new two-story homes in the 3100 block of 63d ave., Cheverly, Md., and has 8 more under construction. Each exterior is different, an effect achieved through the use of various combinations of brick, siding, roof lines and by varying the setback of homes on the lots. The floor plans are essentially the same, featuring six rooms, 1½ baths, garage and porch. The dwellings will sell for around $18,500

Failed in U. S. Desert

Use of camels in the United States desert regions of the Southwest was tried but abandoned in the middle of the last century, largely because horses and mules stampeded at the sight or smell of camels.

Modernization Is Worthy Investment

Bring Your Home Up to Date

By David G. Bareuther

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Modernization of old houses is now being stimulated by increasing supplies of building materials.

The continued high cost of building new homes, coupled with higher values for existing dwellings because of the housing shortage, is making modernization a worthwhile investment for many homeowners.

The old house, which a family may have planned to sell when new construction could be afforded, has suddenly become well worth firing up. Its sturdy qualities have stood the test of time, and on second look they are taking on new attractions in contrast to the high cost of cheap construction.

Many of the best ideas in new-house design can be incorporated readily in older homes.

Old-fashioned pantries often can be converted into cheerful breakfast nooks or dinettes. Ends of halls frequently can accommodate an extra bathroom. Glass block panelc can be built above bathtubs and around kitchen windows to bring in more light where a view is not wanted.

Of course, every house has its own possibilities and limitations, but a little study and planning can open the way for greater livability and comfort in almost any dwelling. Your budget, rather than the design of your house, is most likely to determine the extent of a modernization project.

No homeowner wants to invest more money in his property if he is not going to get something out of it. The job must pay in one or more of the following ways:

1. Increased comfort and livability.
2. Better efficiency through lower upkeep.
3. Improved property value.

If you regard your modernization project as primarily an economic problem you are not likely to go wrong.

Asphalt tile in colors will brighten your kitchen floor.

One major precaution to take, however, is to get the advice of an architect, or experienced builder, when planning any structural changes. Removal of some partitions can weaken a house dangerously. Inexpert moving of electric circuits, or changes around chimneys can involve fire hazards. Radical alterations of exterior appearances can destroy a good design.

But many jobs can be safely planned and carried out with no professional guidance aside from that available from material dealers and workmen.

Depending upon your aptitude and spare time you can paint your house inside and out, lay asphalt tile or linoleum, panel your walls with decorative plywoods, or more ambitiously, reshingle a roof.

Supply dealers usually have an abundance of literature on how to do it. But unless you are handy with tools and have had some experience along the line you plan to follow, chances are you'll save money in the long run by having a craftsman do it for you.

Community Chest Housing Battle Flares Up Once More

THE city's organized home builders have appealed to all groups in the Community Chest to band together and exclude the Washington Housing Association from benefits of the United Community Services fund drives.

The appeal came in the form of an editorial by James W. Pearson, executive director of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington in the September issue of the association's monthly magazine.

PEARSON — FAULKNER

The editorial said it was "unjust and improper for the Washington Housing Association to participate in allocation" of Community Chest funds. It termed WHA a "pink-tinged organization differing radically from practically all of the local organizations receiving Community Chest support."

"It does not provide housing for anyone," Pearson's article added. "Its name more appropriately should be 'Washington Lobby for Public Housing.'"

Waldron Faulkner, architect and president of the Washington Housing Association, issued this statement following a meeting Thursday of WHA officers:

"This is an issue which should be decided by the community as a whole. The community, through the regular processes of United Community Services, has already acted after a full hearing of all points of view. Washington Housing Association at that time presented its objectives and record. It is as eager to present them any time to such a group.

"It is not interested in answering in the newspapers any such charges as made by Mr. Pearson which are not substantiated in his editorial. He had previously failed to substantiate such charges at the proper time. He cannot substantiate them now because they are without foundation."

WHA publications list its purpose as: "to stimulate improved housing conditions in the District, particularly for low-income groups, through provision of sufficient safe and sanitary housing constructed by private enterprise, and, if necessary, by public housing agencies."

Although the home building group objects to allocation of Community Chest funds to WHA, the Urban League and the Criminal Justice Association, the editorial said the "Home Builders Association will support the Chest."

Gladiolus Farm Makes Flower Lovers Gasp

Omaha, Nebr. (U.P.).—Flower lovers gasp in admiration when they see the farm of W. G. Heaton, south of Omaha late in the summer.

Heaton operates a gladiolus farm and nearly 60 acres of the flowers are in radiant bloom when the hottest weather of the summer sweeps across the Nebraska plains. The flowers of 100 different shades range in color from deep red to pure white.

In late August Heaton harvests his crop. This year he dug between 15 and 20 million bulbs with a total value of $75,000.

Prices of the bulbs range from 1 cent to $5 or more. Heaton said he paid $143 for one bulb several years ago. It was called Blue Triumphator and was imported from Holland.

Product Previews

A one-watt, fluorescent night light that costs only 2½ cents a month to operate around the clock is now available. Developed by Westinghouse lamp engineers, the walnut-size lamp is a safety beacon in a hallway like the one shown above, and in bedroms, nurseries, bathrooms and on stairways. The lamp plugs into baseboard or wall outlets and has an average life of one year. Available locally.

Babies can enjoy strolling in the rain—the same as the rest of us, now that "Shower Shelters" of transparent, waterproof Vinylite plastic are available. This well-tailored poncho fits over baby, stroller and all, and zips snugly up the back. The detachable hood ties firmly under the chin and when the shower is over, it all folds up small and flat enough to fit in mother's pocket or shopping bag. The sturdy, lightweight plastic affords complete protection from the rain, wind or snow and will not crack, peel or stick together, according to the manufacturer. Available at Lansburgh's.

This child's plastic eating dish has suction cups which hold it to a table surface, restraining Junior from splashing his food around more than usual. Available from leading department stores and manufactured by Dismat Corp., Toledo, Ohio.

Local inventor Chalmer G. Hall, jr., is out to rid the world of aching backs with his "Rytab." The latter is the trade name of his new orthopedic foam rubber pillow which Hall claims will "Rid You of That Aching Back." RYTAB, get it? The scientifically designed, medically approved pillow is said to give relief to back pains and fatigue due to stresses and strains on the backbone and adjacent muscles and nerves. Also recommended for hospital patients, invalid and shut-ins. Available from Kloman Instrument Co.

The "Solobar" is an assistant hostess designed for bridge tables, poker parties or rumpus-room use. It is a combination ash tray, coaster and built-in container for a package of cigarettes. The manufacturer says this handy hostess aid can be placed on the arm of a living room chair, davenport or coffee table. It is molded in one piece from plastic in five colors. The cigaret holder takes a full package and is used as a handle. Available at Kann's.

Czarists Moving To Latin America

SINGAPORE (AP).—Several thousand White Russians who didn't want to stay in China or return to Russia are seeking new homes in South America.

This was reported by a party of 15 who stopped here en route from Shanghai to Buenos Aires on the Dutch ship Ruys. Russians in China are filled with "migration fever" because of "unbearable" economic conditions, they said.

A Russian merchant in the group reported there were probably only 7000 White Russians in China today out of a one-time population of 50,000. Although large numbers already have migrated, booking of passages from Shanghai to the Americas remains heavy.

This Week In D. C. Real Estate

THE TWENTY-SEVENTH annual meeting of the Washington Real Estate Board will be held Thursday, September 30, in the Mayflower Hotel, according to F. Moran McConihe, president of the local realtors organization.

The nominating committee has selected the following realitors to head the local chapter during the coming year: Raymond M. Taylor, of Shannon & Luchs, president; J. Garrett Beitzell, head of his own firm, first vice-president; and Oliver Walker, of Walker & Dunlop, Inc., second vice-president.

Additional candidates for offices to be filled may be placed in nomination from the floor at the time of the election.

Following the election of officers and directors for the new fiscal year, board members will hear a talk on, "The Constitution and What It Means," by Charles E. Hoover of Huntington, West Virginia, Regional vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Highlight of the meetng will be the presentation of a historic gavel to the Washington Board, received from the National Association. This gavel is fashioned from wood grown at Mount Vernon and Monticello with a steel name band from the deck of the U. S. S. Missouri. The meeting will be preceeded by a buffet supper. Arrangements are being handled by Al S. Gardiner, jr., chairman of the Board's Program Committee.

TAYLOR — BEITZELL — WALKER — BOAZ — LUTES — KESSINGER

THE Montgomery County Real Estate Board will hold its annual meeting and election of officers on October 4. The place will be announced at an early date, according to Ellis M. Jones, executive secretary of the board.

The nominating committee has selected the following candidates to head the Maryland chapter during the next fiscal term: J. Noble Boaz, president; Andrew J. Kessinger, first vice president; Robert H. Best, second vice president; Lawrence V. Lutes, secretary-treasurer, and A. V. Pisani, director. All are heads of Montgomery County realty firms.

In addition to election of officers, a vote will be taken on whether or not a proposed multiple listing system will be put into effect by the board.

THE National Association of Home Builders last week got its dander up when Harold Stassen, in a radio address, told his audience that housing being constructed today is "at a price beyond the reach of the average purchaser and the rate of construction is still too slow."

NAHB wired Dewey, agreed that the housing problem is a serious one, but predicted that "if we are permitted to continue our current record-breaking volume of production without Government interference or competition for a reasonable period of time we can certainly meet the total need.

The building group told Dewey that it did not believe "that the New York State pattern of subsidizing housing should be followed throughout the country. We believe that our current eight billion dollar annual home building program would be driven down to a minimum amount if every state with federal subsidies initiated public housing on the same scale.

"We believe that as in European countries the industry would gradually be emasculated and the total production of housing seriously reduced since no government can afford to house a substantial part of its people," the group added.

Questionnaires are being sent out to mayors by Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) in his capacity as chairman of the Senate subcommittee on housing and rents, to acquire data as a guide for the making of disposal policy for temporary war housing. He is asking how much longer these temporary facilities may be needed and whether cities would like to take them over in their present shape for extended use if shelter is still tight in their communities.

Current problems in the home building field will be analyzed when the directors of the National Association of Home Builders gather in Los Angeles, October 3-9. Major topics include finance, merchandising and mass production. FHA Commissioner Franklin Richards will speak on Government-industry cooperation in satisfying the housing demand.

Problems of construction of "economy houses" will be discussed by builders who are "tooling up" to erect entire communities of low-cost homes.

NEWS BRIEFS: A 15 per cent rent increase has been approved for 8000 dwelling units under rent control in Petersburg, Va. . . . American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers meet November 12-13 in New York, preceding the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, November 14-20 . . . American Title Association meets in Chicago October 27-30 . . . The Housing Institute, publishers of the Housing Letter and other realty publications, has been purchased by International Statistical Bureau, Inc.

The Richmond "Better Home Show" is set for October 30 through November 7, sponsored by the Richmond Home Builders Association and the Real Estate Exchange. . . . The New York Supreme Court has ruled that $27 a day is a proper wage for a bricklayer.

Maplewood Homes Boast Air Conditioning

"First development of new homes in Washington to have a complete air-conditioning," was the claim put forth yesterday by Maplewood, Inc., builders and developers of homes in Maplewood, Bethesda, Md.

The combination heating and cooling system, similar to commercial establishments, although smaller, was installed by Carrier, locally represented by United Clay Products Co. Carrier officials are watching the project to test public reaction to home air conditioning.

The Maplewood project is a "guinea pig" operation in that no other speculative housing development has boasted such systems.

The equipment will be installed in six homes, all two-story bricks, of colonial style architecture, with living room, dining room, kitchen and powder room downstairs; three bedrooms and bath upstairs. A model home at 316 Elsmere ave., Bethesda, Md., is now open to the public.

A. H. Graeff of United Clay Products Co., said the system uses the same duct work in both summer and winter. He said the system would be capable of keeping a home like an ice box even during a heat wave, but recommended that for best comfort a reading of 10 to 15 degrees below the outside temperature be kept.

The combination heating-cooling system sells for around $1800 to $1900, Graeff declared. The price is $1100 to $1200 more than conventional heating installation which does not feature air-conditioning.

The cooling system also reduces summer humidity—taking up to 15 gallons of moisture per day out of the air.

Maplewood is located between Rockville pike and Old Georgetown rd., north of United States Public Health Institute and adjacent to Alta Vista Terrace.

Remains of Oldest American Farmers Found in Peru

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—"America's oldest farmers" have been dug from a mound on the arid coast of Peru by an American Museum of Natural History expedition.

In a preliminary report, Junius Bird, associate curator of archeology, guesses that these early Stone Age people first tilled their stream-watered fields nearly 6,000 years ago, about 4,000 B. C. Myths of the ancient Incas in the same region date back only to 1200 A. D.

"Even if my guess is too early," he writes in "Natural History" magazine, "it is clear that we have made the acquaintance of the oldest farmers yet found in America."

These farmers were buried in shallow graves or in underground vaults of abandoned houses. The mound where they lay had risen to a height of 60 feet of ashes and refuse discarded by the villagers over centuries.

Crude tools showed that the farmers, who also gathered seafood, did not know even how to fashion flints by the flaking process. They lived before the arrival in Peru of the great American grain crop, corn. They did grow squash, peppers, beans, gourds and cotton and gathered wild plants. They fished with nets and dived for mussels but did little or no hunting.

They made cloth of cotton and of bark, used a blue dye and a red pigment, chewed medicinal plants, constructed subterranean huts with cobblestone walls and roof timbers of wood and whalebone.

Relics of all these things were preserved for five or six millennia by the dry as dust earth.

The museum expedition lasted a year and ended in 1947. The collections arrived in this country last June.

Italy's Royal Properties Confiscated

ROME, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—The Italian republic finally has taken the last step to confiscate the property of the deposed monarchy. Parliament approved a measure specifying that all the houses and land owned by the House of Savoy shall become public domain.

The buildings include the royal palace in Turin, all the buildings owned by the monarchy in Pisa, along the Lungarno Regio and properties in Rome. The most important outside of Rome is the Pisa royal palace, badly damaged during the war.

In Rome, the state took over the Palace of St. Andrew, formerly the ministry of the royal house and in ancient times part of the Church of St. Andrew, when it was used as a Jesuit convent. Charles Emmanuel IV died and was buried in St. Andrew's Church. The palace in Via Piacenza in Rome, and the one in Via Geneva, both used by the household personnel of the royal family, also became state property.

Estates Nationalized

The lowly royal estates of San Ressore and Tembolo, near Pisa, and part of Castelporziano, outside Rome, a 1235-acre estate recently rented to sharecroppers, were nationalized. The state has a fight on its hands with the Pisa municipality, however, because the latter claims it has more right to the estates there than the national government.

An estimate of the estate's value indicates that the state has taken over 24,710 acres of land. All other royal residences in Italy became public domain in 1919, including the royal palaces of Naples, Caserta, Venice, Genoa, the "Favorita" of Palermo and the Pitti palace in Florence. At the same time, the estates of Carditello, near Naples, and Pontano, near Pisa, were given to the state by the monarchy and used for Italian war veterans.

The bill approved by Parliament set aside the biggest properties in Rome for the use of the president of Italy.

Beverly Hills Jail, Filmdom's Favorite, Is Super-Super in Fittings and Food

By Aline Mosby

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Even the jail in this town is a lavish, plush place.

This pokey is right in keeping with the high-tone homes and stores in the Nation's second richest city. As the police chief says, he never can tell who'll wind up in the jug, and for such high taxes the citizens expect to get their money's worth.

Thus the glamour gaol, of Spanish architecture fringed with geraniums and palm trees, looks not unlike some of the movie stars' fancy homes down the street.

The drunk tank inside is a neat place with lemon-yellow walls and a sweeping view of Beverly Hills from the lemon-yellow bars. Now and then an actor admires this scenery.

The quarters for lady guests, such as Joan Barry when she was arrested for disturbing Charlie Chaplin's peace, are a delicate chartreuse. Men are bedded down in cells of pale yellow. Most of these rooms do not have a view.

One actor disdained this accommodation and slept on the long, aluminum table where chow is served. "We often," says Chief C. H. Anderson, "are complimented on our fine food."

"Once a chauffeur brought in for speeding had to spend the night. He said our breakfast was much better than what he ate at home."

The cells also are noted for their quiet, as the SRO sign is out only on weekends when champagne flows in Beverly Hills. Last year, a UCLA cheer leader wanted to stay all night to study his exams away from his noisy frat house, but the cop on duty said guests must be involuntary.

Many celebrities visit this jail and the chief protects their dignity. They are hustled from the garage to a private, dark green elevator. This whisks them to the third-floor cells, past the prying press on the second floor.

Downstairs is a burglar system wired to 250 homes, including Jack Benny's. Anderson's 60 cops also are helped by 120 private guards at mansions. Telephoned alarms are supposed to be answered before the victims can hang up. Once Greta Garbo phoned about a prowler and a squad car was at her house as the frightened actress was sliding down the drainpipe in her nightgown.

Homes of '48 Offer Tips On Heating

WITH COOL weather in sight, heating systems in the "Homes of 48" series are capturing much attention these days.

There are several heating methods displayed in the 13 houses representing modern living, and the various automatic controls prompt many questions.

The normal heat loss calculation for your residence should be obtained from a heating equipment dealer who can estimate accurately the normal amount of fuel consumption. If consumption runs over that figure, the fault should be located and corrected. For maximum efficiency, heating engineers recommend:

Proper insulation in exposed walls and ceilings.

Use of storm windows to reduce heat loss of as much as 30 per cent.

Adjustment of dampers or valves by a qualified heating dealer to solve unsatisfactory conditions in "hard to heat" rooms.

Insulation of pipes or the addition of another thermostat to isolate rooms distant from the heating plant.

Cleaning of the heating unit interior and pipes.

Replacement or thorough cleaning of filters in warm-air heating units.

The home displayed by S. Weinberg & Sons at Columbia Pines, near Annandale, Va., features "moduflow", a system which automatically regulates the flow of heat from the furnace or burner to correspond with escaping heat.

Contrasted with the ordinary thermostat, which provides "on and off" operation of the heating plant, this system furnishes a continuous flow of heat. Cool and warm layers of air from floor to ceiling are thus minimized.

How this works is expained by F. M. Thuney, Washington branch manager of Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co.:

"A temperature controller outside the house 'anticipates' heat needs. Temperature changes operate thermostats controlling the volume of air that enters the rooms. As heat loss varies, the heat input is automatically varied to provide a precise balance at a temperature level selected by the householder.

"The arrangement is suitable for any kind of heating system currently being installed, including radiant panel, hot water, steam or hot air, and it can be added to existing systems in homes already occupied."

Highly Adaptable Floor Plan

THIS highly attractive California-styled home was designed for a sloping lot at 6121 Arbor st., Cheverly, Md., by Builder John Mooseberger. The floor plan combines comfortable living with modern efficiency. Over 76 feet in length, the house includes two large bedrooms and bath, living-dining room, kitchen, porch, garage and terrace on the main floor, with a maid's room and bath, recreation room, cold storage room, utility room and private office in the "basement," which is actually at ground level. The recreation room opens directly onto the garden. The living room boasts oak paneling on two sides, a 52"x9' picture window overlooking the garden, and a fireplace with Heat-o-Lator unit. The master bedroom has one wall finished in beautiful Weldtex plywood of two-tone green, to contrast with conventional plaster walls. The front bedroom is done in knotty pine. Both bedrooms have ceiling-to-floor storage areas. All doors and windows are custom-built, providing an interesting variation

BROKERS' COOPERATION INVITED

Antique Sales Too Brisk for Dwindling Supply

By Cynthia Lowry

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP).—Mrs. Roslyn Rozier thinks that in another 10 years antiques dealers may have sold themselves right out of business.

Mrs. Rozier, a dealer herself, says "we are running out of the things to sell, and people are begining to realize that junk is junk—and not buying it.

"There'll be collections from estates to be broken up and a few people will always be wanting to sell. But even now we are finding plenty of trouble getting good stuff. The American, French and British countrysides have been ramsacked and fine-tooth-combed."

But right now, all along New York's Antique Row on 3d ave., dealers say business is swell. They agree the big demand is still for eighteenth and nineteenth century English furniture, Chippendale, Hepplewhite, Adams and Sheraton. Things are so active in the antiques marketplaces that the dealers have little chance to worry about any bare showrooms in the future.

Supply Is Limited

PERIOD PIECES, as Mrs. Rozier wryly pointed out, arn't like antomobiles or modern furniture, turned out with an eye to meeting demand. The supply is strictly limited. The U. S. Customs Department, for one thing, has decreed that an antique is an article made before 1830 (such articles are duty-free). It's the demand which fixes the prices.

Mrs. Rozier, whose 50th st. shop specializes in imported antiques, estimated prices have increased some 150 per cent in the last nine years. It was in 1939 that furniture factories started converting to the production of such items as army cots and barracks furnishings. As new furniture became progressively harder to buy, the life of the antiques dealer became happier and happier.

"Prices went up when antiques were about all you could buy," Mrs. Rozier said. "Now they have dropped a little for the second class stuff, but high prices are holding on the good pieces. There's a big demand."

Most dealers agree French provincial has been coming into its own during the last five years. It's smart, hard to find—even in France, and expensive.

Paul Joseph of the Olga Erlanger establishment on 57th st. said he thought the continuing demand for antiques was the result of the gradual easing of the housing shortage.

Spending War Savings

"PEOPLE couldn't get what they wanted during the war, and now they are ready to spend the money they saved," he said. "The timeless stuff, Chippendale and others, always is in steady demand."

He said the bottom had dropped out of prices for later Victorian pieces, although there continued to be a steady call for early Victorian—"sort of like Louis XV and really not bad."

Decorators are not dedicated to any one period right now, but among the nonprofessionals, men and women who are furnishing their own homes, eighteenth and nineteenth century pieces are at least a two-to-one choice.

Home Pride Important to Teen-Agers

The Washington Post

The youngsters weren't forgotten when the National Furniture Co. equipped the model "Home of '48," built by Ralph Construction Co. in Wheaton Hills, Md. In the nursery of the house, Doris and Bob Bishop pause to admire the picture of a friend on the chest of drawers as they tour the house with their mother, Mrs. Howard W. Bishop, 10208 Loraine ave., Silver Spring. The wallpaper, with its capering kittens, has a blue background, and the fat little rocking chair is of red imitation leather

MAKE your home attractive and functional so that your teen-age yungsters will enjoy living there. It doesn't take a lot of money—it simply requires an understanding of your family's needs, a little intelligent planning and ingenuity.

If all teen-agers had homes in which they were proud to entertain their friends—and homes which furnished comfort and facilities for their own amusement—there undoubtedly would be a sizeable decrease in the juvenile delinquency rate. The streets, the corner drug store, the undesirable hangouts would lose their appeal.

During their teens, young people develop a sense of ownership, they want more privacy and a place and possessions of their own. Making their bedrooms into bed-living rooms can help to fill these needs and give them a nice spot to entertain their friends without having to have the rest of the family under foot. By letting the teen-ager plan and fix up his room, he will feel it is truly his own and will enjoy spending his leisure hours in it.

Suggested Changes

New wallpaper or paint to provide a living room background is the first step in making such a change. Allowed to choose what he wants, the average teen-ager will attack the job of papering and painting with enthusiasm—when it's his own room.

To eliminate all trace of a bedroom, a slipcovered mattress and spring-on-legs can be used. This will provide sleeping comfort by night, lounging room during the day and plenty of seating room when friends drop in. Replacing "bedromish" curtains with draperies to match the bed slipcover comes next. Both slipcovers and draperies are easy to make, and helping mother to do it is a good opportunity for the junior miss to learn another homemaking skill. Materials need not be expensive, but should be sturdy and serviceable.

From here on, the teen-ager should be allowed to complete the room with his own particular whims. He'll probably want a desk and bookcase to hold everything from books to hobby collections to sports equipment. If there's an amateur carpenter in the house, sectional pieces can be built out of old orange crates and painted to tie in with the color scheme. Later a radio-phonograph, recordings, pictures, a lounge chair, lamps, knick-knacks or something else special for his room will solve Christmas and birthday gift problems.

Fall Rose Show Is Scheduled for October 2 and 3

The Annual Fall Rose Show, sponsored by the Potomac Rose Society, will be held October 2 and 3 in the foyer of the United States National Museum, 10th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

All exhibition classes are open to the public and awards will be given in several divisions, including an arrangement group for men only, blooms from home gardens up to 35 plants in size, and "best in the show" roses.

Each exhibitor will be given a 2-pound box of Porotox dusting compound, the society said. This year's show is dedicated to Niels J. Hansen, one of the founders of the society.

New 1948 High Set in Output Of Materials

The Commerce Department reported yesterday the production of building materials rose to a new 1948 high in July. It was the fifth successive month in which output went up.

July production was 1 per cent above that in June and 53.7 per cent above 1939 monthly average, the department said. For the first seven months of this year production was 5 per cent higher than in the corresponding period of last year.

Among the more important materials making gains in July were lumber, hardwood flooring, brick, cement, concrete reinforcing bars, clay tile and gypsum board and lath.

Tips on Transplanting Ornamentals

It's Backache Time in the Back Yard

By James H. Beattie

FALL IS AN excellent time to plant or move most of the home-yard ornamentals. By following a few simple precautions the work may be done with excellent chances that the plants will live and thrive.

Plants are highly organized living things and severe shock is likely to be fatal. The problem in moving plants is to reduce the shock to a minimum. Obviously, the moving of an oak or other similar tree while in leaf cannot fail to severely disturb the plant. The destruction or injury of the roots causes a similar situation.

Transplanting requires care in selecting a season when the work can be done with minimum disturbance to the plant. In the case of decidous plants it can be done to best advantage when the leaves are off; with evergreens, when the plants are not in a rapidly growing condition.

Less Root-Disturbance

POTTED or tubbed plants may be shifted from one container to another, or to a permanent location in the yard at almost any time, simply because the roots are not disturbed.

While beyond the limitations of the average homeowner, most deciduous shrubs and trees may be moved almost any time, provided they are lifted with a block of earth large enough to contain the major portion of the root system. Even small trees require moving blocks of earth weighing several hundred pounds. Its usually better to wait for the dormant season. This extends from fall until before the buds start in spring.

It is very important that as much as possible of the root system be saved. Prevent the roots from drying out or freezing by the trimming damaged roots and cutting away enough of the top to balance the root system.

"Ball" Evergreens

Evergreen plants are usually dug and moved with a large-size mass of earth around the roots This prevents drying out and preserves the major portion of the root system, especially the small fibrous "feeding" roots.

There is always a tendency to make the ball too small. One from two thirds to three fourths the diameter of the plant is none too large. Frequently the earth is alowed to dry out while the plants are being moved and replanted. An evergreen seldom recovers from a severe drying out.

An old rule followed by many successful plantsmen is to move evergreens at any time except when they are growing rapidly. Late spring, when plants are throwing out new shoots and making a rapid development, is a bad time for movement. Summer moving is accompanied by considerable risk due to heat and drouth. Autumn, after the plants have slowed down and are no longer developing new shoots and leaves, is an excellent time provided the usual precautions are taken.

The average yard that has been graded following house building presents very poor conditions for the growing plants. It hardly pays to purchase high grade ornamentals and doom them to virtual failure because of the lack of soil. A few bushels of fertile top-soil placed around each shrub or tree is a profitable investment.

Respond to Good Soil

ADEQUATE draining is very important. In the case of planting sites with impervious subsoils there is extreme likelihood that trees and shrubs may suffer from water-logging.

The holes which must be dug into the subsoil to provide space for the roots may act as a water-tight container and winter and spring rains may literally drown the newly set plant. In cases of this kind some help would be afforded by digging a foot or two deeper and filling this space with broken stones. A tile drain would be a better plan.

Recent observations of the lifting, moving and replanting of some two inch in diameter, 10 feet tall scarlet oaks revealed that the experienced gardener was carefully preserving the main roots for a distance of at least six feet from the base of the tree and wrapping them in wet burlap as fast as they were exposed.

When planting, the usual hole was made and these long roots were reset in a practically natural position by digging a shallow trench for each root. He, too, followed the old rule to trim damaged roots and to cut the top back to reestablish a balance between them.

Compact Root Soil

WHEN PLANTING, the soil should be carefully firmed around the roots. Refilling of the hole in layers, carefully trampling each layer without damaging the roots is important. When the hole is half-filled saturation with several gallons of water helps to compact the soil around the roots.

When planting "balled" plants all the burlap or other covering of the ball should be removed after the plant has been set in place. Many plants are lost because the space between the ball and the walls of the hole are not completely filled with earth. It should be worked under and around the ball. The restricted use of water to wash the soil in place is helpful but it can be overdone by filling with water instead of soil.

Winter rains, soft earth and high winds tend to sway and loosen fall-set plants. During the first winter they should have support. Three firmly set stakes arranged in a triangle a few feet from the base of the plant with tight wires from the stakes to the trunk of the tree some distance above the ground are usually sufficient. A piece of garden hose or some similar material should be used to prevent the wire from chafing the tree trunk.

These Windows 'Frame' the Outdoors

By Lucia Brown

THE RISE of the window wall has brought many a beautiful view—and many a decorating problem—into the American home.

Just how much the lavish use of windows adds to a room and how decorators meet the problems presented by these same windows can be seen on a tour of the "Homes of '48" exhibit. There's hardly a house in the lot that hasn't a picture window, a window wall, or some other form of extensive "fenestration."

The windows are lovely. They serve to integrate the outdoors and indoors. They bring light and a feeling of spaciousness, a feeling of living close to the trees and flowers, the rain and the sun.

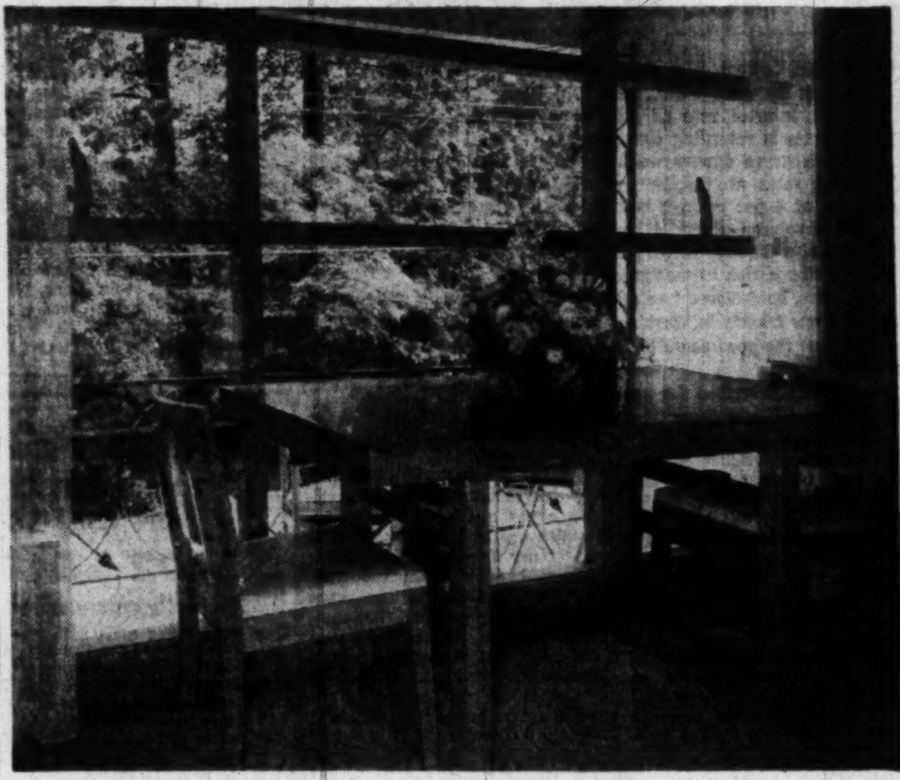
But in working with them, decorators have to keep many things in mind. In the first place, they must strive to make the window provide decorations in much the same way as a mural. In going through the houses, you'll note that outside colors in the window view have been taken into account in selecting colors for interiors. Room colors are in harmony with those presented by the picture window.



Edwards Studio

You practically dine outdoors in this charming room. It's in the model "Home of '48," built by Paul P. Stone in Hillcrest Gardens, Md., and furnished by the Wm. E. Miller Co. The window wall can be covered at night by the full traverse draperies of heavy coral material. The rug is beige and the furniture of bleached mahogany

Drapes Provide Privacy

THEN there is the question of privacy. No one wants to live in a goldfish bowl. So decorators have provided traverse draperies, Venetian blinds, sheer curtains, or other means of protection from prying eyes and noonday glare. These drapery treatments provide a frame for the picture, too, and add to its beauty.

The placing of furniture in relation to wide expanses of windows has been carefully thought out. Furniture has been arranged so that it doesn't interfere unduly with the view. The fact that some furniture is boldly silhouetted against the windows has been kept in mind. Then, too, sofas and chairs have been arranged so that they command a pleasing out-the-window vista.

One "Home of '48" that is replete with windows is the Monterey-modern dwelling built by Paul P. Stone in Hillcrest Gardens, Md. Besides picture windows in the living room, there is a window wall in the dining room. It's entirely of glass except for wooden cross pieces at widely spaced intervals. A deeply wooded area just outside the window gives diners a restful, pleasing view.

On this window wall, the Wm. E. Miller furniture company has hung traverse draperies of a soft heavy coral material. These have "100 per cent fullness" when drawn together, fall in soft folds at each end of the wall when pulled back. Beneath them at each end are filmy white marquisette curtains which help frame the scene outside.

Wall of Glass

IN THE many-windowed den of the house built by Eli Luria in Arlington, the treatment is simpler, but most effective. Windows almost cover one wall of this den and half of another. This means one corner of the room is almost entirely of glass. House & Herrmann have placed a writing and card table with chairs in this windowed corner, where maximum light can be enjoyed. At each end of the windows, they have hung a drapery of heavy colorful checked material. Venetian blinds extend across each group of windows.

The California house built by Carl M. Freeman in Hillwood Manor, Md., has a wall of glass in the living room. In the wall is a glass door which leads out on a flagstone terrace. Manning Modern, the firm which furnished this house, used a traverse drapery here—heavy material of a deep Chinese red with a design of chartreuse and green leaves—that can be drawn together to cover the entire wall.

The Georgian house built by W. C. and A. N. Miller in Spring Valley has a large picture window in the living room. The huge oblong of glass is framed by draperies in a Toile de Joie print. Woodward & Lothrop had a handsome valance made for the top of the window in the form of an elongated French curve. The draperies are lemon yellow and bracken green, have side curtains of white ninon underneath them and a cream window shade.

In other "Homes of '48" with picture windows, the drapery treatment is slightly different. But in each, the dweller can enjoy all the pleasures of wide window spaces and a bit of privacy besides. It's easy to understand, after looking at these houses, why vast expanses of windows have become one of the most interesting and popular features of modern architecture.

4% Mortgage Interest Rate Called Damper on Building of Apartments

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Nation's mortgage bankers, in convention here all week, were told Thursday that the current 4 per cent interest rate on mortgages for large scale apartment developments is retarding construction.

"There is grave danger we will not see many apartments built if interest rates are arbitrarily held down by Washington to a maximum of 4 per cent; it would be a death knell to our vision of a large volume of rental housing," said Edgar N. Greenebaum, president of a Chicago investment firm, in an address.

In dicussing a rise in mortgage interest rates, he declared "we can only hope our friends in Washington will have the good sense to be realistic."

Greenebaum described the weak market for GI mortgages since late last year and said that a good secondary market for such loans must be secured. He termed provisions of the newly enacted Housing Act of 1948 calling for creation of a secondary market "too small a step."

He described the changed conditions in the securities field since late last year when Government and corporate bonds dropped, thus making many of them far more attractive to large investors than 4 per cent GI loans which had been in good demand from 1945 to 1946.

"The result has been a virtual stoppage of such loans. The picture should change somewhat if veterans are permitted to pay 4½ per cent interest under the new law," Greenebaum added.

A second speaker, Dr. Marcus Nadler, professor of finance, New York University, told the members of the Mortgage Bankers Association that "in the not too distant future, the 4 per cent interest rate will practically disappear."

"So long as the present inflationary spiral continues, a moderate firming of interest rates will continue, but a repetition of the chaotic money market of 1920 is entirely out of the question," he declared.

"The real estate situation is highly inflated," he continued. "Demand for housing is still exceedingly great, and the housing shortage will continue for several years. Yet it is evident that real estate is not selling as freely now as a year ago. Prices on older property and large houses have declined. The end is not yet in sight. The fact of the matter is that prices of homes have increased to a point where many people are unable to buy or carry them."

Referring to the present discussion in banking and Government circles of credit restrictions, Nadler said that "drastic credit restrictive measures, which would be accompanied by a material increase in money rates, could readily convert the present period of prosperity into a serious depression accompanied by large scale unemployment."

Claude L. Benner, moderator at the session, declared that he thought that GI mortgage loans would have to go to a 4½ per cent interest rate basis because at the present time they are not attractive to investors at 4 per cent. He predicted such action would be taken late in the year.

A States' Rights Row Down Under

SYDNEY, Australia (AP).—The government of the Australian states and of the Commonwealth are at loggerheads. The states say they should receive a bigger handout from the commonwealth treasury, or have greater taxing powers. The commonwealth says the states can have $28,210,000 more of federal money this year, but that's all.

Critics of commonwealth administration say that Canberra is trying to strangle the states—and is succeeding. The dispute dates back to July 1, 1941. Then the commonwealth government introduced a uniform income tax, and everyone paid income tax only to the federal treasury. Before that date, each state collected its own income tax. The commonwealth government also collected income tax, but the amount taken was small on moderate incomes.

To compensate the states for their loss of revenue, the commonwealth government has made grants each year. The states say they still have to skimp, while the commonwealth will have more revenue than it needs. The Prime Minister, Joseph B. Chifly, says they should increase railway freight and motor registration fees, and earn more themselves.

'Things Are Tough All Over'

POSITIONS the stars sometimes find themselves in can make life pretty tough, as these scenes from the week's pictures attest. At left, Dennis O'Keefe seems safely protected, but you can tell he's not over-confident in "Walk a Crooked Mile," Thursday at the Warner. Below, Jane Powell doing KP for Metro's "Luxury Liner," today at the Palace. And Burgess Meredith, below, is hardly serene in this scene from "Mine Own Executioner," which opens Wednesday at the Playhouse

LORETTA YOUNG has to carry her own kindling wood, though William Holden comes to her aid in "Rachel and the Stranger," opening at Keith's Wednesday

Old Hands Get Down to Work On New Scripts

By Richard L. Coe

YOU'D NEVER KNOW IT in Washington—what with the National going over to two-a-day movies—but elsewhere the theater season that's just gotten under way sounds promising indeed.

HELLMAN

The established playwrights will be back this season in considerable force. Most of them have been conspicuous only by their absence in recent years; revivals have been vital in filling the gaps between newcomers' offerings and the topflight stars have trekked the country in vehicles that may be welcome but certainly aren't new.

This year is bringing scripts by Lillian Hellman, Maxwell Anderson, Noel Coward, George S. Kaufman, Moss Hart, Philip Barry, Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse, Sean O'Casey, Sam and Bella Spewack, Clifford Odets, Sam Behrman, Garson Kanin, Norman Krasna, Sidney Kingsley and William Saroyan. And if this isn't enough of the old-line hit-makers, those comparatively recent golden boys, Tennessee Williams and Jean-Paul Sartre, are also on the lists.

Two Bad Starts

TRUE, two veterans already have suffered the ills of fortune this early in the season. Ruth Gordon's theatrical comedy, "The Leading Lady," bolstered by a glittering company headed by the author, closed a tryout engagement last night in Chicago and only a long, successful rewrite job will save the Samrock-Fields production investment. Marc Connelly's "A Story for Strangers," his first in some years and reviewed in these pages this morning, seems to have come a cropper. The Times' Brooks Atkinson remarked: "The man who dramatized 'The Green Pastures' 18 years ago can still get no higher than heaven."

Despite these initial disappointments from the established playwrights, the season's feast includes such items as these, which, I hasten to repeat, you won't be seeing in this theater-robbed outpost:

Miss Hellman is dramatizing Norman Mailer's well-read novel, "The Naked and the Dead," and she's also passing on the operatic version Marc Blitzstein has completed of "The Little Foxes."

Maxwell Anderson's distinguished name will be on two first-night programs, for his drama of Anne Boleyn, "Anne of the Thousand Days," and for his version of another popular book, "Cry, the Beloved Country," that study of race relationships in South Africa.

Noel Coward will be represented by his London hit of two seasons ago, "Peace in Our Time," and you might as well include Tallulah Bankhead's revival of his "Private Lives."

Kaufman Busy

GEORGE S. KAUFMAN'S activities are complicated as ever. He's staged Gertrude Tonkonogy's "Town House," whose New York reception was too late to make this edition, and, with his old partner, Edna Ferber, he's come up with a comedy of theatrical life, "Bravo!" This one sounds swell and boasts Rosa Stradna, long absent; Oscar Homolka, Fritzi Scheff, Tonio Selwart, Janet Fox, Zolya Talma (once an Olney standby), and the vaudeville team of Arthur and Morton Havel.

Moss Hart's "Light Up the Sky" is reported to spoof a producer-columnist's affection for the fine arts and his wife's for glittering gems. The wise men say it's about the Billy Roses (Eleanor Holm).

Philip Barry has one for the Theater Guild, "The Emperor Chin," and he's not been heard from for far too long. (There's nothing specific, so far as I can discover, from that other artisan, George Kelly, but it's time for him to finish the one he said he was working on last season.)

Lindsay and Crouse, of course, you must know about. They opened their "Life With Mother" last spring to cheers in Detroit, and Producer Oscar Serlin has erected a four-story neon sign in front of the Empire that you can see from 45th street. The old 40th street Frohman fortress, you remember, was the home for so many years of "Life With Father." And, naturally, Mr. and Mrs. Crouse (Dorothy Stickney) will be playing the elder Days.

Sean O'Casey will bring Ireland to us in "Red Roses for Me," which already has had its London showing.

Two for Spewacks

THE writing Spewacks are the authors of two, John C. Wilson's musical (whatever happened to his vow never to produce another play with music?), "Kiss Me, Kate," is reported to be based on "The Taming of the Shrew," though its setting is the modern theatrical world,

Looking at Television

Handwriting on TV Is Just Like Reading People's Mail

By Sonia Stein

CROSSING your t's lately? Dotting your i's? Minding your p's and q's? Well, you'd better start. There was a time when only a handful of expert graphologists—students of character analysis through handwriting—could detect your personal passion for pomegranates in the squiggles you call writing.

HELEN KING

But now, WNBW is showing everybody how to spot a poisonous personality by his penmanship.

Helen King, president of the American Graphological Society, began a Tuesday (7:10 p. m.) series for WNBW this week which should shape up into something fascinating.

Ragged on the edges as most new TV shows are, the 18-minute "Write Now" show will probably appeal to a large audience no matter what bobbles and upsets occur, because the subject-matter is ideal television. Besides it's almost as exciting as reading other people's mail.

50,000 for One

THE poor man's psychoanalysis, graphology enjoys the high regard of many business firms who have job applications screened by a graphologist before interviewing the survivors. (You've seen the employment ads which ask you to reply in your own handwriting?)

Miss King has done that kind of analysis and says it was used particularly during the depression when 50,000 applicants would write for one job.

Doodles, those delirious creations people make half-consciously while they sit at the phone or listen to lectures, are also grist for Miss King's mill. On the TV show, she will analyze samples of writing or doodling and answer questions on either of these manual arts, whether sent in by the audience or collected from famous pen-wielders.

Some Film Stars

SOME of her subjects will be motion picture stars, since she does graphology columns for Movieland Magazine and Screen Guide and has quite a passel of autographs to choose from. Others will be famous people from hereabouts who will appear in person.

Holly Wright, who bats the conversational ball with Miss King and the guests, will be exposed in all his iniquities as the series progresses and Miss King sees more of his doodles. She says he seems like a wholesome type whose character analysis will not shiver the FCC's timbers.

(Most radio performers grapple with the phenomenon of being greeted as old friends by their fans; TV performers have fewer but more fervid "old friends" of this type. What will become of Wright, whose fans will soon know him as well as his psychiatrist does?)

With guests, Miss King tries to use the discreet word, but does not pull her punches. "Most traits are good or bad depending on how they are used," says Miss King. "After all, you can be loyal—to Hitler."

Just Trying to Help

THE object of graphological analysis is to help people overcome their faults and develop their strong points. It isn't just a nasty little fault-finding exercise.

For those who regard handwriting analysis as a prosaic version of crystal gazing, Miss King will be a surprise. Her approach is so matter-of-fact as to be almost colorless—there's not an ounce of hoopla in the show—and her background is reassuring. Now editor of the American Graphological Society's Bulletin, as well as its president, Miss King was one of the graphologists asked to participate in tests made at Harvard. (The learned circles now take much interest in graphology and one famous psychologist looks upon his work in that field as his "greatest contribution to psychology.")

Currently teaching courses in graphology at the Christie School of writing in Washington, Miss King is also teaching a course in contests.

Roped into judging a handwriting contest which pulled in 40,000 letters a day, she started the first contest-judging bureau, a form of enterprise which has since spread and prospered. She was contest editor of the World's Fair in 1940. Miss King has done much radio work, including a graphology show on WOR. In spite of what appears to be the limitation of a sightless medium on a visual science, her show drew 20 times as much mail as any other.

'Writing on a Bus'

FOR your peace of mind, Miss King says you may ask not to be identified on TV if you send in a sample curlique. And she reassures you (and me, too!) that people who think quickly often have poor handwriting. Cf. your doctor's prescription for an outstanding example.

Admitting that graphologists seldom leave samples of their handwriting around, she claims they always say, "I am writing this on a bus" when they communicate with each other.

I think you should be warned that typewritten material gives away secrets, too, in case you were planning to investigate that dodge.

JESSICA TANDY, currently reaping Broadway acting laurels for her work in Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire," will star in his "Portrait of a Madonna" in the first of an "Actors' Studio" series on ABC-TV tonight at 8:30.

The Sunday series, carried locally on WMAL-TV, will use material selected by John Steinbeck. Actors' Studio, a group of 50 artists now working on Broadway, and World Video, Inc., will handle the show.

The television adaptation of the Williams play was made by Actor Hume Cronyn, who recently adapted "Rope" for motion pictures. He is also Miss Tandy's husband.

Marc Connelly will be narrator for this first production.

WMAL-TV will be picking up another new show from ABC-TV tonight. This one, at 6:30 o'clock, is called "Stained Glass Windows," and will feature music and services of all religious denominations.

See STEIN, Page 4, Column 1.

Glimpse of Cupidity

Candid Mike Has a Tight Squeeze

By John Crosby

"CANDID MICROPHONE," a radio program of which I thoroughly disapprove and, impelled by morbid curiosity, listen to anyhow, advertises itself as a "candid glimpse of life." The microphone, which picks up the conversations of unsuspecting citizens in grocery stores, bars, ladies' rooms and elsewhere, is supposed to catch "people being themselves." I dispute this. Allan Funt, who runs the show, doesn't like to catch people being themselves nearly so well as he likes to push people into odd situations and record the results.

The other night, for example, he drove a garage man berserk by asking him to put scratches on a car, to dent the fender; in other words, to disrepair the car when the man's whole experience lay in the other direction. The garage man was willing though suspicious and, while his dialogue was characterized by a superb candor, his demeanor was hardly that of a person being himself.

As I remarked above, I disapprove of the intrusiveness of "Candid Microphone" much as I disapprove—fruitlessly, it appears—the intrusiveness of Dr. Gallup, Mr. Hooper, Dr. Kinsey and those other intruders into what I once considered my private life. Nevertheless, I must admit a reluctant admiration for a recent candid mike interview which provided as profound a glimpse into human cupidity as I've ever witnessed.

The Vanderbilt Rock

FUNT, a man of no inhibitions whatever, marched into the office of a diamond merchant identified simply as Felix and placed in front of him a 16½-carat diamond. The gem, we learned in advance, was the Vanderbilt diamond, a famous stone to those in the know apparently, though I'd never heard of the thing before. The contest began. Felix offered $25,000. Funt snorted with mirth, rather grim mirth.

"That's a joke," he observed. (The stone reputedly is worth $250,000.)

"What isn't a joke for this stone?" inquired Felix icily. Funt refused to be trapped into naming a price. "I've had four other offers," he said carefully. "That's the lowest one." Felix sparred for a bit, then reluctantly offered $30,000. Funt snorted again. So it went, a remorseless match poker game for very high stakes. Or so Felix thought. For the rest of us, outside the match, it was like bear baiting, the conclusion foredestined.

"Thirty-five thousand dollars," said Felix, coldly, warily.

This, Funt intimated, was an affront to his intelligence. "Look here, my friend," he began wearily.

"I'm not your friend," said Felix, spitting it out.

"Why can't we be friends?"

"In business there is no friendship," declared Felix, who seemed furiously angry. "I try to get the best of you. You try to get the best of me. What do you ask for this stone?"

The game ended a short time later with the introduction of the jewel's real owner and the revelation of the concealed microphone. "The stone," said Felix, bitter with disappointment, "is not for sale then?"

I felt sorry for him. I felt sorry for Shylock too.

AIR FORCE DAY was celebrated last week with sentimental ceremony on NBC in a special drama called "Slim and the Colonel." Slim, to sum this up as briefly as possible, was a major who flew a B-29 in the Pacific, got out of the Army as rapidly as possible after it was over and jeered at all attempts by beetle-browed but kindly old Colonel Williams to get him to reenlist. Then, three years later, he came upon old Big Bellied Bertha, his old B-29, sitting in a field with hundreds of other derelict B-29s. Right before his horrified eyes, a huge crane began to batter Bertha apart.

"That's my ship," he shouted hysterically. "That's my baby! Aw no! Ah no! Don't do that!"

"It hurt him," said James Stewart, the narrator, "way down deep inside."

It hurt him to such extent he instantly signed up again into the Air Force, which hopes that his example will lure other former flyers back into the fold too. I don't know, though. It may just drive the boys into hysterical laughter instead.

FOR years the deeper thinkers in radio have tried to dream up a quiz show—you can't go wrong on a quiz show—with movie stars as experts. (You can't go wrong on movie stars either. It was a natural whichever way you looked at it. The only trouble was that movie stars don't know very much about anything except movies.

You couldn't, for example, ask some glamour babe who was President when Grover Cleveland was in the White House. Like as not she'd blurt out Warren G. Harding and the American way of life would sway dangerously on its pedestal. You can make a chump out of a Senator but not out of a movie star.

This dilemma was resolved this summer with a program called "Let's Talk Hollywood," which filled in for Jack Benny (WRC-NBC, 7 p.m., Sundays) and it's high time I got around to it because it may go off the air soon.

In "Let's Talk Hollywood," a panel of Hollywood's bright names are quizzed about their one specialty and that, I'm forced to admit, they know inside out. I'm indebted to these experts for learning that the line: "A horse! A horse! My kingdom for a horse!" came from the Warner Bros. production "Show of Shows." (John Barrymore declaimed a bit of "Richard III" in that 1929 movie.)

Most of the questions were a little closer to the present than that. What was Gregory Peck afraid of in "Spellbound"? What movie did such and such a tune came from? The younger set, who see more movies than I do, should feel right at home with most of the questions.

The experts the night I listened were Rosalind Russell, Jack Carson, Eddie Bracken and Erskine Johnson, with George Murphy as quizmaster. They mugged all over the place in a good-natured way, ad-libbed with considerable charm and were dead right on virtually all their answers.

If we must have quizzes, this is one of the more entertaining ones. In fact, it wouldn't be a bad idea to hang on to it right through the regular season.

Add Unlikely Undertakings

Hollywood (AP).—Joan Crawford says she is going to weave the cloth for her children's clothes. Well, for some of them, then.

"Up to now knitting has been my number one pastime," she said on the "Flamingo Road" set. "But weaving beats knitting for relaxation and from a practical point of view it will be rewarding, too."

There are those who will bet it won't be any cheaper, though.

Paris Opera's Ballet Links Three Centuries of Culture

By Paul Hume

ROYAL letters patent from Louis XIV, dated June 28, 1669, established the Royal Academy of Music and Dance. Known today as the National Academy of Music and Dance, the great house in Paris which we call the Opera has been a center of French culture for almost three hundred years.

From this venerable institution comes the Paris Opera Ballet, to dance in Constitution Hall on October 6 and 7. It is a long time and distance from Paris of the seventeenth century, but there are strong links from that time to this. When Constitution Hall is filled with ballet lovers you hear them talking about Danilova's form in a "pas seul" or the grace and vigor of Youskevitch in his "pas de deux." If you aren't careful, they will even go so far as to mention the number of "entrechats" executed by Frederic Franklin, compared to the number achieved by Leon Danielian.

The fact that the French were there first when it came to organizing the art of ballet dancing has given us the custom of referring to ballet technicalities in French terminology precisely as we speak of music largely in Italian terms, as "andante, presto," etc.

Thus in a day when ballet is more often remembered in the light of Russian companies and composers, it is interesting to recall the origins of the art. Under the patronage of the Sun King, ballet and its companion arts of music and singing, flourished in Paris and other cultural centers of that time.

Composers Influenced

COMPOSERS found it to their advantage, in seeking patrons, to write music for the dance as they did for instrumental and vocal performance. Lully (an Italian musician in French favor), Rameau, Gluck, Berlioz, Beethoven (in his "Creatures of Prometheus") and their successors have been influenced by the dance. Many, as in the case of Stravinsky, Tschaikowsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Ravel and in this country, Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein and others,

Kingsley and Saroyan Have New Plays Ready

of which this seems to be the season's favorite locale. The Spewacks' tunes will be by Cole Porter. Their second is "Perfect Pitch," to star Roland Young.

Clifford Odets, bitterly returned from Hollywood, has his first new play in years, "A Winter's Journey."

Sam Behrman's scintillating dialogue is set to Marcel Achard's Parisian success, "Speak to Me of Love." Not only has the Theater Guild lined up Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne for this one after Christmas, they're hoping to lure Ethel Barrymore back from Hollywood to make it the year's brightest stellar trio.

Garson Kanin, who directed his wife's (Ruth Gordon) Chicago fizzle, is back in New York to work on "The Smile of the World," which reportedly has Katharine Cornell considering.

Norman Krasna's "Time for Elizabeth," which he wrote with Groucho Marx, opens tomorrow night in New York with Otto Kruger and Katharine Alexander under the banner of the West Coast producers, Russell Lewis and Howard Young, increasingly active here in the East.

Looking for Titles

KINGSLEY and Saroyan seem like certain entries, too, though unsettled titles still label their completed scripts. Tennessee Williams, whose "A Streetcar Named Desire" packs both New York and Chicago theaters, while Helen Hayes stands them up in London for his "The Glass Menagerie," will be represented a week from Wednesday by "Summer and Smoke," which Margo Jones, who did it in Dallas last winter, is sponsoring.

Jean-Paul Sartre's "Red Gloves" is under the banner of another feminine producer, Jean Dalrymple, who has smartly lured Jed Harris to direct. During the summer Jean and Jed jaunted to Paris to discuss the American production with the author.

That, to be sure, is by no means the season in toto, but it's enough to tell you that though you'll not be seeing their labors here, the playwrights, who seemed so inactive last season, actually were nibbling their thoughts and hitting their typewriters in preparation for this.

Marx and Morley Take Big Chance This Week

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP).—Groucho Marx and Robert Morley, both celebrated actors in slightly different stage styles, are credited with coauthorship of two of this week's new plays.

Groucho is coauthor with Norman Krasna of "Time For Elizabeth," which opens Monday at the Fulton Theater.

Morley is coauthor with Noel Langley of "Edward, My Son," which has its premiere Wednesday at the Martin Beck.

"Time For Elizabeth" will have Otto Kruger featured, and his real life daughter, Miss Ottilie Kruger, will play his stage daughter, the week's best job of typecasting. Russell Lewis and Howard Young are the producers, Mabel Albertson is the director, George Jenkins is the set designer and Mary Grant fashioned the costumes. The cast also will include Katherine Alexander, Russell Hicks, Harlan Briggs and John Arthur.

Morley, celebrated on the London stage and here in America for his infrequent but effective movie performances, already has seen his plan become a hit in London, where it ran more than a year. It already has been turned into a Spencer Tracy movie, which will be released in about a year. It concerns a newspaper tycoon, his son and his mistress. Peggy Ashcroft and Ian Hunter also are in the cast. Peter Ashmore directed. Gilbert Miller and Henry Sherek are the producers.

Being Twins Pays Off

Hollywood (AP).—Being twins is already paying off for Leslie and Larrie Holt, just turned 2.

These blond tots are in a picture with the ominous title of "Act of Violence." Actually, only one is in the cast, and that's the point.

In California, laws governing the working hours of minors provide that Larrie (or Leslie) can be on the set only three hours at a time. So, being identical twins, they're alternated.

Saves a standin, too.

New Recital Series Starts Tuesday Night

A NEW institution in Washington, formed to advance the understanding of all art forms, has arranged an outstanding series of recitals for the coming year.

The Institution of Contemporary Arts, 1322 New York ave. nw., schedules piano recitals by Harry McClure, song programs by Mary Alyce Bennett, violin sonata programs, and evenings of chamber music for both small instrumental and vocal ensembles.

They highlight music from the centuries before the romantic movement set in, providing welcome relief from the music so often found on concert programs. Madrigals, vocal ballades, instrumental fantasies, and such composers as Orlando di Lasso, John Dowland, Heinrich Schutz, will add new sounds to our musical year. Modern music, the other chief concern of the institute in music, will be represented by David Diamond, John Edmunds, William Bergsma, and a dozen or more men whose work today may be standard repertoire tomorrow.

The series begins Tuesday evening with Harry McClure in a piano recital. The public is invited to these concerts.

Fred and Ginger Matching Steps Again for Movie

Hollywood, Sept. 25 (AP).—Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, who made nine of Hollywood's best-remembered musicals, are matching steps again for the first time in several years.

For "The Barkleys of Broadway" at MGM, Astaire has worked out a routine linking past and present. He and Ginger start out with a fast-tapping duet. Then they swing into a jivey boogie-woogie. "This is for the hepcats," Fred explained. "Most of them probably haven't seen us dance together before, so we want to give them something right up their alley."

Opening Nights

Three Musicals and a Fantasy Get Away

By Jack O'Brian

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP).—The fall theater season is thoroughly in swing already, with three musicals and a pretty foolish fantasy opening in the last few days.

"Small Wonder" is a smart, tuneful, exuberant revue in the best "Garrick Gaieties" tradition. "Magdalena" is a huge, lavish, tastefully designed, musically exciting and gloriously sung production which is nearer an opera in style than anything else; it also is a bore so far as its libretto is concerned.

"Heaven on Earth," a musical comedy produced by Monte Proser and Ned C. Litwack, is in an impossible strait, inasmuch as musical comedies should of necessity have music and comedy; "Heaven on Earth" has neither.

The last, "A Story for Strangers," certainly must have Author Marc Connelly in a fit of injured explanation to his students at Yale, where he is professor of the drama.

Taking "Small Wonder" first, it's a pleasant chore to report that a lot of young people, writing and acting, have turned some lively and modern material—satire and caricature—into one of the early season's joys. The music is generally good, with one or two items downright swell; expert actors in the persons of Tom Ewell, Alice Pearce, a particularly talented lady clown named Mary McCarty; one of the season's finds in Marilyn Day, a certainty for the golden blandishments of Hollywood; some of the best choreography to be seen about the stem in years, the work of Gower Champion, erstwhile of the Coast Guard; and brisk direction of Bert Shevelove, who also helped write lyrics under the nom de typewriter of "Billings Brown." Its music is by Baldwin Bergerson and Albert Solden; lyrics by Phyllis McGinley, a poetess of the tonier magazines; and sketches by Charles Spalding, Max Wilk, George Axelrod and Louis Laun.

IRRA PETINA
. . . in "Magdalena"

Beautiful But Dull

"MAGDALENA," which had its premiere a few evenings later at the Ziegfeld Theater, is something else again. It is big, lushly designed of South American jungle backgrounds, with masterful music by Heitor Villa-Lobos, South American composer of considerable serious note. His music is certainly not for "Annie Get Your Gun" fans, for it is operatic in style and size, complex and exciting, big music sung by valid operatic voices such as Irra Petina of the Metropolitan Opera, and lesser operatic folk who are better known on Broadway, such as John Raitt, star of "Carousel," and Miss Dorothy Sarnoff.

It has a libretto which drags badly, and it would be painful to imagine what would happen to it without the excellent serious music and voices.

Frederick Hazlitt Brennan and Homer Curran wrote the book and Robert Wright and George Forrest edited the Villa-Lobos music and added effective lyrics. Beautiful, musically exciting, tastefully prepared, but dull, to sum up.

"Heaven on Earth" is a tired little fantasy about a Central Park hansom cabman who wants to help everyone he knows. The story is clumsily written, the music is ordinary or worse, the lyrics banal and the direction ineffectual. Peter Lind Hayes of the smart saloons is starred, with such normally efficient underlings as Wynn Murray, Claude Stroud, David Burns, Irwin Corey, Dorothy Keller, Dorothy Jarnac, Steve Condos and a spate of others adrift in one of the worst musical comedies in years. Monte Proser and Ned C. Litwack, last I heard, were attempting to brazen it out and stick around. They didn't say why.

What Hit Marc?

The bottom, and I mean the bottom, of this list is a flat little fantasy by Marc Connelly, author of "Green Pastures," whose latest item I find almost impossible to reconcile with his past excellence.

Marc's latest is "A Story for Strangers," which opened at the Royale Theater. It's about a talking horse, and it's the talking horse story to end them all.

It should be interesting indeed to be around Yale University these days. Marc's professional explanations to those bright Yale drama students should be really something to hear. I'm sure they are better than the play.

Place 'Em as You Would an Infield

When Maxwell Anderson and Andrew Solt were writing "Joan of Arc," Sierra's forthcoming RKO Radio release starring Ingrid Bergman, they wired researchers at the Congressional Library for speedy information on the seating of dignitaries at a religious trial in the fifteenth century.

The return wire read: "Seating like baseball diamond. Chief judge at home plate. Inquisitor and lesser dignitaries at first, second, third. Joan in pitcher's box."

Bales to Guide Mozart Festival

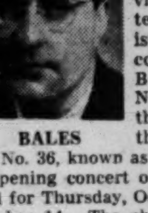
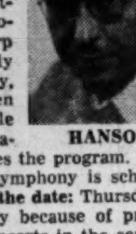
TONIGHT brings the opening of the Mozart Festival at the National Gallery.

Under the general direction of Richard Bales, musical director of the gallery, six programs of symphonic, chamber, piano and vocal music will be presented. Tonight's orchestral concert will be conducted by Bales, with Sylvia Meyer and Britten Johnson as soloists in the flute-harp concerto. The early B flat symphony, No. 24, will open the concert, while the brilliant C major, No. 36, known as the "Linz," closes the program.



BALES



HANSON

Opening concert of the National Symphony is scheduled for Thursday, October 14. Note the date: Thursday, October 14. The change is necessary because of prior booking of the hall, but all future concerts in the series will land on Wednesday as a Wednesday series properly should.

First Wednesday concert (on Thursday) will include one of the seven Sibelius symphonies, the Mendelssohn violin concerto, with Kreisler as soloist, a Purcell suite and a modern work. The contemporary score will be "probably by either Antheil or Riisager."

The season's guest conductors, Howard Hanson, Louis Potter, Georges Enesco and Walter Hendl, will be heard in rather unusual repertoire from advance reports. Potter will direct his Washington Choral Society and Etelka Freund in Beethoven's Choral Fantasy for piano, chorus and orchestra. Hanson will doubtless play some of his own music, as we hope Enesco will. Hendl is renowned for his services to today's American composers.

FRIDAY MORNING MUSIC CLUB sounds the call for student members. Auditions at 2 p. m. are set for Saturday, October 9, at the Church of the Holy City, 16th street at Corcoran. Artist students under 25 may apply. For details call Mrs. Anne Yago McGuffey.

Among those auditioning in Carnegie Hall on Friday, October 1, under the auspices of the Associated Concert Bureau, will be violinist Jesse Tryon of this city. Tryon is one of 16 artists selected from over 1400 auditioned during the past season.

Organ recitals Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings at 8 p. m. continue in the Washington Chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints at 16th and Columbia rd. Wade Stephens is the tireless organist whose repertoire sustains a high musical level.

—P. H.

The Washington Philatelist

All 1st-Day Cancellation Could Be Done in Capital

By William M. Stuart

DURING recent sales of commemorative stamps, complaints of the service were registered, mainly concerning first day covers. Many collectors report that numerous cancellations were not quite up to standard and also complained of covers having been unnecessarily delayed.

At times the Postoffice Department is rushed handling first day cancellation and handicapped, owing to difficulty in securing efficient clerical help for this important work. Collectors realize the actual time of cancellation cannot always be correct concerning the date of a first day stamp. Dates on first day covers should be considered mere notations.

It has been suggested that all first day cancellations be made in Washington. The Postoffice Department has equipment, clerical help and other facilities for excellent cancellation of covers, as well as speed in delivery. If special exercises are scheduled at a home postoffice on the day of issue of new stamps, it need not interfere with cancellation of covers. Undoubtedly the Washington idea would insure quick, clean and efficient service.

ON OCTOBER 1, air mail service will be inaugurated at Las Cruces, N. Mex., on Route A M-64. A special cachet will be used for Las Cruces. The postmaster at that office will give all covers the usual philatelic treatment. However, no provision will be made for point-to-point covers, but at the request of collectors covers receiving the cachet will be given directional service only to a terminal or junction point designated by the regional superintendent, Air Postal Transport, and served by the first flight in each direction for backstamping.

The 3-cent commemorative stamp in honor of the "Volunteer Firemen" will be issued at Dover, Del., October 4. The stamp will be printed in red, 50 million being the initial printing order. The dates 1648 and 1948 are in white Gothic.

Domestic air parcel post service will be inaugurated in the United States, its territories and possessions on September 1. Rates will be prescribed by zones, similar to surface parcel post, beginning at 55 cents for the first pound and 4 cents for each additional pound in zones 1 and 2, up to 80 cents for the first pound and 65 cents for each additional pound in zone 8.

The antituberculosis drive in the Philippines is taking place August 19 to September 19. Slogan cancelers to be impressed on mail posted at the Manila postoffice up to September 19 will be applied to philatelic mail posted with suitable postage. Collectors may send their covers to the Stamp and Philatelic Division, Bureau of Posts, Manila, for service provided each cover is affixed with a 4-centavo postage stamp in current use.

The sixteenth edition of first-day covers, compiled and edited by Leo August, has just been published by the Washington Press, 43 William st., Newark 2, N. J. It covers the field of United States first-day covers. All covers, with data as to variety and price, are recorded, and the editor is to be congratulated on his complete work, which is thorough and most interesting.

THE Capital Precancel Club will meet tomorrow evening at Weeks Stamp Shop, 1229 New York ave. nw. Maj. C. C. Fisher is the newly elected secretary. George Hawse, so long associated with this office and now retired for business reasons, is located at 1205 North Frederick St., Arlington, Va. Precancel information will be gladly given to all inquirers.

The Capital City Post Card Collectors Club met on Monday evening in the Thomas School, L and 12th sts. nw. Miss Virginia Brown, secretary, 215 ave. F, District Heights, Washington 19, invites all who are interested to become members of the club, which is growing at a rapid pace.

Germany has issued four semipostals commemorating the 700th anniversary of the Cologne Cathedral. The extra postage will be used to assist in the reconstruction of the cathedral. The values: 6 plus 4 pfennig brown; 12 plus 8 pfg., green; 24 plus 16 pfg., and 50 plus 50 pfg., blue.

An auction was held at the meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple. Ellery Denison was auctioneer and 75 lots of good material were disposed of. Plans are now in the making for a meeting of stamp collectors of the Boys Club and a special exhibit on Columbus Day. Next meeting, Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

Record Player

Miss Farrell And Wagner On Fine Set

WAGNER: Five Songs. Eileen Farrell, soprano, with Leopold Stokowski and his orchestra. Victor 1233. $4.75.

Wagner wrote twenty-two songs of which these five are not only the best known, but almost the only known examples in public performances. This album seems to be the first recording of the entire set in the form intended by the composer, i. e., soprano and orchestra.

Tiana Lemnitz, Lotte Lehmann, Maria Mueller, and other noted singers have recorded one or more of the songs but this is the first time that what would seem to be an obviously popular album has been released. Stokowski has a strong affinity for these songs, and made a set of three of them with Helen Traubel and the Philadelphia Orchestra some years ago. He phrases the music with subtle insight and produces accompaniments of sumptuous quality for the young artist.

Farrell has a naturally beautiful voice. This album is a far more satisfactory artistic achievement than the shabby set of Irish songs with which Columbia greeted her name on their list. She sings with great outer assurance, lovely tone, and appropriate dignity. Her approach sometimes lacks the breathless happiness and the profound grief of Lehmann's art in the same lyrics, but Farrell has years to mature, and her start is a fine thing. Someone insisted that she control her loud work in these records. The result is some of the best vocalising we have heard from her. It is a beautiful set, very well recorded.

New Carnegie Hall Twilight Series Set

The new Carnegie Hall "twilight" concert series has been assigned 15 dates for Sundays at 5:30 p. m., starting October 10 and ending next April 10. Vocalists and instrumentalists will be presented, some already established and others not so well known.

At the National Gallery

History Through the Eyes of Art

By Jane Watson Crane

REMBRANDT, the great Dutch artist, was at the height of his career in Amsterdam before New Amsterdam was settled. When he was producing the graphic work which has never been excelled before or since, the New World was still being discovered. Unless one bears in mind a few facts such as these, one is bound to be taken aback by a retrospective of American print making. The exhibition at the National Gallery, culled from its own collections and those of the Library of Congress and the Smithsonian, is revealing of the meager accomplishments of the early periods. It stresses a few aristocrats of the craft in the middle section and ends with a rarefied and partial survey of the vast field of contemporary American graphic art.

Artist-recorders came with the explorers and earliest settlers, to sketch the strange new world for the edification of Europeans. Lent by the Library of Congress is a copy of Hariot's "A Brief and True Report of the New Found Land of Virginia," with engravings by De Bry after the original drawings by John White, sent from England by Sir Walter Raleigh.

Paul Revere's "Boston Massacre," an engraving, is a treasure for antiquarians, but seems astonishingly limited when compared, for example, with Goya's famous Spanish massacre which was actually executed not many years later. Revere's red-coated tin soldiers are embarked on no less bloody an enterprise than Goya's military, but the impact of the print is hardly the same. As if in compensation, the "Boston Massacre" carries a legend which refers to the "barbarians grinning o'er their prey."

Considerable space is devoted to a handsome set of prints by Audubon, who never vaunted himself as an artist, but always was one.

Custom Illustrated

THE custom of making engravings after paintings is illustrated in "The Death of General Wolfe," by Benjamin West. Many of the artists of that time relied on the prints as additional money-makers, although some sold for better than others.

Currier and Ives lithographs, plentiful and cheap in their day, have since become collectors' items. Only a few are shown, and these obviously picked with care. There is a Durrie winter scene and two westerns by Arthur Tait, an English artist who had a way of depicting all western horses to look like thoroughbreds.

Two expatriates—Whistler and Mary Cassatt—are each given an entire wing, as is also the more robust George Bellows. Visitors will find many familiar examples of their work. Manhattan is ably represented by some early John Sloans, and two of the best prints by Reginald Marsh that we have ever seen. Even Marsh is restrained in these inclusions. It is not until one comes to the wall of Pop Harts that the show begins to take on a character of freshness. One loses it again on encountering an early etching by John Marin, from the period when he was emulating Whistler. In this middle section collectors' tastes are reflected and the genteel tradition prevails.

The final group represents the present trend toward abstraction. There are some exceedingly handsome color prints, including Werner Drewes' "Jealous Cock," a wood-cut.

Viewed as a whole, it seems hard to believe that the show covers so short a span. The utilitarian aspects of the first part are so completely unrelated to the last, where the interest lies in aesthetics and in execution.

Howard University has a new exhibit, "Expressionism in the Graphic Arts," which will run to October 14. Following will be a display of book jacket design to November 4.

Paris Ballet Troupe to Do Exciting Programs Here

have created some of their greatest and most characteristic work to accompany dancers.

On the record of the National Academy of Music and Dance alone, in consideration of its mighty influence upon French composition and the outer world of art, one could make a stirring case for State support of artistic institutions. (Congress, please note and wake up.)

In the six compositions to be seen here during the visit of the Paris company, Washington will have a chance to observe the effect of the dance upon music by composers with whom we are familiar in varying degree. Rameau, Bizet, Lalo, Dukas—these are names we see frequently on concert programs. Milhaud and Sauguet appear less often, but Milhaud's name is gradually assuming its rightful position in our general scheme.

Unfamiliar Programs

BECAUSE the ballets to be danced here are for the most part unfamiliar, it seems appropriate to speak briefly of each of them at this time. Wednesday evening brings La Peri: Music by Paul Dukas (he who wrote Sorcerer's Apprentice), choreography by Serge Lifar, most widely known name in the company. (Lifar is not dancing now, but is one of the company's ballet masters.) The dance is concerned with the unsuccessful search of King Iskendar for the lotus flower of immortality.

"Mirages," with music by Henri Sauguet, was also designed by Lifar. The plot of the dance refers to a dancer, pursued by his shadow. Finding the key to all pleasure on the abandoned couch of a Moon Queen, the dancer uses it to unlock a chamber wherein the daughters of night are kept prisoner. But as one vision after another materializes, it rapidly fades until the dancer realizes that all is a mirage.

In "Suite en blanc," danced to a score of Eduard Lalo, we have an abstract series of designs intended to illustrate the technical facility of the company. Again the choreography is by Lifar. The routine of the dance requires extreme virtuosity from the entire cast.

Rameau Thursday

THURSDAY evening brings Castor and Pollux, the classical ballet from Rameau's famous opera. Taken from the fourth act of the opera, the dance, planned by Albert Aveline, ballet master of the company, contrasts the happy and gloomy shadows of the mythological underworld.

"Salade," with a witty score from Milhaud, is a kind of divertissement, giving Lifar opportunity to present all kinds of surprises in a changing series of solo and ensemble dance.

The Crystal Palace, danced to Georges Bizet's C Major symphony, was devised by Balanchine, one of the great modern choreographers. Again it is a matter of pure ballet, without a plot upon which to lean.

As cultural ambassador, representative of a well-nigh ancient artistic heritage and, above all, as great entertainment, the Paris Opera Ballet will be welcome in Washington.

Autumn's Colors Due Next Month

By Orval Hopkins

IN A FREE-RUNNING trill of misspelled words and blooming verbiage, Shenandoah Valley, Inc., has come upon us with the happy news that "autumnal coloration in georgeous Shenandoah Valley is expected to burst forth about the middle of October this year." It's a tricky business, this tabbing the big change. Sort of like playing the—well, no, it's not that tricky. Shen Val, for instance, asked some forest service people they found walking around in green pants and buckskin jerkins—strong silent types, not given to words. "Mid-October, give or take a week," they said, covering practically all the exits. Meredith Leitch, ranger at Staunton, said, "Some mountain oaks are beginning to turn yellow, but it's almost impossible to guess just when the effect will be at its height." Maybe we should get up a pool, like they do with ships' runs and ball games. (Say, what is a jerkin, anyway?)

JOHN DUFF, JR., owner and operator of the Green Heron Hotel in North Miami Beach, has leased the Palm Beach Ambassador apartment hotel, which faces on the ocean and extends back to Lake Worth. It will open December 1 for the winter season . . . Pinehurst Country Club, Holly Inn and Manor Hotel, all in Pinehurst, N. C., are opening next Friday. The Carolina, the Berkshire and the Pine Crest will open about the middle of next month . . . NATO (National Association of Travel Officials) says 300 of its members are expected to attend the annual convention at the Robert Richter Hotel in Miami Beach in November.

THE AAA is scolding furiously—and with justification, it seems to me—about the changing of route numbers of important U. S. and State highways during peak travel seasons. An "unjustifiable practice causing the motoring public needless confusion and delay" is what the AAA calls it. "The traveling public," says Charles F. Pratt of the AAA, "is dependent upon maps produced by the AAA and other cartographers (for example, all oil companies) for accurate information regarding intrastate and transcontinental routes. Changes made in route numbers in midseason after millions of maps have been printed and released to the public results in a great deal of confusion . . . Highway officials should announce route changes in December, effective the first of the following April." Sounds almost irrefutable, AAA.

THE CHICAGO Railroad Fair closes next Sunday night and Frederick J. Ashley, coordinator of publicity, has sent me a beautifully coordinated handout stating the fair aspires to have played to 2½ million people by then . . . Four international automobile exhibits and fairs will run or begin in European capitals next month: Paris, October 7-17; London, October 1-9; London, October 27-November 6; Prague, October 23-31 . . . The National Highway Users Conference, which has headquarters here, is calling for removal of Federal taxes on new cars, trucks, buses, motorcycles, gas, oil, tires, tubes, parts and accessories. "The emergencies that created these taxes are over," protests NHUC through Arthur C. Butler, its director.

A POSSE of people with nothing very pressing to do have begun to ride horseback from San Diego to San Francisco, have reached the halfway point in the trek and, according to California Mission Trails Ass'n., Ltd., are "champing at the bit" to tackle the other half. Well, all I can say is that I champed at a bit once, and the thing champed back. It was a Spanish bit, with fiery Latin blood in it, and resented being champed at. Forewarned, you know, CMTA.

Hold Your Seats, Folks! Carnival's Here Again

By John Rosenburg

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—The voice of the barker is heard in the land. Roll the drums, professor! Louder!

Now, soft, sultry music for the beee-utiful dancing girls while the folks hear about the freaks and all the wonders—

Jo-Jo, the dog-faced boy; Tina, with hair so fair and eyes so soft—but with the skin of an elephant; Sharkey, the talking seal; Skeets Hubbard, the man with the iron eyelids!

It's all coming your way. No matter where you live—from Maine to Florida, New York to the Gold Coast—you'll get a chance at the super-duper thrill of a lifetime.

Or so promises diminutive, energetic George Hamid, who every year is responsible for the entertainment of millions of Americans and Canadians at carnivals and county and State fairs.

HAMID, HIGH in his office at Radio City, has the wheels of his big organization in motion to bring "Broadway to the farm."

"It's going to be the biggest year for fairs we've ever known," Hamid said. "Performers from abroad are arriving on every ship. It's the first time we've had an importation of entertainers since 1941."

Hamid said that this year it is probable that the most popular act will be the "death-defying feat of a human being shot from a cannon."

He explained that the thrillseekers change their tastes from year to year.

"It goes in cycles," he said. "A man being shot from a cannon was one of the first and most popular of the novelty acts. Then came the airplane act and the diving horse. And not long ago Lucky Teter and his driving daredevils was what the folks wanted to see."

NOW, HE SAID the cannon act is back in high favor. "Only this time," he explained, "it's a double shot. A man and a woman."

Hamid, the operator of Atlantic City's Steel Pier and Million Dollar Pier, claims he owns more freaks and novelty acts than any other man in the world.

"Anything that's unusual or crazy I buy," he explained. "I own Flicka, Smoky and Thunderhead, the famous movie horses. I bought them because I'm sure people will pay to see them in the flesh."

Hamid said that among his new acts will be the Six Eduardos of Denmark, who perform on the high trompoline; Linon of France, "a tragedian of mirth," who cavorts on a high wire; "Rosin and Williams, the juggling jewels," and A. Robbins, "the original banana man. The funniest conjurer in all the world."

"All for the folks in the country," he said. "Wait till they see them."

Fag Law Hits Tourists

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 25 (AP).—Out-of-State tourists may get a break at future road blocks set up by Pennsylvania authorities to nab contraband cigarettes.

The Justice Department was reported today to be looking into the question of whether motorists driving through the State can be exempted from the State law making it a misdemeanor to possess 200 or more cigarettes without Pennsylvania tax stamps.

"I don't believe the law was ever intended to hit tourists," commented one State official, who declined use of his name. "It was designed to keep Pennsylvanians from avoiding the State's 4-cent tax on each pack."

The question of leniency for out-of-State tourists came up following protests of travelers from Nevada, Massachusetts, North Carolina and other States against a tax trap held two days earlier this week at Marcus Hook.

Some 100 out-of-State motorists were stopped and more than 200 cartons of untaxed cigarettes were seized. Forty-one persons were fined about $1000 when hailed before justices of the peace.

Fishermen's Tales

Disgusted because a highly recommended spinner failed to produce after a long day of trolling on a northern Maine lake, a New York fisherman removed it and hurled it, bait and all, into the water. A large salmon dashed up from the depths, snatched the lure and dashed away with it hanging on his lip.

Angler Robert Darling of western New York State snapped a trout from a stream but, figuring it wasn't large enough and should be given a chance to grow up, he carefully returned it to the water.

A few seconds later he heard a splash and, looking down, saw the same trout flopping at his feet. The little fish just wouldn't take "no" for an answer, but he finally did.

New Lake Being Built in Rangeley Sector of Maine

Some time during 1950 another lake, 26 miles long and 3 miles wide, will be added to the Rangeley region's chain of waterways. Construction of this huge reservoir by the Central Maine Power Co. was started at Long Falls, on Dead River.

It is expected that the waters will flood Route 16 between Stratton and Dead River, and Route 149 between Eustis and Flagstaff. The lake will approach within a few feet of the famous Arnold Trail, at Trout and Cove Brooks, between Stratton and the Canadian border.

The entire village of Flagstaff will be flooded and the rise in the waters of Dead River will make Stratton a lakeside town. Flagstaff Pond will be raised about 20 feet.

Flagstaff Pond is now one of the region's best pickerel fishing sites, and it is thought that this specie will spread into waters where it has been hitherto unknown. However, it will not be possible for the pickerel to migrate into any of the present Rangeley Lakes, as there is a division of watersheds between the two areas. It is possible that pickerel will run into the south branch of Dead River to within five miles of Rangeley Village, though it is not believed that they will reach Saddleback Lake, the headwaters of the south branch.

A large part of the proposed lake will be comparatively shallow, with good pickerel cover. The new lake will make accessible by boat much of the excellent deer hunting in the vicinity of what is now Flagstaff.

'Info' Office Is Czechs' World Link

By Fred M. Hechinger

PRAGUE (Via Airmail).—The phone rang at the U. S. Information Services. "Can you tell me where the border of the United States zone of Germany begins?" a voice asked. The Czech girl at the desk answered: "I am sorry, but we cannot give such information."

She turned to me. "Every day a number of people ask that same question," she said. "Of course, we do not give political advice, and helping people to escape is certainly not one of our functions."

But while the information office has wisely refused to become involved in the political struggle, it has served an increasing educational need. To many Czechs this small office is one of the few remaining links with the outside world, the culture and the information of the West.

Press a Farce

EVER SINCE February the Czech press has become a mere farce. It makes little difference whether you buy the official Communist organ, Rude Pravo, or one of the other newspapers: their content is virtually the same. The radio is rigidly controlled, and most Czechs confine their listening to the Voice of America or the Czech services of the British Broadcasting Corp.

The complete lack of Czech interest in their own media of information became comically evident when an operator of the government-owned telegraph company recently called American United Press to find out whether President Benes was still alive. She had heard a number of rumors and did not trust her own Ministry of Information or the Czech press.

When black flags appeared on public buildings one day before the former President's death, people rushed to the newsstands to buy pictures of Dr. Benes. The morning papers had carried a black-framed picture of Zdanov and an announcement of the Russian marshal's death, but nobody seemed to have bothered looking at the "local press."

In view of these conditions it is not suprising that the number of customers at U. S. Information Services has approximately doubled since February. July is a holiday month, but a count showed 11,000 "customers." Ever since the New York Herald-Tribune has disappeared from Prague newsstands, the six copies at USIS have become the most precious reading matter in town.

Journals Avidly Read

EVEN THOUGH a current anti-American Communist publication devotes two of its illustrated pages to a pictorial attack on American magazines, USIS complains that limited funds make it impossible to supply enough American periodicals to fill the demand. From popular movie magazines to important medical journals the American publications are avidly read and awaited by thousands of people.

By one of those quaint international coincidences the Czech Information Bureau is almost opposite USIS, and there have been occasions when its staff have sneaked over for a look at the latest American news magazine or to copy the most recent United States new-look styles.

Even more interesting, however, was a request by the Ministry of Information for pictures of strikes, riots and unrest in the United States. "Fortunately we don't have much interest in dealing with so specialized a subject," an American spokesman smiled.

On the other hand, USIS immediately took note of an American complaint when the exhibition window showed the Republican and Democratic presidential candidates, but omitted the Progressive Party. An order was placed for Henry Wallace's picture, and even until it arrived a small newspaper clipping was put on display. The Czech public, however, seems to have a mind of its own when it comes to American politics, and ever since the beginning of the campaign a flood of "orders" for "Ike" Eisenhower's picture has inundated this office.

Intellectually Cut Off

THE BULK of the USIS business, however, is more serious. University students and research workers come in with their briefcases to stoop over the most recent technical, scientific and cultural publications. Both the dollar shortage and political censorship has cut them off intellectually from the Western world of knowledge.

The lending library, too, is doing increased business. Books on American literature, economics, psychology are in heavy demand. All medical publications are regarded as treasures worth their weight in gold, and many articles and chapters are translated and reprinted.

The only complaint is that there is not enough of a good and increasingly precious thing. Too few magazines are received to satisfy a growing hunger for knowledge and unbiased entertainment. The single copies of many American publications are jealously guarded; but they have a way of "disappearing" nevertheless. Where the printed word is no longer free, the book and the newspaper become valuable contraband.

The American fiction shelves here are almost empty and people literally stand in line for the latest American arrival. It is difficult for the American Congressman to weigh the value of "culture" when he haggles over an appropriation; but he is ill-advised if he underestimates the value of the American intellectual contribution in the battle of ideas.

That the Czech government, on the other hand, "recognizes" the value of information is borne out by the fact that the mail-out news bulletin, compiled daily in Czech and English by USIS, often fails to be delivered by the postoffice.

Quick Turn

PERHAPS even more interesting, one Czech official of the Ministry of Information, who at his own request used to receive weekly copies of American magazines by courtesy of USIS, informed that office shortly after the "February events" that he was no longer interested in such reading matter. In the meantime he has been duly promoted.

An information office seems like an insignificant thing, and Americans are tempted to overlook the importance of our continual cultural influence. But here—both at the British and the American information services—people call from outlying districts to pick up books or films or periodicals to take to their home communities, their clubs and their schools. They no longer order these materials by mail because it may be best not to be on record with such requests, but they continue to come in ever-growing numbers.

Outside the window a group of people look with interest and admiration at the pictures of American machinery, American sports and fashions. A Czech army corporal comes in to pick up a copy of the news bulletin. An elderly man asks for special permission to take a medical journal home overnight.

Where the "bridge between East and West" has been blasted, the bridge of minds remains open for traffic and hope.

Religion Classes Being Resumed This Month

CHICAGO, Sept. 25 (AP).—Weekday religious education classes for children are being resumed this month throughout most of the Nation, the International Council of Religious Education said today.

"Public school educators and church leaders have interpreted the Supreme Court decision of last March as forbidding only sectarian classes in public school buildings and other use of "public school machinery."

Ruling in a suit brought by Mrs. Vashti McCollum of Champaign, Ill., the Supreme Court held that religious education classes, as conducted at Champaign, were illegal.

Dr. Erwin L. Shaver, director of the council's weekday religious education, said schools will release pupils for classes in churches and other buildings or will dismiss school grades early for these classes. In a few communities classes are held after school hours.

In only four States—Vermont, Michigan, Kansas and Illinois—has unfavorable action toward weekday religious education being taken by State authorities, he added.

New Contest Set on Voice Of Democracy

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP).—The radio industry has a give-away program coming up in less than two months that not only will escape Federal censure but has the support of the Office of Education.

SHATTO

It's the second annual "Voice of Democracy" contest for high school students, a feature of National Radio Week, November 14-20, in observance of the broadcasting industry's twenty-eighth birthday.

College scholarships worth $500 each will be awarded to the four students writing and delivering the best five-minute broadcasts on the subject, "I Speak for Democracy."

The first contest was included almost as an afterthought in last year's National Radio Week observance and it practically stole the show. More than 20,000 high school students in 500 communities throughout the country entered the competition.

The winners—by coincidence, say the sponsors, who don't think it would be tactful to state that girls are smarter than boys—were four attractive young ladies: Janet Geister of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio; Laura Shatto of Hagerstown, Md.; Alice Wade Tyree of Lawton, Okla., and Rose Ellen Mudd of Missoula, Mont.

Local contests will be sponsored and directed by chapters of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, with the aid of the schools, local broadcasters and radio dealers. A recording of the winning broadcast in each community will be entered in a State elimination. The State winners will be judged by a national board.

It's a Local Phenomenon

Adults Flocking Back to School

By Homer Kempfer

HAVE you gone to school recently? You soon may be enrolled if you are an adult and follow the trend. More adults are going to school than ever before in peacetime.

Since the war, adult education has mushroomed as rapidly as higher education. Complete national data are not yet available but the upswing in enrollment is sharp.

California schools enrolled a million adults during the year just closed. This is a 50 per cent jump over the previous year.

Connecticut has had an 80 per cent increase since 1945.

New Jersey tripled its adult enrollment in three years. Two years ago there were 24 adult schools in the State; now there are 75.

New York reports that "twice as many people spent four times as many hours studying twice as many subjects in three times as many communities of the State as was the case two years ago." Last year all but three cities and 35 villages reported adult education programs.

Enrollment in Wisconsin has more than doubled since 1943-1944.

Eight States and Hawaii have either established or expanded financial assistance to local districts for the education of adults since the war. Twenty-one States now provide aid.

This growth reflects local needs and interests. No Federal aid is available except in the vocational fields—agriculture, home economics, trade and industrial subjects and distributive education.

Both spot checks and national surveys show that adults want to learn. Interest in liberal arts, contemporary problems, the social studies and the natural sciences is stronger than in the purely vocational subjects.

Three facts account for the upward trend:

1. The steadily rising educational level. The more education people have, the more they want.

2. The quickened tempo of living. More people travel and relocate, change occupations and face social and international problems than ever before. All this stimulates learning.

3. The completion of our educational structure. For over a century, we have been expanding our elementary, secondary and higher education system. Eventually we shall catch up and extend lifelong educational opportunity to all who wish to learn.

Arts School Opens Tomorrow

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

TWELVE years ago two teachers at the University of Michigan agreed that when they found the time and the right place they would open an integrated school of the arts.

Robert Richman, poet and critic as well as teacher, and Robert Green, psychologist, wanted the school also to be an art center with facilities for training youth by the somewhat forgotten method of apprenticeship.

Tomorrow they will open the doors of their Institute of Contemporary Arts at 1322 New York ave. nw.

Courses will be offered in writing and literature, music, composition and performance, painting, sculpture, pottery, design, graphics, dance and the theater.

Seasoned Faculty

THE faculty will consist of men and women who have achieved success in these fields. They will teach not in classrooms that the two Michigan teachers had found unsatisfactory but in workshops where students will learn "by making rather than reading about art."

Supplementing the workshops will be symposiums on contemporary arts in which significant artists will give lectures and present concerts for the benefit of students.

Assisting in this program will be the school's advisory board of artists—a list that reads like a who's who in the arts.

They are Martha Graham in dance; T. S. Haile in pottery; Roy Harris, music; Joan Miro, painting; Ernst Mundt, sculpture; James Prestini, design; Herbert Read, criticism; Allen Tate, poetry, and Frank Lloyd Wright, architecture.

Survey Program

THE symposiums, according to the prospectus of the school, are designed to give all the students a survey of the technics, principles, elements and experiences which are basic to all the arts.

A three-year program of workshops and lectures will lead to a certificate.

Green and Richman, who see their institution as more than a school, also will present concerts and exhibitions open to the public by subscription "to bring the best in contemporary music, poetry, drama, dance, pottery, painting, sculpture, design, films and criticism to the Nation's Capital."

The exhibition gallery will open formally October 10 with a showing of sculpture by Naum Gabo. Architecture plans and models by Miss van der Rohe will be shown beginning November 29.

Pulitzer Prize Winner Robert Lowell will be one of eleven poets to read from their own works.

To Show Old Films

TWENTY films, starting with D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance" on October 8, and including Erich von Stroheim's "Greed" and "Unholy Three" with Lon Chaney, will be shown throughout the year. Five plays also will be presented in association with Productions Incorporated.

Washington was chosen for the art center, Green said, because it was near New York and could draw on the talent there without being swallowed up in the anonymity of that city. The cosmopolitan nature of Washington with its embassies also led the two teachers here.

Strayer to Offer New Sales Course

E. G. Purvis, director of Strayer College, says "something new in salesmanship" has come to Washington. It is the Elmer Wheeler course in tested salesmanship.

Strayer College will introduce Wheeler sales training to Washington at an explanation-demonstration sales rally to be held at the National Press Club Auditorium on Tuesday at 8 p.m. Evening classes open to veterans and non-veterans are scheduled to begin October 11 to 15.

Elmer Wheeler is scheduled for a personal appearance in Washington on November 17, and will address a meeting of 1600 sales managers and salesmen under the sponsorship of the Sales Executive Club of Washington, the Junior Board of Commerce, and the Elmer Wheeler Sales Training School, an affiliate of Strayer College.

Wittenberg Offers 'Problems Courses'

Springfield, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Wittenberg College is offering "problems courses" in 10 departments this year to give upperclassmen with averages of B or better an opportunity to do individual research on current conditions of special interest in their major fields. Problems, which must promise training in investigation and analysis, are selected with the advice of the teachers.

Departments offering such courses are biology, business administration, education, fine arts, history, home economics, political science, psychology, public speaking and religion.

Industry Medicine Course Scheduled

A graduate course in industrial medicine has been presented for the first time at New York University as two different units of the school combined for the special teaching program. The Institute of Industrial Medicine, a unit of the New York University-Bellevue Medical Center, and the school's college of engineering have joined to present a one-year course on industrial health.

The course will be divided into eight to nine months of intramural study, and three to four months of in-plant experience.

The new course will be taught to graduate physicians and engineers; school officials announced that catalogs outlining the plans are now being mailed to leading institutions and industrial hygiene authorities throughout tht country.

Short Story Courses

Lewis Lofton Moneyway, director of the Moneyway Studios of Short Story Writing, 912 19th st. nw., announces that his first semester of the new school year will open on October 1. Moneyway, who has just returned from an annual writers' conference at Bread Loaf, Vt., emphasizes the fact that his courses stress the story that "brings in the editor's checks," not the "academic" story.

Dr. A. J. Klausner Gets Hebrew Union Post

New Contract Laws Go Into Effect on October 1

By Marian H. Barre

COME October 1, the habits of literally millions of people will be affected by the new International Code of Contract Bridge Laws becoming official on that date . . . Drawn up by committees representing the United States, Great Britain, and Europe, the code replaces the present American laws, which were used in this country during the war years.

Directors of two local duplicate games on Friday thus find themselves pioneer interpreters of the new code. These directors are Mrs. D. E. Stephan, manager of Euclid Studios, and Lieut. Col. H. A. Walker of Arlington Farms Club. At the latter rendezvous final round of the club pair championship will be played tonight, winners obtaining permanent possession of the Marian Barre trophy.

The Washington Bridge League's Women's Auxiliary staged its annual benefit for Children's Hospital yesterday at 2600 16th st., proclaiming a big success even before returns could be tabulated. A financial statement will be issued soon. The duplicate score was not completed in time for this column, as finals were still in play late last night.

Team-of-four play in the Federal Bridge League gives way Monday when the monthly master point pair match is scheduled to begin at 7:45 at 2600-16th st. Guests may participate on this occasion; those who want to join the league can secure information about the new rules governing eligibility, the board of governors having recently voted to cancel some restrictions.

A "FIFTH Wednesday" in September provides opportunity for both pair and team sections in the Washington Bridge League meeting at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Hotel Roosevelt . . . Officials of that organization are preparing for the annual tourney under its auspices for the championships of the District of Columbia, October 14 to 17.

Annual two-session mixed pair bridge championship of the Capital City Chess Club begins on September 28, ending on October 5. Registrations should be made immediately, as only 30 couples can be accommodated, and these are limited to members and guest-card holders. Two series contests wind up on the 30th.

The Agriculture Bridge Club announces its monthly master point matinee on Saturday, October 2, beginning at 1 p. m. in Euclid Studios. This club meets each Tuesday evening.

For absolutely topnotch competition, attend the Philadelphia Whist Association tourney at Hotel John Bartram on October 1 and 2. Charles H. # Baseball Bows Out...

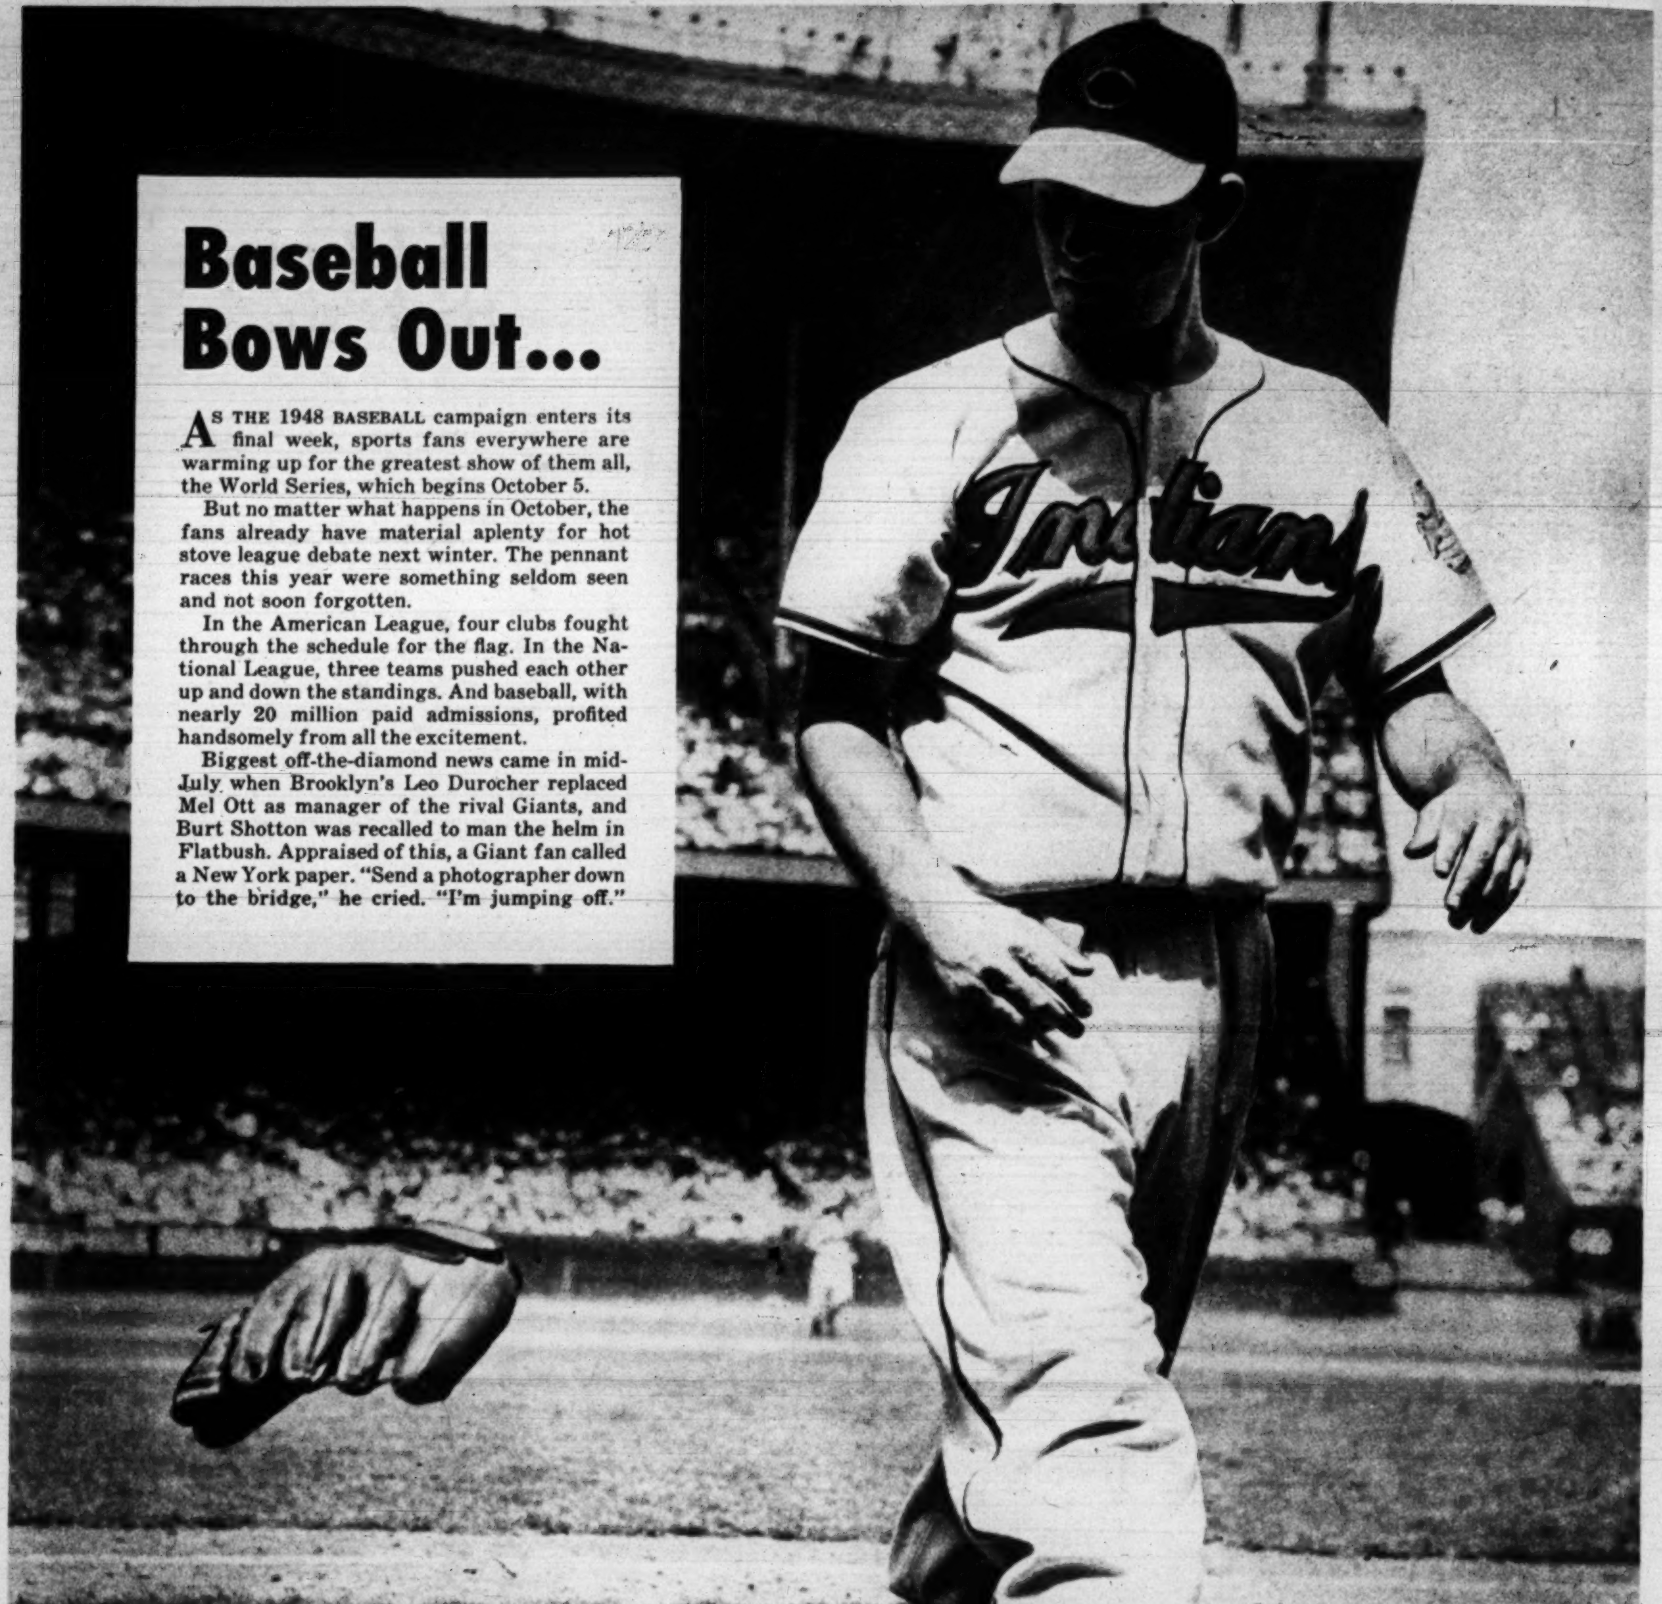
AS THE 1948 BASEBALL campaign enters its final week, sports fans everywhere are warming up for the greatest show of them all, the World Series, which begins October 5.

But no matter what happens in October, the fans already have material aplenty for hot stove league debate next winter. The pennant races this year were something seldom seen and not soon forgotten.

In the American League, four clubs fought through the schedule for the flag. In the National League, three teams pushed each other up and down the standings. And baseball, with nearly 20 million paid admissions, profited handsomely from all the excitement.

Biggest off-the-diamond news came in mid-July when Brooklyn's Leo Durocher replaced Mel Ott as manager of the rival Giants, and Burt Shotton was recalled to man the helm in Flatbush. Appraised of this, a Giant fan called a New York paper. "Send a photographer down to the bridge," he cried. "I'm jumping off."



Season's most interesting picture: Pitcher Bob Lemon tosses away his glove after Cleveland's 47-inning shutout streak is snapped by Chicago.

Betty Smith

She shrinks from writing about our present-day world

EVER SINCE BETTY SMITH brought out "Tomorrow Will Be Better," her second best-selling novel about the scene of her childhood in a Brooklyn tenement district, critics have pondered whether "Tomorrow's" Margy Shannon or Francie Nolan—heroine of her earlier "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn"—more adequately typified life as the author knew it.

"Both are typical," explains Miss Smith, "although neither is an individual character I knew, but rather a composite of many." She readily admits, however, that her own family life much more closely resembled that of the "Tree's" Nolans than it did of her current novel's Shannons.

When, as a sensitive little girl, Betty Smith tearfully fled home to escape the taunts of neighborhood toughs and bigots, she always found her mother's comforting arms waiting. "Now, now," her mother would soothe, "as long as we have each other, we are safe against the world." In much the same fashion, Katie Nolan in the "Tree" comforted a distressed Francie. Both had the ability to pass by the sordid and to translate things into terms of beauty. Such qualities were foreign to the nagging Mrs. Shannon and the restless Margy.

Deliberately, Miss Smith sharply draws the contrast between the characters in the two books, although both have the same background. The Nolan family in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" is cohesive; the mother loving, warm and loyal. In "Tomorrow Will Be Better," the Shannons are quarrelsome, bickering, divided; the mother turned selfish by constant poverty.

Quite likely, Brooklyn has received its last treatment from the pen of Betty Smith. Next year she will start work on a new novel, this one with the Middle West as its locale.

In the early twenties when she was 17—she's now 43—Betty married a young law student from Michigan. She lived in the Midwest, particularly Michigan, until 1936 when she moved to Chapel Hill, N. C., which is her home today. For a refresher course, as she lightly terms it, Miss Smith next month will return to Ann Arbor, Grand Rapids and the other Midwest communities that will figure in her contemplated next book.

Frequently, Miss Smith is asked why she doesn't do contemporary writing. "It is enough to live in these times," she replies, "without trying to write about them. There is so much sadness and anguish—people are so cynical today." Perhaps, though, contemporary times have had an influence on Miss Smith's writing. There certainly is more sadness, anguish and cynicism in "Tomorrow" than in 1942's "Tree."

"If I had remained in Brooklyn, I might never have written either book. Being too close to a subject causes loss of perspective. Perhaps, 20 years from now, if I'm still writing (at this point, she paused to knock on wood), I most likely will be depicting these days."

Referring to the knock on the wooden desk, Miss Smith smiled. "It's an old bromide, but none the less true, 'You can get the girl out of Brooklyn, but you can't get Brooklyn out of the girl.' "

We're Becoming Healthier

Science's work with antibiotic drugs is increasing the life expectancy of America's people

BY FRANK DE BLOIS

DESPITE THE PHYSICAL and mental hazards incurred by living at a break-back pace in a hell-for-leather world, Americans are actually becoming healthier every day.

Diphtheria, influenza and scarlet fever—the child killers of 20 years ago—have been shackled; tuberculosis has been beaten back, and inroads have been made on meningitis, polio, venereal diseases and cancer. In addition, the average life span in the United States now stands at an all-time high of 67 years, an increase of nearly a full year over the average length of life in 1945.

This good state of man's health has been brought about largely as the result of the control of infectious disease through the discovery, development and use of new drugs like penicillin, streptomycin, aureomycin, aerosporin and a whole new line of sulfa drugs. The diseases these strange names are attacking include pneumonia, meningitis, tuberculosis, typhoid, polio, dysentery and the common cold.

Most prominent of these is famed pencillin, "the wonder drug," mass produced for the first time in World War II and available now, upon prescription, at your corner drug store.

The story of penicillin's discovery is one that can serve as a dramatic example of how the modern medical scientist works with drugs. It's a story of trial and error in which good luck and shrewd observation play parts of almost equal importance.

Like Pasteur and Curie before him—and like hundreds of contemporary scientific researchers—Dr. Alexander Fleming is a quiet laboratory man whose entire maturity has been spent working through a maze of medical enigmas. For every Fleming, whose discoveries thrill the world, there are a hundred men whose work the public eye will never see.

In 1928, while patiently probing into the mysteries of influenza, Dr. Fleming accidently discovered penicillin. He had left some culture exposed in the open air, and in a short time spots of mold appeared on the culture plates. He studied them under a microscope and found that a ring, free of bacteria, had formed around the mold. Something in the mold had killed the bacteria.

Life span of average American now stands at 67 years, an all-time high, reports U. S. Bureau of Vital Statistics.

Dr. Fleming then began a series of experiments with molds and spent years on the problem of isolating the drug itself. Finally, with the aid of Dr. Howard W. Florey, he succeeded.

In 1940, a report on penicillin was issued to the medical world. The drug had already advanced beyond the experimental stages and was being used on humans to treat a variety of infections. The results—as everyone knows—were astounding.

Every antibiotic—or mold-made drug—has its limitations, and penicillin, still the favorite of physicians because of its effect on infections, its amazing success in fighting pneumonia and its unusually mild reactive effects, is no exception. But newer antibiotics have taken up the weapons of war where penicillin was forced to lay them down.

Now four years old, the drug streptomycin is being turned out at the rate of one million grams a month. The chief merit of this drug is its effectiveness against rabbit fever, bubonic plague and meningitis.

Aureomycin is a brand new golden-yellow drug, related to streptomycin, but which promises to conquer diseases that streptomycin and penicillin do not touch. It's used to battle germs that cause eye infections, some virus diseases, Rocky Mountain fever and typhus. It's the newest of the mold-made drugs.

Dr. B. M. Duggar discovered aureomycin, new mold-drug.

Cholera in Egypt was fought with Dr. Harry Seneca's drug

Famed Sir Alexander Fleming was the discoverer of penicillin.

Columbia University's Dr. Murray Sanders, who aided in development of aureomycin, is now working on sulfa drugs.

Atom aids in war on disease

WHEN BABE RUTH DIED, public interest was aroused in teropterin, the newest drug to be used in cases of cancer. Six weeks after the Babe was given his teropterin injection, a tumor that had developed in his neck—which prevented him from sleeping or eating solid foods—had shriveled to nothing.

Teropterin, however, is a palliative and not a cure for cancer; and although Ruth remained in a stable condition for several months the drug was not able to save his life. In the final battle between the drug and cancer, cancer won.

Cancer fighters long ago reconciled themselves to a long war of attrition. They do not expect to find a miracle cure, but they do expect their present progress to continue. For the 180,000 U. S. men and women who will die this year of cancer, science has no panecea to offer, but science continues to move ahead.

Biggest gains in the fight on cancer have been made in the field of atomic energy. Irradiated cobalt, a virtually costless metal, and a by-product of the force that leveled Hiroshima, now promises to be as effective as radium in the treatment—and far easier to use.

The revolutionary nature of this development is best demonstrated by the fact that in the entire country there are only 26 ounces of radium. Hospitals using it for therapy pay from $20,000 to $40,000 a gram for it. By contrast, the Atomic Energy Commission's nuclear pile at Oak Ridge, Tenn., can produce unlimited quantities of radioactive cobalt at $33 a gram, a price that will make radiation therapy available to any hospital or clinic equipped to administer it.

Whether atomic energy is used or misused in the future, it is apparent that nuclear physics will become increasingly important in the practice of medicine. Right now more than 70 per cent of all shipments of radio-isotopes from the atomic pile at Oak Ridge are being used for investigations in medical therapy and in human and animal physiology. Throughout the land, experiments are now being conducted in the use of radioactive phosphorous in lukemia cases and radioactive gold in the treatment of malignant growths.

Last year, more than 700 Americans died of poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis). In its fight on this killer, science recently turned to the sulfa drugs. A recent antipolio sulfa discovery was made by Dr. Murray Sanders, of Columbia University, in co-operation with the Lederle Laboratories at Pearl River, N. Y. They first used it on mice, got good results, then tried it on monkeys, are now determining its effect on humans.

Cure For Cold Still Stumps Science

MOST SCORNED but most prevelent of the virus diseases is the common cold. Last year, seven out of every ten Americans sniffled their way through at least one cold, and the remedies they tried—aspirin, cathartics, nose drops, hot water bottles—did them little good. In these days of jet propulsion, television and nuclear energy, the cure for a cold still stumps American science.

Recently, Capt. John M. Brewster, of the U.S. Navy's Medical Corps, has been doing some remarkable work in treating head colds with pyribenzamine, a drug formerly used in treatment of hay fever, asthma and other allergies. Captain Brewster tried it in 100 common cold cases and found that ten per cent of the cases were completely relieved, and that in all other cases the life of the cold was shortened.

Pyribenzamine is no cure-all, but stacked beside penicillin, streptomycin and aureomycin in the arsenal of medicine, it's another weapon in science's fight for good health. THE END.

Wonder Boy

Jerard Jennings is a prodigy at four

Pint-sized virtuoso Jerard Jennings solos. Mother operates pedals with extension device.

"Fortissimo!" Jerard lights into a dramatic passage with arm upraised. Coast-to-coast tour is being mapped.

"Espressivo!" Lost in music, Jerard bows head. Only teacher is his mother, an ex-concert pianist, singer.

"Like it?" Ending number, boy grins gleefully at audience. He can play both classical and popular numbers.

"Thanks!" Mother and son share bows. Concerts at Yale Bowl, Boston Symphony Hall are planned for boy.

Child shows musical ability and knowledge of a genius

AT AN AGE WHEN MOST youngsters are playing with blocks, Jerard Jennings, of Norwalk, Conn., is playing the compositions of Chopin, naming the planetary systems or informing anybody who asks him that the capital of Honduras is Tegucigalpa—and spelling it correctly, to boot. Jerard, who is all of four, is a musical and mental wizard. He began talking at five months, learned the alphabet at the age of one and began playing classical selections on the piano when he was two. His intelligence is now rated as equal to that of a 14-year-old.

The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Jay J. Jennings, Jerard is equally at home in the fields of music, mathematics, history, geography and literature. The boy has absolute pitch, can instantly identify notes in the most complicated chords and plays the piano, organ, xylophone and drums with adult skill. He can rattle off the states of the Union, name the capitals of the world and recite Hamlet's Soliloquy with all the assurance of a seasoned Shakespearean actor.

Jerard's parents make every effort to keep his environment as normal as possible. He plays happily with other youngsters in the block, shares his toys—and fights back when he gets pushed around. To Jerard, learning new things is an exciting game, made all the more fascinating because he is gifted with a photographic memory and seldom forgets.

His parents problem is where and how to educate him. "I'd rather have him become a surgeon than a musician," says his father, "because I think he could do more for mankind." But his career, both parents agree, will be a matter for Jerard himself to decide.

Daredevil driver is Jerard at the wheel of his toy auto. Unspoiled by fame, he enjoys play like any normal child.

Birds get an assist from Jerard as he helps his dad, ex-newspaper man and now building contractor, put up house.

Gardening is among Jerard's hobbies. He's as proud of his harvest as he is of playing a Chopin Prelude. THE END.

NEW NIGHTWEAR:

Styled for Sleep

Gowns, pajamas are designed to match

THERE'S A SENTIMENTAL CHARM about this season's nightwear that should help make all dreams rosy Not since grandmother's day have nightgowns been as prim and ladylike, as quaintly bedecked with ribbons, ruffles and lace. Completely banished is the idea that sleep clothes are meant to be merely practical. Indeed, many of the new nightgowns are as beautiful in material and workmanship as the finest evening dress. And it is not at all unusual to find some of them ready to do double duty, too, as daytime blouses or intriguing evening frocks.

New York lingerie designer Dora Gottlieb discovered this fact when she introduced her line of "My Knees"—short nightgowns which come just to the knee but have all the elaborate workmanship of their full-length sisters. "My Knees" sales zoomed when the public discovered it could wear them under skirts as blouses, do away with the need of slips. "My Knees" also made a big hit with hospital patients who disliked the drab institution gowns.

Miss Gottlieb, whose favorite styles are pictured here on Barbizon models, makes a practise of designing slumber-time trios: full-length gowns, short gowns and pajamas in matching designs. Her lingerie, although moderately priced, has a handmade look. She uses materials generously (satin, crepe and challis in pastel shades are her pet choice) and heaps her slumbertime garments with imported laces and ribbons. Her theory: when you go to bed, you'll sleep better if you know that you look your prettiest!

Watch your Skin Grow Lovelier with your First Cake of Camay!

Charm can begin with a lovely skin! Charm and good looks, dates and romance! And did you know your skin can be softer, lovelier, with your very first cake of Camay? It can—if you'll give up careless cleansing—go on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet. Doctors tested regular, mild Camay care on scores of women—found most complexions grew softer and smoother with just one cake of Camay! Follow directions on the wrapper for a lovelier skin!

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

QUAINTLY VICTORIAN

Demure round yoke of eyelet lace and tucking, long sleeves with ruffled cuffs emphasize the Victorian charm of this challis gown. Half-belt of satin gathers in the front fullness. In pink, blue or yellow, it is priced under $8.

BOUDOIR ENCHANTMENT

Borrowed right from a little girl's dress, colorful smocking lends a gay air to this "shortie." With its square yoke, long sleeves, it may also be worn as a blouse, eliminates slip. In white, blue or pink crepe, about $8.

WAIST MINIMIZER

Directoire nightgown in luxurious, heavy satin flatters the waistline with clever use of ribbon-threaded, imported val lace. The tiny puff sleeves are lace-trimmed, too. In white, pink or blue, it is priced at less than $9.

EYELET CASCADE

There's a cascade of eyelet ruffling at the throat of this softly-feminine nightgown of pink or blue challis, another touch of eyelet at the wrists. Priced at about $8, the generous cut of the material makes it appear more costly.

LOTS OF LACE ON "BLOOMER GIRL" PAJAMAS

College girls especially like designer Dora Gottlieb's "Bloomer Girl" pajama outfit, which combines comfort with plenty of style. A matchmate for the short and long gowns pictured on the opposite page, it has the same imported, val lace-trimmed yoke and rounded collar, tiny crystal buttons down the front, lace ruffles at the ankle. Of multifilament crepe, it is priced at about $11, comes in blue or pink and like other garments shown here, will be available soon at department and specialty stores. THE END.

SAYS MRS. EDWARD F. WRIGHT, JR. OF HAVERTOWN, PA.

"Their names are Diane and Carol. If it weren't for them, perhaps I wouldn't be so fussy. But I want my children to get all the enjoyment and nourishment that they should from their spread for bread. During the shortage, we sampled many kinds and found out we definitely like Nucoa margarine best. Its good flavor never varies, which gives me confidence that its food value is dependable, too."

True! There's nothing haphazard about Nucoa's food value—it's as calculated as baby's first formula. And Nucoa is freshly made the year round, on order only. On bread and in cooking, Nucoa always tastes sweet and fresh.

PINEAPPLE PILAU

BY BETH MERRIMAN

SOME SPELL IT PILAU, while some prefer pilaff. But the meaning is the same—a dish made with rice, having its origin in the Near East. Usually it is a main dish, but sometimes a sweet version like the Pineapple Pilau, pictured above, is served as a dessert. The rice is cooked in pineapple juice and takes on all the sweetness and flavor of this tropical fruit as it cooks. Later, it is made rich with walnuts, raisins and cream, sweetened with brown sugar and delicately spiced with mace. The rest of the menu should be light. Serve a clear soup first. Follow with broiled liver and bacon, scalloped tomatoes, lima beans, then to top it off serve the delicious dessert, Pineapple Pilau.

PINEAPPLE PILAU

Measure ½ cup uncooked rice into bowl. Add enough boiling water to cover rice. Cover bowl; let stand 10 minutes; drain thoroughly, using a sieve. Melt 3 tablespoons butter or margarine in a deep saucepan; add rice; stir until each grain is coated with fat. Add contents of one #2 can (2¼ cups) pineapple juice; cover pan; cook over low heat 50 minutes or until pineapple juice is absorbed and rice is tender, with each grain separate. Combine ¼ cup brown sugar, ⅓ cup seedless raisins, ½ cup broken walnut meats, ⅛ teaspoon salt and few grains mace; add to rice. Chill. Whip ½ cup heavy cream; fold in. Top with Maraschino cherries if desired. Yield: 6 servings.

Welcome Wagon

Making folks feel at home is a million dollar industry

WITHIN THREE DAYS after arriving, if you move into any one of 700 communities in the United States, you will be visited by a folksy neighbor carrying a basket loaded with a sample bottle of milk, a loaf of bread, various household supplies, and a score of business cards from local stores. It is the "Welcome Wagon" rolling your way.

A wagon only in imagination, the Welcome Wagon idea is the profitable brain child of a promotion-minded Memphis newspaperman named Tom Briggs who noticed, as long ago as 1928, that the average newcomer to a town is more or less unorientated about the places where he can spend his money for food, clothing, and other essentials of living.

Recognizing a service when he saw it, Briggs signed up a number of Memphis business establishments, culled notes of new arrivals from newspapers and real estate offices, and started making his calls, charging a reasonable fee for his work. Since most of the businesses were willing to supply free samples, Briggs and his growing staff of operatives usually climbed up the newcomers' steps loaded down with enough free merchandise and bargain offers to orient a family for quite a while. He claims he took the name "Welcome Wagon" from the wagons California pioneers sent out to greet new settlers in the wilderness.

Today, the Welcome Wagon Service Company is a multimillion dollar enterprise with a main office in New York City and some 3,000 operatives all over the country. All of them are women, usually between 25 and 45. The main requirement is that they have some standing in their community. A busy operative can combine neighborliness and samples to yield as much as $400 per month.

Original Service Branched Out

WITH THE YEARS, the original idea has expanded to include Welcome Wagon Engaged Girl Calls for girls who get the ring, New Homemaker Calls for people with new houses, and Baby-Time Calls for the bassinet set. Wagoneers distribute everything from sample clothes hangers (from dry-cleaning shops) to white bibles (from undertakers). During the war, Wagoneers helped recruit WACs.

Above and right, typical Wagon hostess Mrs. Thomas E. Sunday welcomes newcomer Mrs. William C. Donelson to the neighborhood in Toledo, Ohio. The Wagon keeps on rolling along.

Official greeting to Donelsons is written by Mayor Michael V. DiSalle, handed to Toledo Welcome Wagon head, Margaret Towne.

Neighborhood hostess Mrs. Sunday calls on Mrs. Donelson. Newcomer basket includes bread, map, paper, lollipops, store cards.

Helpful as part of her job, Mrs. Sunday aids newcomer put up light fixture. Other chores: arranging for power, fuel, milk.

Wagoneer Sunday fills out information card on family while Mrs. Donelson feeds her baby. Data will be sent to Wagon clients.

Donelsons are taken in tow by Wagoneer to explore Toledo shopping center. Tour covers shops on Welcome Wagon list, free lunch at Lasalle's department store. THE END.

Which Twin has the Toni?

(see answer below)

One Permanent Cost $15...the TONI only $2

When school bells chime—it's Toni Time! And if you want to look your loveliest at school this fall, take a tip from Alberta Gubin, popular Toni Twin attending the University of California at Berkeley. She says, "From first period swim class through 'House' lights out, my Toni looks just the way I want it to . . . smooth and naturally curly." And you'll agree, the first time you use Toni. But before you do try Toni, you'll want to know:

Will my TONI wave be loose or tight?

With Toni, you can have just the amount of curl you want . . . from a wide, casual wave to a halo of soft ringlets. Just follow the simple directions for timing.

Is it easy to do?

If you can roll your hair up on curlers, you can give yourself a Toni. It's as easy as that! "I'm not very handy with my hands . . . yet it was easy to give myself a Toni," says Alberta, the Toni Twin.

Must I go through a "frizzy-stage"?

Not with Toni. Because the Toni Waving Lotion is so gentle it coaxes your hair into baby-soft waves and curls. Leaves your hair frizz-free and natural-looking even on the very first day.

How long will my TONI last?

Your Toni wave is guaranteed to last just as long as a $15 beauty shop permanent —or you get back every cent you paid. What's more, Toni Home Permanent has been awarded the Parents' Magazine Tested and Commended Seal. So use Toni with confidence!

How much will I save with TONI?

The Toni Kit with plastic curlers you can use again and again costs only $2. For your second Toni wave, all you need is the Toni Refill. It costs only $1 . . . yet there's no finer permanent at any price!

Which is the TONI Twin?

Alberta, the twin at the left, has the Toni. Her sister Jacqualine says, "It's easy to see why we'll both be Toni twins from now on!"

Parade's Guest Quiz

Conducted today by ARTHUR WEIDER, Ph.D.

Treatment in early years will influence baby's later life.

As PARENTS WELL KNOW, rearing a baby is a complicated matter. To explore the problems of parenthood, which he has done here in a novel, entertaining quiz, PARADE has called on Arthur Weider, Ph.D., New York consulting psychologist. How much do you know about raising your baby, according to Dr. Weider's standards? Eight to ten correct answers is excellent. Six right answers is considered average.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. All babies should be toilet trained by the first year?

2. Table manners should be taught when the child is able to use his utensils properly?

3. The proper management of a temper tantrum is to leave the child alone?

4. "Spare the rod and spoil the child?"

5. Good physical care in a comfortable home is all a child needs?

6. The first six years are crucial ones for future happiness?

7. Sex information should be given by the parents in the home?

8. "Children should be seen and not heard?"

9. Most children outgrow their bad habits?

10. Problem children are more often than not the result of problem parents?

THE ANSWERS:

1. False. It is not possible to establish a specific age for the development of toilet habits. Since the child's development, like the ability to sit erect alone (average 7-9 months) varies and since his capacity to understand also varies, parents usually make the mistake of training the child too early. Child guidance workers suggest that mothers take their cue from the child when it shows it is ready; after training is started, patience and understanding are necessary, and occasional "accidents" should be expected.

2. False. Don't worry about table manners! It is more important that the child learns to enjoy his mealtime and the feeding situation. While he can be forced to manipulate his utensils properly, this, coupled with his lack of understanding, will doubtless result in the development of a feeding problem.

3. True. Like adults, children releasing their anger and resentment should be left alone. It is wisest to allow them this expression. At all costs, avoid getting angry yourself and thereby aggravating the situation. Temper tantrums that persist and occur frequently are signs of more serious disturbance. Their causes should be thoroughly investigated.

4. False. While child specialists used to be divided in their opinions, they seem to be agreed today that parents should spare the rod. Spanking is at best a destructive measure and often allows the parent to "leave off steam," while not necessarily benefiting the child. In disciplining the child, attempts should be made to give him some understanding as to why this step is being taken.

5. False. Parents frequently make the mistake of providing for the physical and tangible needs only. As a matter of fact, good physical care is just one factor and does not insure the child's emotional security alone. Children must be loved and made to feel that they are wanted.

6. True. Psychological studies show that these early years lay a pattern of reactions which remain with each child. While personality can be changed, more or less, this modification takes place within the framework of early behavior. What the child is exposed to and the manner in which he learns to respond are bases for his future adjustment.

7. True. Keeping the child in the dark is both foolhardy and unfortunate. Much is to be gained by answering his questions about sex in a simple, straightforward, truthful manner without embarrassment.

8. False. Like adults, children should not be needlessly repressed. It is important for their intellectual and emotional development that they be given every opportunity to express themselves. They are entitled to notice, and for parents to disregard them may be as damaging as making them the center of attention.

9. False. Experts on child care tell us that bad habits, e.g., nail-biting, bed-wetting, lying, spitting, temper-tantrums, as well as fears and anxieties generally persist if neglected. Hence, rather than outgrowing such habits, the child incorporates these maladjustments into his personality. These faulty habits should be eliminated as early as possible through determination of the cause.

10. True. While this statement might appear to many to be a bit too harsh it is nevertheless true. Authorities on child behavior hasten to point out that the causes of most problems complicating a child's development are induced and aggravated by parental bungling. Since a youngster does not grow up in a vacuum, but is the product both of inherited and learned tendencies (especially the latter), parents can be blamed for the development of specific problems. Some experts have gone so far as to recommend not reformatories for delinquent children but "parentoria" for negligent parents. Problem children seldom come from happy homes.

GREATER THAN ROCKNE?

By Bob Deindorfer

In Rockne's shoes: Notre Dame's coach Frank Leahy, who learned football under the old master, is leading Irish fans to predict he will outrival Rockne in his palmiest days.

A pupil of the grid wizard threatens to surpass his teacher's Notre Dame record

When the beloved Knute Rockne crashed to his death in the flint hills of Kansas, every American who knew a punt from a bunt sorrowfully prophesied that football could never produce a greater coach. It seemed like a safe bet.

But now, 17 years after the great Scandinavian's death, both his record and his legend are dangerously threatened. The threat is Francis William Leahy, and like Rock, he arms the powerful Notre Dame teams. In 13 seasons of coaching, Rockne won three national titles, and his teams lost only 12 games. Leahy has performed the incredible feat of driving four of his Irish squads to so-called national championships. In the only other year that he directed gridiron activities at South Bend, he lost but two games.

The logical contender for Rockne's title, Leahy is a gloomy six-footer with soft blue eyes, brown hair, tremendous hands and the versatile voice of a stage actor. A quiet, studied exterior hides his furious intensity. Football has seldom known a coach with such an unholy passion for the fundamentals of blocking, tackling, kicking and passing. His motto: "Improve every day. If you don't, you will fall back. There is no standing still."

Like Rockne, the 40-year-old perfectionist is a functioning psychologist, and his halftime orations are already mushrooming into legends the shape of those wrapped around the old master's inspirational lectures. Near the finish of his first season at Notre Dame, in 1941, the Irish had rolled through an unbeaten season and were dressing for the final game, against Southern California.

Standing near the dressing room blackboard, after marking out some Southern California plays, he intoned: "I say to you gentlemen of Notre Dame, I say this to you—hit hard! I say to you—stay with them! I say to the backs—go, go hard! You're rougher! You're tougher!"

"If I Could Help Paul and the Boys"

Suddenly he stopped and turned, like a beaten man, to the team captain, Paul Lillis. "Paul," he began in a soft voice, "you said a nice word for me at the pep rally. Just a few simple words you said, Paul, but they touched this heart of mine. As I listened to your little talk, I said to myself, 'Oh, if I could help Paul and the boys!' "

His voice grew louder and stronger. "If I could help! If I could block with you! If I could run with you! If I could tackle with you! Oh, if I could do those things with

With star pupil, Johnny Lujack, Leahy flashed rare smile in 1946 as Irish romped over Iowa, 41 to 6. Rockne formation was shelved for faster "T" line-up. Result has been three championship teams.

Blackboard strategy, a Leahy strongpoint, is worked out with assistant Ed "Moose" Krause.

As emotional at home as on field, Leahy gets kiss from son Freddy, one of his five youngsters.

you, you'd know how much I appreciate you!" His voice broke, and he was suddenly old again. "But I can't. No, I can't help you. It's your game, to win or lose. Good luck, Paul," he whispered throatily.

With a roar, the Irish clattered out of the door, up the scarred wooden ramp and onto the field, where they beat Southern California for their first undefeated season since the glorious days of Knute Rockne.

Two years ago, when Notre Dame traveled east to play Army's colossal Blanchard and Davis combination, Leahy got his players into the proper military mood by saying curtly: "Gentlemen, Army is out there waiting for us!" It was all the Irish needed.

Such skillful player handling comes naturally to Leahy. Arriving from the prophetically named village of Winner, S. D., he played his own college football at Notre Dame, and he played it for Rockne. He was a small, dead-game tackle, but a knee injury forced him out of uniform and into the university hospital. As luck would have it, Rockne suffered a minor ailment at the same time, and was assigned a nearby room. Rock talked football. Leahy listened. Rockne predicted that his injured tackle would someday become one of the country's greatest coaches.

It didn't come easily. Leahy was the last man in his class to be hired for a coaching post. At Georgetown and Michigan State he served as line coach and then, with Jim Crowley, he moved to Fordham. There he collected such difficult names as Babartsky and Wojciechowicz and built them into the famous "Seven Blocks of Granite"—the bane of enemy teams and newspaper proofreaders.

In spite of producing such a colossal line, Leahy was still so obscure, nationally, that when he was named the new head coach at Boston College, one newspaper headline read, "Unknown Leahy Signed." In two years at Boston, however, he shook-off the anonymity, drove his teams into two post-season bowl games. Notre Dame immediately tapped him as the replacement for Elmer Layden.

T-Formation Shook Notre Dame Fans

IRISH FANS, MADE UP OF millions of "subway alumni" who have never been closer to South Bend than Pittsburgh or Omaha, were delighted with the first undefeated team since Rockne's day, but they shuddered as Leahy began to discard the traditional Rockne box formation in favor of a strange new T-formation.

"Rock would have liked these changes," Leahy claimed. "His system of football didn't stand still. It changed and developed each year." Leahy's daredevil brand of wide-open football that brought three consecutive national championships is proof enough that his new attack is a fantastic success.

His weakness, if any, is the eternal pessimism that has given him the name of "Crying Frank" in football circles. It seems part of him. One legend is that while Mrs. Leahy was shopping in a store with the five Leahy children, one of them began to sob. "Hush, darling," she murmured. "You're just like Father!" THE END.

The Best of October Films

BY KAY SULLIVAN

APARTMENT FOR PEGGY

As a G. I. college student and his wife, William Holden and Jeanne Crain live on $90 a month, convert an attic into an apartment, save an unhappy college professor from suicide. A good-natured comedy, keyed to the times. (20th-Cent. Fox).

OCTOBER THEATER-GOERS will be happy to find that the fall harvest of films is a vast improvement over summer offerings. Apparently the well-worn comment — "there's nothing wrong with the film industry that a good picture can't cure"—is beginning to make a serious impression on Hollywood's dollar-wise executives.

Chief among the reasons for this is the great change in the Hollywood production picture. Gone is the day when a vapid million-dollar extravaganza could be ground out, then revamped at the cost of another million or two before it was foisted on the public. Budgets are cut to the bone these days; the cost of production, like the price of steak, is sky-high. With tightened purse string and limited casts, producers are turning to strong plots, realistic settings, mature characterizations, to win the box-office trade.

An outstanding example of the move to escape triteness is a current Universal-International release, entitled "An Act of Murder." It's a story about euthanasia, well-told and deftly-acted by a splendid cast. It could have been handled in a sensational manner but instead has been done in straightforward fashion, is a poignant story, more than a little disturbing. Moviegoers hope there'll be many more like it.

CRY OF THE CITY

Victor Mature is a police lieutenant, Richard Conte, the criminal, in this story of a gangster's brief struggle to avoid justice. Mature is excellent as a serious police officer, although one suspects he would have done better as the killer. Excellent realism, particularly in home shots. (20th-Cent. Fox).

AN ACT OF MURDER

An adult and serious study of the problem of mercy killing, this well-performed film almost achieves a documentary style. Fredric March is the intolerant judge who softens when his own wife grows incurably ill. Florence Eldridge (Mrs. Fredric March in real life) is unforgettable in a difficult role. (U.-I.).

THE LOVES OF CARMEN

Carmen, that capricious creature of many moods and loves, has been a major figure in dramatic literature for over a century. But probably she has never been interpreted in so magentic a manner as she is by Rita Hayworth in this lavish, spectacular film. The beautiful and fiery Miss Hayworth is at her best as the brash, posturing, daredevil gypsy girl. Glenn Ford, as Don Jose, is less impressive, except in a duel scene when he briefly springs to life. Special praises are due to the breath-taking settings and the ear-tingling musical score that do so much to brighten a time-worn but satisfying plot. (Columbia).

RACHEL AND THE STRANGER

A warm, sincere story about frontier days, this movie should delight the whole family. Rachel (Loretta Young) is a bondwoman, bought by widower David Harvey (William Holden) to care for his son. It takes Robert Mitchum, in the role of a woodsman, to make David appreciate Rachel (R.K.O.).

KISS THE BLOOD OFF MY HANDS

The plot of this film is just about as grim as its title. Bill Saunders (Burt Lancaster) commits murder, is shielded by a pretty nurse (Joan Fontaine). Later, she kills a man in self-defense. Both are going to run away, but their love forces them to go straight. Gloomy theme but excellent acting. (U.-I.).

NIGHT HAS A THOUSAND EYES

A different kind of a thriller, this absorbing film centers around a one-time vaudeville wizard—Edward G. Robinson. His strange ability to foresee the future gets him involved with the police, Gail Russell and her fiance, John Lund. Don't miss it if you like chills plus thrills. (Paramount). THE END.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES
by GEORGE WUNDER
O'HARA'S LEVELING, MISTER. THE TWO MEN FORCED US TO LAND. THE FAST MILITARY PLANE WITHOUT MARKINGS YOU SIGHTED WAS WAITING. ITS TURRET GUNS COVERED US. THE MEN SMASHED OUR CONTROLS AND RADIO, THEN TRANSFERRED TO THE OTHER SHIP — DRAGGING THE CHINESE BOY WITH THEM!
MEANWHILE, THE UNIDENTIFIED PLANE HAS LANDED AT ANOTHER FIELD, SOME DISTANCE AWAY.
THIS FIELD IS CONTROLLED BY OUR SYMPATHIZERS, COMRADE. WE WAIT HERE FOR DARKNESS BEFORE MAKING THE FINAL LEG OF THE FLIGHT.
EXCELLENT! SINCE THAT TRANSPORT SIGHTED US, IT'S WELL TO BE CAUTIOUS.
VALENTINE, DO YOU SUPPOSE THEY'VE FOUND THE AIRLINER YET?
PROBABLY — BUT IT DOESN'T MATTER NOW. WE HAVE THE CHILD... IT'S ALWAYS A GREAT SATISFACTION TO CARRY OUT AS NEAT A COUP AS THIS.
WHERE IS THE CHILD, INCIDENTALLY?
HE WAS HERE A SECOND AGO... PERHAPS I'D BETTER LOOK...

REX MORGAN M.D.
THAT'S RIGHT, DR. MORGAN! ACCORDING TO THE KEYHOLE COLUMN, DR. LYNN PARKS HAS PRACTICALLY GOT THE MILLIONAIRE YACHTSMAN, SHELDON SPENCER, LASHED TO THE MAST!
DID YOU KNOW ABOUT THIS, BRECK?
I SUSPECTED IT!
THEY'VE BEEN SPENDING A LOT OF TIME TOGETHER!
WONDER IF SHE'LL QUIT HER JOB HERE?
SHE'LL HAVE TO GIVE UP MEDICINE TO FIND TIME TO SPEND ALL THAT DOUGH!
IT MAY BE JUST GOSSIP THAT LYNN IS GOING TO MARRY SPENCER! I WON'T BELIEVE IT UNTIL I HEAR IT FROM HER!
HELLO, REX! WHY THE FURROWED BROW?
I JUST READ SOMETHING IN THE PAPER THAT STUNS ME! IS IT TRUE OR FALSE, LYNN?
IT'S TRUE, REX! SHELL DID ASK ME TO MARRY HIM BUT I HAVEN'T ANSWERED HIM YET!
BRADLEY & EDGINGTON
YOU DON'T LOVE SPENCER! YOU'D NEVER BE HAPPY WITH HIM!
REX, MUST YOU LOVE SOMEONE TO MARRY? I'M SURE SHELL WOULD DO EVERYTHING HE COULD TO MAKE ME HAPPY!
YES, EVERYTHING HIS MONEY COULD DO! BUT MARRIAGE WOULD NEVER MAKE A HUSBAND OF THAT PLAYBOY!
I'M SURE YOU'RE WRONG ABOUT SHELL, REX!
MEANWHILE
MR. SPENCER, THAT LAVERE DAME JUST CAME ABOARD! SHE INSISTS ON SEEING YOU!
TELL HER I'M NOT HERE... TELL HER I FELL OVERBOARD! BUT GET RID OF HER!
OH, NO YOU DON'T GET RID OF ME! YOU DOUBLE-TIMING DIPSOMANIAC!
WHY, FLUFF! ...I-I DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS YOU!
NOT MUCH YOU DIDN'T! DON'T TRY TO SUGAR-TALK ME! JUST START LEVELING, BROTHER, AND EXPLAIN THIS LITTLE ITEM IN THE KEYHOLE COLUMN!
